TERMINABLE PERMIT BILL PASSED, SENT TO GOVERNOR

Senate Approves Measure Submitted by House by 18-to-5 Vote — Twelve Amendments Defeated.

O'K'S ENABLING ACT FOR RAPID TRANSIT

Two Changes Limiting Law to St. Louis Make Necessary Sending Proposal Back to Lower Chamber.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 18.—The Senate tonight passed the House terminable permit bill for St. Louis which would make possible perpetual franchises for the street railway company and other common carriers in St. Louis. The Senate also passed the House rapid transit enabling act for St. Louis, with two amendments.

The terminable permit bill was passed without amendments by a vote of 18 to 5, and now goes to the Governor for approval or veto. The rapid transit enabling act was passed with 26 ayes and no negative votes, but must be returned to the House for concurrence in two Senate amendments definitely limiting provisions of the act to St. Louis.

The Senate previously had passed its own terminable permit bill identical in its provisions with the House bill and it had been planned to have the Senate bill passed in the House.

12 Amendments Defeated.

Growing opposition to the terminable permit measure in the Senate, coupled with the approach of adjournment of the Legislature, caused sponsors of the measure to change the plan and call the House bill up at the night session of the Senate. Twelve proposed amendments recommended by the Senate committee were voted down at the request of Senator Kinney of St. Louis, who was handling the bill, and it was put through by a bare constitutional majority of 18 votes.

When the first roll call on the terminable permit bill was completed and the absentees had been polled, the bill lacked two votes for passage. Belated ayes by Senator Hoffman of Maryville and Searcy of Eminence, upon interrogations by Senator Kinney and President Pro Tem Casey of Kansas City, who was presiding, as to how they desired to vote, gave the necessary 18 votes to pass the bill.

Virtual Perpetual Franchises.

The terminable permit measure, if signed by the Governor, would enable the St. Louis Public Service Company and other common carriers in St. Louis to surrender their existing limited term franchises subject to the consent or city officials who are not definitely designated in the bill, and obtain perpetuals from the State Public Service Commission that in effect would be perpetual franchises.

The bill was tied in with the rapid transit program of legislation for St. Louis, although not necessary to development of that system, and has been put through the Legislature largely upon the assertion that it was an integral part of the transit program.

The 12 proposed amendments to the permit bill, which were voted down were recommended by the State Municipal Corporation Committee of which Senator Kinney is chairman, at the request of the Transportation Survey Commission, to correct errors and phraseology in the bill. Kinney said the amendments were not necessary and urged they be rejected. Adoption of the amendments would have required sending the bill back to the House for concurrence.

Terms of Enabling Act.

The rapid transit enabling act would authorize the city to buy or construct and to own and operate a rapid transit system, including bridges, elevated structures, surface lines or other means of transportation. It authorizes payment of part of the cost of the system by special assessments against benefited property. The balance would be paid from bonds.

Under this bill the city could operate such a system, once developed, or could lease it to an operating company.

The rapid transit enabling act encountered no opposition when it was called up tonight by Senator

ECKENER TO RESUME TRIP TO U. S. AFTER REPAIRING ZEPPELIN IN GERMANY

Some of Passengers Say They Will Wait to Travel on Ship—Crowds View Air Liner in Hangar.

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS,
Famous explorer, among the passengers on the Graf Zeppelin, whose dispatches will appear in the Post-Dispatch in St. Louis.

TOULON, France, May 18.—Two new motors for the Graf Zeppelin have been shipped from Friedrichshafen and are expected here in two or three days. It will take one day to install them in the places of the disabled ones, and then with three good engines we will return to Friedrichshafen.

At Friedrichshafen two other motors will be immediately installed and we will make preparations to continue our interrupted flight to Lakehurst. All the new engines will be of the same type as the original ones.

Commander Hugo Eckener departed for Friedrichshafen this afternoon but will return in two or three days in time to guide the airship back to Germany.

Dr. Eckener has invited me to remain here until the new motors are installed, return with him to Germany, and then make the trip to the United States.

French to Supply Hydrogen.

The French naval authorities are supplying 1000 cubic meters of hydrogen which will be required to float the Graf Zeppelin and will also provide whatever gasoline is necessary.

The passengers and crew of the Zeppelin are all well and cheerful—except the gorilla. The poor gorilla, destined for the Chicago Zoo, did not sleep at all last night. She seemed very nervous this morning when led outside the hangars to be photographed.

The commandant of the Cuers airdrome has arranged splendid accomodations for the officers and crew of the Zeppelin, who are keeping house aboard ship.

Dr. Eckener has expressed his pleasure with the arrangements and at the courtesy extended to himself, his men and his crippled airship.

The passengers have all been remarkably cool and cheerful under the great strain of the last two days, and nearly all of them have declined to accept a refund of their passage money, which was offered by Dr. Eckener. Many of them have expressed their determination to wait until the repairs are made and continue the trip to Lakehurst.

Maurice Nathan and George Crouse of New York, flew to Paris today to catch the first liner for home.

Mrs. Pierce, our woman passenger, again has been having some difficulty making up her mind just what to do. She finally decided, however, to take an airplane to Paris to await the arrival of her husband from New York. Pierce advised her by cable that he was sailing on the Aquitania.

"My husband and my parents are coming over on the Aquitania," said Mrs. Pierce today, "and I shall wait for them in Paris. They were terribly worried."

U. S. Officer Gave Suggestions.

The admiration of the whole world must be aroused at the wonderful handling of the crippled monster in the air and on the ground. The successful maneuvering of the disabled ship must also induce the whole world to believe that airship travel, while yet uncertain, is safe, if only ground organization is provided. It certainly has been a great experience, especially for the observers on board. Particularly was the experience of value to Commander Vincent A. Clarke, the official American observer on the trip.

With his notebook always ready Commander Clarke made record of every technicality and condition. He discussed with the officers of the Zeppelin the advisability of every ticklish move agreeing with them on their conduct of the ship. He offered at times from his vast experience helpful suggestions.

He knew, the German officers knew, and we all knew that unless a landing crew was available the ship was doomed, though it was believed that the passengers would escape without harm.

Thinking back on those hours while we were maneuvering with one engine in a following wind crabbing and yawing over hills and dales with darkness approaching, I recall that there was no feeling of danger to life and no uncertainty by the passengers as to their welfare.

A supper of sandwiches and coffee was served while all this was going on, and as the crew calmly prepared for the emergency landing. It was exactly 7:32 when the order was given to the [illegible] and with the aid of willing but untrained soldiers and sailors, directed by airmen, one hour later we

BROOKS WOULD BAR PARKING IN ALLEYS AT ALL HOURS

Director of Streets Says They Hinder Firemen and Invite Immorality.

Director of Streets Brooks announced yesterday that he would have introduced before the Board of Aldermen an ordinance to prohibit parking of automobiles in all alleys at all hours.

City firemen have complained that parked cars in alleys often hinder their efforts to extinguish fires. Many stolen cars are abandoned in alleys, the thieves attracting less notice there than on the streets. A third reason for the bill, Brooks said, is that parked cars in alleys invite immorality.

Parking in alleys in the downtown congested district is now prohibited between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. A bill was introduced Friday to extend this no-parking area from Fourth street to the levee between Washington avenue and Walnut street.

Brooks said he and Chief of Police Gerk had agreed as to the necessity of keeping alleys clear of parked autos.

OFFERS BROWN U. STUDENTS $5 A DAY TO BE DRY SPIES

Deputy Administrator's Proposal Received Without Enthusiasm by School's President.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. May 18.—By becoming an "under-cover" agent and getting evidence of ownership of prohibited alcoholic beverages, any student of Brown University accepting the offer will be paid $5 a day, Deputy Prohibition Administrator John W. Morrill in this city announced today.

President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown, when informed of the offer, said: "I should prefer to see the students here engage in other and more uplifting callings in obtaining money for their college expenses."

FROG JUMPING CONTEST ON

California Crowds Gather at Angels Camp for Event.

By the Associated Press.

ANGELS CAMP, Cal., May 18.—Calaveras County's famous annual frog jumping contest opened here today. The event commemorates an era of early California of which Mark Twain was chief historian.

Crowds from miles around gathered to witness the numerous entries. Results probably will be announced tomorrow or Monday. The attire of many of the spectators was reminiscent of earlier days but the frogs hopped over a different course. They once contested on a mahogany saloon bar, but today they hopped in a prepared arena. The bars are no more and the places that used to dispense hard liquor were selling soda water and lemonade.

The President expressed best wishes for continued good health and happiness of the King and for the welfare and prosperity of the Bulgarian people. King Boris replied in equally cordial terms.

LOAN BILL PASSES SENATE; INTEREST FIXED AT 30 PCT.

Ballew Measure Adopted 20-4 at Night Session After Dearmont Agrees to Compromise.

ONE-MAN FIGHT BRINGS VICTORY

Young Legislator Defeats Casey - Cave - McCawley Combine After Adverse Committee Report.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 18.—The House small loan bill was passed by the Senate tonight after being amended to legalize an interest rate of 30 per cent on loans not exceeding $300, as a substitute for the 24 per cent rate in the Ballew small loan bill. The vote was 20 to 4.

The roll call on the bill was as follows: Aye—Bates, Brownlee, Cave, Curfman, Davis, Dearmont, Donnelly, Gordon, Gunn, Haymes, Kinney, Luther, Morgan, Painter, Rehkop, Snodgrass, Wammack, Whitecotton, Williard and Williams. Nay—Bringes, Casey, Hildreth and McCawley.

If the House agrees to the Senate amendment, the rate of 42 per cent, permitted under the present law enacted two years ago will be reduced 12 per cent and provisions regulating the small loan business will be put into effect. Salary buying, which was excluded from the present law, will be brought under it, detailed reports to the State Finance Commissioner by the loan companies will be required and misleading advertising will be prohibited.

The Senate had the bill under consideration all day. Senator Dearmont of Cape Girardeau led the fight for the 24 per cent rate of the Ballew bill, but finally abandoned that position and agreed to 30 per cent, after it appeared probable that his opponents would insist upon a higher rate.

Two Amendments Fail.

Senator Haymes, after the 30 per cent rate was agreed upon, unsuccessfully attempted to amend the measure to provide for a graduated rate. The amendment would have established a 2½ per cent rate for loans under $50; 2 per cent, from $50 to $100; 1½ per cent, from $100 to $200, and 1 per cent from $200 to $300.

Senator McCawley then offered an amendment to place supervision under the Secretary of State instead of the State Finance Commissioner, which also was defeated. Under the leadership of Senator Casey, who was supported by Senator Cave and Senator McCawley on the floor, the day's debate had been marked by repeated efforts to force through the Senate acceptance of amendments proposed by the Senate Committee on Judiciary, which proposed to restore in the bill the present 42 per cent. Dearmont, however, had the votes to overturn the committee report on the amendments, and was supported by Lieutenant-Governor Winter on points of order which were raised. There were many of these. Appeals from Winter's decisions invariably were defeated.

The parliamentary tangles which interrupted progress on the bill frequently during the day had cleared away in the afternoon, and the battle over the interest rate then began.

Brogan's Move Defeated.

Senator Brogan offered an amendment to put the rate at 1½ per cent a month, which if adopted probably would have meant defeat of the legislation, as the sentiment of House has appeared very clearly to be that of a rate not less than 2 per cent would be required for the loan companies to continue in business.

The passage of the small loan bill is due almost entirely to the efforts of Senator Dearmont of Cape Girardeau, a new and young Senator, with bulldog persistence who overcame the deeply entrenched Casey-Cave-McCawley combine of the Senate, and built up a following which enabled him to break down old precedents.

Under his leadership the Senate tonight overruled the Senate Judiciary Committee, which had reported in favor of retaining the present 42 per cent rate.

Dearmont began his fight three months ago in attempts to obtain action on the Senate small loan bills from the Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence, where they were being arbitrarily held by the Chairman, Senator Buford. He obtained a favorable vote from the

RIVER DES PERES FLOODS STREETS, THEN GOES DOWN

Stream Reaches Highest Level in 14 Years Due to 2.21 Inches of Rain in Course of Day.

AUTOS STALLED IN FOREST PARK

Tracks Covered, Basements Inundated in University City—$3000 Damage at Garden Theater.

After swelling yesterday morning with the rapidity of a mountain torrent, from a quiet trickle to its deepest flood since the big one of 1915, the River des Peres spent the rest of the day in subsiding gradually.

The rampage resulted from heavy rainfall which amounted to 2.21 inches between 2:30 a. m. and 7 p. m.

Two families on Meklenburg avenue south of Gravois avenue were driven from their homes by the rising waters, but returned before nightfall as the flood receded. Five families on Allemania street, in the same neighborhood, were marooned in their homes with water up to the level of their first floors, but declined assistance offered by the Mounted District Police. The river rose to within a foot of the arch of the modern bridge on Gravois avenue.

Effects of the flood were felt from Olive boulevard and North and South road, University City, to the Missouri Pacific Railroad near Kingshighway, as well as on the river's Deer Creek branch in the suburbs. The chief effect was the blocking of automobile traffic at many points and of suburban street cars at several places. The rise began about 9 a. m. and attracted many sightseers. The brief floods of this erratic stream, which is being converted into a sewer, generally occur at night.

Scores of automobiles were stalled on submerged thoroughfares, particularly in Forest Park, where the flood was worst. In most instances the drivers had thought they could go through but got their ignition systems wet. The Kirkwood-Ferguson car line was blocked for several hours by River des Peres, south of Olive boulevard. University City; by Deer Creek at Shady avenue, Webster Groves, and by a branch creek on Shady avenue between Rock Hill and Gore avenues. Deer Creek also stopped the Brentwood car line near Manchester road, rose till it covered part of the width of that highway, covered a bridge on Hanley road and flooded several basements on Circle drive, Maplewood.

Garden Theater Is Flooded.

River des Peres in University City flooded basements of several houses near North and South road and Olive boulevard, covered the Creve Coeur tracks, inundated the Garden Theater and nearby Flynn Park, where for a time only the top row of the baseball bleachers was visible, and submerged Olive boulevard in the vicinity of Westgate and Sutter avenues and the city limits, also Maple avenue at the city limits.

Damage at the Garden Theater was about $3000 to electrical equipment, the transformer room and recently redecorated kitchen being flooded. The water was within a foot of the surface of the stage and covered the parking lot. Sweeping against the Kingsland avenue bridge, University City, driftwood broke the railing.

Inside the western city limits, the river inundated Hodiamont avenue from Maple avenue to Olive Street road, and the Wabash Railway tracks from Delmar boulevard to Washington avenue. The water was two to three feet deep. Between Washington avenue and the western part of Forest Park the river runs through a deep, narrow gorge, which became bankful, with a swift current.

Near Record in Theater.

The Municipal Theater, in the park, withstood a heavy onslaught of the flood, which reached within about an inch of the record high level there. Thirty-five men, tying down the stock of big, three-dimensional scenery stored on the ground near the banks, had to wade in water as deep as their armpits. The settings will be all right when the mud is washed off. The orchestra pit and the parking ground northeast of the theater were flooded, but a retaining wall built last winter protected the stage. Water an over the older of two bridges at the lower entrances to the theater and just beneath the newer one.

All of the park roads from Con-

CLYDE VAN DUSEN WINS KENTUCKY DERBY IN RAIN BEFORE CROWD OF 60,000

"MY PONY MADE HIS OWN RUNNING," SAYS McATEE, WHO RODE DERBY WINNER

Victor Was "Out" at Finish, and So Was the Jockey, Who Used Whip Four Times.

By JOHN T. ROGERS,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 18.—How he won the Kentucky Derby on Clyde Van Dusen, diminutive son of the great Man o' War, was related to the writer, today, by Linus McAtee, who has entered the hall of fame for jockeys by winning two of the Kentucky classics. It was this same jockey who rode to victory on Whiskery, year before last.

"I broke third, as the barrier flew up," said McAtee, "and rushed my mount to the front at once. That's all there was to this race. True, I was twice challenged, once by Naishapur and again in the early going by another horse; but my pony, for that is all he is, pulled away each time at a touch of the whip. I was out in front all the way and letting the other boys have the mud."

McAtee, himself no physical giant, is 30 years old and from Long Island. Notwithstanding that he was in front most of the way, he, too, was bespattered with mud.

"I used the whip at four different points in the race, first at the three-quarters when some other horse I do not know, came within rush to make the pace. Clyde Van Dusen sprang forward under the blow and I knew then he had plenty of stuff in reserve. I did not ride him in the sense that we speak of riding a horse to victory. I let him make the running and how he did it!

Was "Out" at the Finish.

"From the moment the barrier went up I gave him his head and soon had him out in front. He was very strong in the stretch, but out at the finish, and so was I."

The man in front all the way was not in a position to describe the struggles of the horses behind him in the fight for a place in his race, but C. E. Allen, riding Naishapur, which finished second and was gaining on Clyde Van Dusen at every bound, came through the storm of mud from far behind.

"My mount acted badly at the post," Allen told the writer, "and broke badly. Naishapur is a slow starter and was at his worst today.

"Passing the grandstand for the first time I was running far back, about fourteenth, and catching all the mud in the world.

Air Was Full of Mud.

"Recovering quickly, however, my mount soon got under way with amazing speed and passed up the other horses like they were tied. I had to drive around others, and this was blind work for the most part. The air was full of mud, big chunks of it."

Even as he spoke, Allen was raking mud from his plastered face.

"I could not tell the names of the horses we passed, but as we entered the stretch I saw only three ahead and soon disposed of two of them. I was in a good position, close to the rail, but out of the water that had collected all around the course. It was not necessary to use the whip. My mount had gobs of speed and had the race been an eighth of a mile farther, Naishapur would have won.

"That horse is good, believe me. At the finish he was taking two jumps to Clyde Van Dusen's one. He had lots in reserve and it was too bad the Derby distance had been cut from a mile and a half."

F. Coltiletti, on Panchio, which finished third, said he played a waiting game most of the way to conserve the strength of his mount and made his dash for the honors in the stretch. He, too, was plastered with mud and said this seriously interfered with the performance of his mount.

"I think Panchio did his best all the way," said Coltiletti. "He had something left, but it is mighty hard to get up there through the mud after a bad start."

Blue Larkspur Flounders.

Blue Larkspur, favored in the betting as far the best horse in the race under any conditions, did not like the mud at all.

Mack Garner, his rider, uncle of Willie Garner, who rode Chicatie, said the handsome colt from the Bradley Stable, slipped all over the track.

"Blue Larkspur got away to a

MARY SHAW, ACTRESS IN SHAW AND IBSEN PLAYS, DIES

Her Most Noted Night Was When She Was Arrested When Playing in "Mrs. Warren's Profession."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Mary Shaw, actress, feminist and leader in a movement against censorship, know to theatergoers for the past three generations, died today. She was 69 years old and for 51 years had been on the stage.

Her most noted night was in 1905 when George Bernard Shaw's play, "Mrs. Warren's Profession," was presented with Miss Shaw in the title role. The performance was stopped, and she appeared in Jefferson Market Police Court after being almost trampled by the crowd that attended the theater.

Mary Shaw had a vibrant personality. When the sight of women smoking drew gasps of astonishment she advocated the practice. She constantly opposed the argument that woman's place was in the home.

Miss Shaw was born in Boston and made her stage debut there. Two years later she came to New York and, during her career, took part in at least 70 plays. She was one of the first American actresses to appear in Ibsen's plays, and frequently she was in the same cast with Julia Marlowe and others of like fame. Her last appearance was in "The Cradle Song" in 1927.

A son, Arthur Shaw, an actor now in California, and a sister, Mrs. Helen Shaw of Boston, survive.

MAN O' WAR'S SON BEATS NAISHAPUR BY TWO LENGTHS

Reveling in the Mud, Gardner Gelding Leads All the Way — Panchio Third, Blue Larkspur Fourth.

WINNER PAYS $8; 21 HORSES RUN

Victory Worth $53,950 to Owner — Downpour Drenches Spectators, Makes Track Heavy.

By the Associated Press.

CHURCHILL DOWNS, Louisville, Ky., May 18.—A flash of lightning, a clap of thunder a swirling rush through the mire—and Clyde Van Dusen splashed home through the mud and the rain today to victory in the fifty-fifth running of the historic Kentucky Derby. This great 3-year-old gelding, first son of Man O'War to win the classic prize, lived up to all his advance notices as a mud runner by dashing out in front, holding the lead against a succession of spirited challenges and beating the hope of the far West, Chaffee Earl's speedy Naishapur, by two good lengths in a fine closing drive. An outsider, Panchio, representing the Three D's Stock Farm of Forth Worth, Tex., finished with a rush to beat the favorite and homebred hope, Col. E. R. Bradley's Blue Larkspur, for third place.

Blue Larkspur, 2 to 1 in the betting as compared to 3 to 1 for Clyde Van Dusen, took fourth place.

Close to 60,000 spectators, some of whom were drenched by a terrific storm that broke an hour before the Derby and lasted until it was over, saw the gallant little offspring of Man O'War ridden to victory over 20 rivals in masterful style by Linus (Pony) McAtee. The veteran jockey thereby scored his second triumph in three years, having had the mount on Harry Payne Whitney's victorious Whiskery in the 1927 Derby.

Clyde Van Dusen ran the mile and a quarter in 2:10 4-5. The record for the Derby is 2:02 2-5.

$53,950 Goes to Winner.

The race, having a value of $64,475, was worth $53,950 to the winner's owner, Herbert P. Gardner of Amsterdam, N. Y., who also received the $5000 gold cup from the hands of Gov. Sampson of Kentucky in the colorful ceremony that followed the running. The victor's share of the spoils is the second largest on record, surpassed only by the sum of $55,375 which went to Reigh Count last year, when a record field of 22 horses started.

Clyde Van Dusen paid $8 to win, $3.70 for place and $3.06 to show, on the basis of each $2 ticket in the mutuels. Naishapur paid $4.72 to place and $3.26 to show. Panchio's price to show was $2.50.

The elements, the track, the mud and the rain all seemed made to order for Clyde Van Dusen, and the chestnut gelding, bearing the name of his trainer, made the most of it. Apparently handicapped, along with Blue Larkspur, in being placed on the extreme outside of the unwieldy field, waiting serenely while more fractious rivals pranced and broke, Clyde Van Dusen, nevertheless, was quickly ridden to the commanding position and made every post a winning one after the first quarter.

The race, in the verdict of most experts, was won and lost on the first turn and in the first half mile. In that distance, Clyde Van Dusen took the lead. At that turn, Blue Larkspur was caught in the jam and so was Naishapur, losing considerable ground.

Got Early Advantage.

The early advantage thus gained by McAtee proved too much for any of the others to overcome. Naishapur, which many believed would have won on a dry course, began moving up after five furlongs, but again was blocked on the last turn, swerving wide be-

CITY PLAN GROUP WANTS NEW ROAD TO ENTER ON PAGE

Decision of Streets Committee Likely to Be Approved by Whole Commission at June 4 Meeting

WHOLE SITUATION IS NOW ALTERED

Previous Discussion Had Centered Around Bringing Superhighway in on Olive or Clayton Roads.

Page boulevard is the best thoroughfare for the State's projected traffic relief superhighway to enter St. Louis, the State Committee of St. Louis, the Streets Committee of termined.

This alters the whole situation with respect to the routing of the superhighway across St. Louis County. The road is to connect St. Louis and Wentzville, St. Charles County, which is on U. S. Highway No. 40. The State Highway Department had planned to bring it from a new bridge over the Missouri River, northwest of Chesterfield, by way of Conway and Clayton roads, to Oakland avenue at the city limits, thinking this was where city officials desired to have it enter.

However, no action on the point of entrance had been taken by the city. When Chief Engineer Cutler of the State Highway Department learned this recently, he dropped consideration of a route across the county until the City Plan Commission decided the best place for the superhighway to enter from the standpoint of handling its heavy traffic in the city. Thereupon, the plan commission directed its Streets Committee to make a recommendation, although the matter was not officially before it.

From City's Standpoint.

Before the Streets Committee met on Friday a request was received from the County Chamber of Commerce for the official ruling and yesterday Chairman Russell of the plan commission got a similar request from Chief Engineer Cutler. The chamber and Cutler will be advised of the Streets Committee's decision, which is expected to be approved by the plan commission when it meets June 4.

The Streets Committee considered the question entirely from the standpoint of the city, without regard to the routing in the county. It found from a 1927 traffic count covering the period between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m. that 7017 vehicles used Oakland avenue at the city limits in that period daily, 8219 vehicles used Delmar boulevard and only 2528 utilized Page boulevard.

University City has suggested routing the superhighway over Olive Street road, connecting with Delmar boulevard, but the committee concluded traffic was heavy enough there already. Oakland avenue, it thought, also has sufficient traffic and it would connect with Chouteau avenue, already busy with the city's greatest trucking movements.

Connects With Widened Streets.

Secretary Lawrence of the plan commission pointed out that Page boulevard connects directly at its east end with Easton avenue, which is being widened, and that in turn connects with widened Franklin avenue, and with widened Morgan street a block away. The Streets Committee felt that use of these streets would avert congestion in the busier thoroughfares to the south and would serve all the bridges across the Mississippi, including the new ones at the north end. Nine or 10 evenly separated major streets cross Page and Franklin from Broadway to Union boulevard.

Page boulevard has 100-foot width between property lines throughout the city, with a 60-foot roadway, except between Spring and Vandeventer avenues and between Whittier street and Taylor avenue. In the former stretch a central parkway is to be removed, probably this year; between Pendleton and Taylor avenues another central parkway is to be torn out shortly, and in the block between Whittier and Pendleton there is a 40-foot roadway with 30-foot sidewalks.

HOOVER SPENDS NIGHT AT FISHING PRESERVE

Goes to Camp in Foothills of Blue Ridge Mountains With Friends.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—President Hoover today sought relaxation from his duties in a visit to his fishing preserve in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, where he planned to spend the night in a tent near the upper waters of the Rapidan River.

The President departed from the White House before noon today and arrived at the preserve early in the afternoon. He was accompanied by Secretary Wilbur, Edward Lowrie, a political writer; his secretary, Lawrence Richey, and his personal physician, Lieutenant-Commander Joel T. Boone. Mrs. Hoover did not accompany the President.

After arriving at the preserve, the party inspected the arrangements for the night and spent the afternoon strolling about the land and resting. The President did no fishing.

The party drove through Warrenton and Culpepper, Va., to Madison and the small village of Crigersville, the nearest point to to the preserve that could be reached by the large White House automobiles. From Crigersville lighter cars were used for part of the remaining distance, after which the party rode horses for one and a half miles to the tents erected for their use.

What time the party would return tomorrow had not been determined when the White House was notified tonight that the President would remain overnight.

Kinney, and passed without a dissenting vote.

A companion measure to the rapid transit enabling act is a proposed amendment to the state constitution which would authorize all municipalities of 5000 or more population to issue municipal bonds for periods of 50 years to acquire or construct public utilities. Under the present constitutional provisions, such bonds must mature in 20 years.

The Senate resolution proposing submission of the bond amendment in the 1930 election for adoption by voters of the State has been passed by the Senate and is waiting action by the House. A similar proposal, already passed by the House, authorizing cities of 75,000 or more population to issue 50-year municipal public utility bonds, is on the Senate calendar for passage.

Vote on Permit Bill.

For passage: Senators W. M. Bates and Michael Kinney of St. Louis; Walter Brownlee of Brookfield, M. E. Casey of Kansas City, E. C. Curfman of Maryville, Russell Dearmont of Cape Girardeau, Phil M. Donnelly of Lebanon, J. H. Gunn of Otterville, Lon S. Haynes of Springfield, A. G. Hildreth of Macon, E. J. Luther of Memphis, A. L. McCawley of Carthage, A. J. Rehkop of Cleveland, L. N. Searcy of Eminence, S. M. Snodgrass of El Dorado Springs, Ralph Wammack of Bloomfield, J. H. Whitecotton of Paris and W. S. Willard of St. Joseph.

Against passage: Nick T. Cave of Fulton, Manvel H. Davis of Kansas City, J. G. Morgan of Unionville, W. R. Painter of Carrollton, and D. E. Williams of Troy.

Recorded absent: J. H. Brogan, W. F. Depelheuer, Joseph Mogler and Frank B. Warner, all of St. Louis; Irvin Bringes of Sedalia, C. M. Buford of Ellington (on leave); B. T. Gordon of Liberty, J. C. federate drive, which is near 3500 Lindell drive, to a point about west of the Jewish Hospital, which is at Kingshighway and Forest Park avenue, were submerged to a maximum depth of about 3½ feet, and the river in this section resembled a lake about a mile long and 1500 to 2000 feet wide. It spread across Sylvan and Round Lakes, which face Grahd drive near the Wabash viaduct, so that they disappeared from view. The water reached to the doorknobs of the State fish hatchery on an island in Sylvan Lake. There were few fish in the hatchery lake and most of them were removed by employes when the flood impended. Some of the drives were open by midafternoon, and on several which still had some water automobiles splashed through. Grand drive remained blocked.

Sewer Excavations Filled.

The big Des Peres sewer excavations in the park were filled with water, which it will take possibly several days to pump out. Contractors' employes strengthened the river banks at some places to protect the work. Missouri Pacific Railroad workmen also placed sandbags on the banks where the tracks cross the stream, as a precaution.

The Mississippi River at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon had fallen 1.3 of a foot to 30.3 feet, only .3 of a foot above flood stage. Its fall is expected to continue until Monday, when a slight rise is due because of high water on the Missouri River.

All Available Men Patrol St. Francis River Levee.

KENNETT, Mo., May 18.—Every available man in this section tonight and tomorrow will patrol the St. Francis River levee from White Oak south, in an effort to prevent breaks threatened by the second serious rise in a fortnight.

From 200 to 300 men patrolled the main levee during last night, and they were relieved by other workmen this morning, who continued the activities.

Kennett business houses today were being kept open to serve the community, but all available men were being assigned to duty along the 14-mile section of the levee. The crest of the second and largest rise is expected to reach the weakened section of the main levee near White Oak tonight or tomorrow morning. A crevasse would result in at least 100,000 acres of farm land being flooded, with great loss to the county.

Organized effort to hold the levee is now being attempted, according to Elmer Tribble, publisher of the Kennett News. Tribble headed a crew on one of the most dangerous sections of the levee during last night. The same crew will return to duty late today and will continue to patrol the levee until after the crest has been reached.

Several thousand sandbags have been sent here from Memphis with which to strengthen the leves at different points. Sunshine during the past two days has aided workmen, but rain is predicted for tonight.

Reports from Campbell vicinity said there is little danger of a levee break there, but constant vigil is being maintained in case a crevasse might develop.

Streams Out of Their Banks and 700 to 1000 Acres Inundated.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISIANA, Mo., May 18.—The breaking of a levee on Bryant's Creek at Annada 12 miles south of this city today resulted in the overflowing of between 700 and 1000 acres of farming land.

Late this afternoon the water was almost in the stores in the town of Annada and lacked less than a foot of being over the tracks of the Burlington railroad.

Torrential rains since about midnight Friday night have put all small streams in this section out of their banks. Farmers already far behind with their work will be still further delayed by the present rainy season which shows no indications of ending.

Families Leave Homes in South Central Missouri Flood.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 18.—Forcing many families from their homes, inundating several thousand acres of low farmlands and blocking traffic on many State highways, the worst flood of the year was rolling down the Osage River in south central Missouri tonight.

Five families were driven from their homes today in the town of Linn Creek, as the Osage rose three inches an hour. Highways 5 and 54, the latter between Springfield and Jefferson City, were blocked. The ferry between Linn Creek and Bagnell is out of commission.

committee but then Buford refused to make the report.

Then Dearmont offered an almost unprecedented motion in the Senate, seeking an instruction from the Senate to Buford to make the report. It has been an unwritten rule of the Senate from early days that there shall be no interference with a committee, and Dearmont's motion failed.

Buford's action has been such a scandal that a sentiment in support of Dearmont had been aroused that when the House small loan bill reached the Senate, Lieutenant-Governor Winter sent it to the Judiciary Committee instead of the Criminal Jurisprudence Committee.

When reported by the Judiciary Committee it took a place at the bottom of the calendar with 140 bills ahead of it, and there it was doomed to die unless it could be advanced to the top of the calendar. Dearmont was undaunted by the fact that rarely will the Senate agree to take up a bill out of regular order, and offered a motion to make it a special order for today. He had organized his forces well and the motion carried, over the opposition of Casey and the old regulars of the Senate. Today after a hard fight in which he met and overcame a score of clever technical maneuvers designed to kill the measure, he obtained its passage.

AID TO 'GRAF' HELPS FRANCO-GERMAN AMITY

Press and Berlin Foreign Office Express Thanks for Quick Rescue Work.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 18.—The entire German press as well as the German Foreign Office tonight gratefully acknowledged their thanks for the promptitude of the French in aiding the dirigible Graf Zeppelin during the airship's perilous journey and emergency landing in France yesterday.

More had been accomplished toward a Franco-German rapprochement by the mishap to the Zeppelin and the efficient assistance which it called forth from the French than by years of diplomatic negotiations, it was widely remarked. However, Dr. Eckener was given full credit for his remarkable presence of mind and circumspection in maneuvering the airship.

The Diplomatische Politische Korrespondenz, which reflects Foreign Office views, unstintingly praised "the French humane spirit and broadmindedness and the French Government's quickness of decision and ready response."

Many newspapers noted that by their action the French had transferred to airships the ancient law of the sea, which obliges ships on the high seas to hurry to one another's assistance in case of distress, irrespective of their destination, purpose or nationality.

French officials had waived their hitherto strictly enforced regulations against flying over fortifications or military centers in order to afford a safe berth at Toulon for the airship.

As the most remarkable instance of French helpfulness, however, the Korrespondenz emphasized the readiness with which French authorities undertook the great inconvenience to the public of cutting off the current in overhead high tension power wires in the entire Valence district lest the airship be endangered by falling among them.

The Korrespondenz found the French attitude in general "a striking example of the suppression of one's own interest in behalf of others and a chivalrous act which we acknowledge all the more gratefully because the regulations for flying over France are very strict and recent postponement of French permission to the Zeppelin had led to complaints."

New Motors for Zeppelin Ready to Be Shipped.

By the Associated Press.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, May 18.—The four new motors for the Dirigible Graf Zeppelin were still here tonight although they had been given a final over-hauling and one already was loaded on a freight car. Chief constructor Duerr of the Zeppelin works delayed his departure for Cuers pending further word from Dr. Hugo Eckener.

PASSENGER WRITES OF ALARM ON ZEPPELIN

Tells How Eckener Avoided Hitting Mountain When Big Ship Was Drifting.

The following story of the dramatic struggle of the transatlantic dirigible Graf Zeppelin to reach safely after she had turned back to Friedrichshafen and found herself in the grip of a gale was written by Alexander R. von Kryha, a passenger for the Associated Press. It was prepared from notes made while the Graf Zeppelin was beating her way over southeastern France in an effort to find a landing place.

By ALEXANDER R. VON KRYHA.
Written for the Associated Press.

CUERS, France, May 18.—Dr. Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin en route to the United States, walked into the salon of the ship Thursday afternoon as the passengers were dancing merrily to the tunes of a phonograph and, striking a serious attitude said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have bad news to impart to you. We must return to Friedrichshafen. There is some trouble with the motors but there is no danger. Remain calm. We shall reach home safely Friday evening or Saturday morning."

The announcement came as a thunderstroke out of the clearest sky to the passengers, who were not aware of any difficulty to the motors. The dancing stopped immediately as the ship swung about to return to Barcelona.

Such was the dramatic manner in which the passengers of the Graf Zeppelin were made aware that their flight to the United States had failed. Then, after a long, hard pull over the Gulf of Lyon and over the southern part of France, the Zeppelin fought for headway past Nimes, Montelimar and Valence.

Just as the sun was setting in the troubled western hazy horizon Friday afternoon, Capt. Christian Biser, official German passenger, entered the salon as the ship was talking about above Valence, saying: "Ladies and gentlemen, there is danger. Remove your bags and remain calm. We are forced to land."

General silence greeted the announcement. All, or almost all, of the passengers made for the cabins to get their baggage, when one of the passengers in a high-pitched voice exclaimed: "What the hell are you talking about?"

In spite of the tension of the moment, the other passengers, who had understood the grim warning, which had been spoken in German, broke out into a general roar of laughter.

It was then explained to the passenger, who understood no German, that there was trouble ahead and that the ship, unable to proceed, must land.

"That's all right with me," he replied. "Now I understand; it is quite all right."

With parachutes wrapped around their shoulders, instead of the usual life-belts of steamships, the passengers watched as the Zeppelin maneuvered above Valence and Montelimar from 3:30 p. m. until 5 p. m., in the most unusual "lifeboat" drill ever held in the air.

Became Merely a Balloon.

The Graf Zeppelin by this time had completely lost all control of steering and was turned into a mere balloon, buffeted by the wind continually and drifting toward the Mediterranean in spite of the one motor that was still throbbing, then suddenly this last motor stopped, after several coughing spells, sputtered and died.

The dreaded mistral, blowing from the northwest, was pushing the helpless Zeppelin toward the sea at a speed of 40 miles an hour. The passengers, then thoroughly alarmed, delegated one of their number to go to the navigation cabin where Dr. Eckener with his officers were sitting quietly in their seats. The doctor's son, Knud Eckener, was at the steering wheel. Dr. Eckener in response to a question said that it was imperative to find a landing field.

Flying before the wind and headed straight for the Mediterranean with only one motor to aid in the steering, the Graf Zeppelin went through the most momentous hour of the entire flight. Dr. Eckener himself directed his son at the steering wheel and the mechanics at the various levers, seeking to find favorable air currents.

The ship hopped up and down several hundred feet at times. Then suddenly straight ahead there loomed out of the deepening gloom of the evening a small mountain on which it appeared the ship must crash.

Eckener Avoided Mountain.

While the passengers waited tensely, the ship suddenly leaped several hundred feet in the air like a trained steeplechaser. Everyone gasped until it was explained that Dr. Eckener, aware of the danger, had dumped a large amount of water ballast, thus lightening the ship.

Another thrill for the passengers came as the airship, flying with the motors silent, averaged 50 miles an hour en route to the air field at Cours. The passengers thought the ship would be blown out over the Mediterranean, but by skillful maneuvering she came down and was quickly tethered by the strong hands of hundreds of men on the field.

Denies Report of Smallpox on Ship

By the Associated Press.

MARSEILLES, France, May 18.—Reports that there had been deaths from smallpox on the British steamer Assyria, which arrived today from India, were denied officially here tonight. One member of the crew, suffering from a disease "resembling smallpox," had been put ashore in Egypt. Strict quarantine and vaccination of passengers was ordered earlier in the day when it was reported three persons had died of the disease.

were safely moored in the hangar. The landing was wonderfully skillful.

Four-fifths of our power was gone, only one engine was working, and there was considerable wind, but no one was injured and there was not even a scratch on the airship.

"Absurd," Says Eckener of Reports of Sabotage.

CUERS, France, May 18.—Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, today disposed of reports that sabotage was responsible for stoppage of four of her five motors on her way to America Thursday.

With the simple ejaculation, "Absurd," Dr. Eckener, who personally took charge of examination of the motors, gave a denial to a series of rumors emanating apparently from Berlin and certain sources in Friedrichshafen.

"Where could the sabotage have taken place?" he added.

Thousands of automobiles poured into this little aviation village today, bringing French aviation experts as well as curious civilians to visit the Graf Zeppelin in her hangar.

"No one is barred," ruled Dr. Eckener. "I am so deeply appreciative of the assistance and welcome of the French at this end toward landing that I can take exception to their seeing all they want of our craft."

The airship is scheduled to [illegible] early Monday or Tuesday [illegible] for its home port, where it will be completely overhauled. The [illegible] of the next attempt to fly to America has been tentatively set for June 20.

Before starting for Friedrichshafen, Dr. Eckener made a personal survey of all its parts in connection with the Zeppelin [illegible] Dimling, of Friedrichshafen. Whether this examination threw further light on the cause of the motor trouble was not made public, but Dr. Eckener was emphatic in saying the breakdown was entirely natural and accidental.

The Commander took advantage of discussion of the motor problem to recall that he had warned Friedrichshafen before the flight that the airship should carry six motors instead of five.

"The motors were tired after the flight to America last year and Palestine this year," he said, "but had we had eight, instead of six, they would not have failed, thus missing all thought of mishap. But we felt that after two long flights the motors were nearing the limit of their efficiency, but we believed they could stand another 6000 miles. In that we make a mistake."

BUILDERS ORDER OPEN SHOP PLAN, NO COMPROMISE

Non-Union Help Is Employed, Labor Leaders Threaten to Call All Men Off Jobs Under Way.

STRIKERS LOSE ABOUT $420,000

Contractors Announce They Will Grant No Increases to Any Craft; Situation Apparently Prolonged.

With organized contractors un[illegible] orders to resume building operations in force on the open shop [illegible] tomorrow, and labor leaders [illegible] threatening to call union men off [illegible] on which nonunion workmen [illegible] employed, the situation created [illegible] the strike May 1 of 4400 [illegible] iron workers, laborers and [illegible] mecutters apparently is to be [illegible] prolonged.

The Group Council of the Associated Building Interests, an organization of contractors employing about 80 per cent of the 18,000 [illegible] building mechanics here, last week instructed the membership to adopt an open shop policy to keep construction jobs moving. The absence of iron workers and laborers from jobs and the closing down of [illegible] supply concerns through the strike of st[illegible] ecutters threatened to interrupt the local building program. To avert an interruption, [illegible] organized contractors voted to employ nonunion men where possible.

So far, the unions on strike have made no formal request of the Building Trades Council for support. Maurice Cassidy, secretary of the council, said. Heads of individual unions announced, however, that the appearance of nonunion workers on a job will be a signal for union men to quit. Ten contractors were reported to be using nonunion workers last week.

Representatives of the laborers [illegible] are said to have presented a compromise offer, the amount of which was not announced, to contractors. Union iron workers are [illegible] said to have intimated that they would agree to a compromise, [illegible] contractors, however, announced they will grant no increases to any craft.

The 4400 strikers have lost [illegible] $420,000 in wages during the [illegible] working days elapsed since the strike was called. On the basis of a 40-hour week the 3500 laborers [illegible] lost a total of $291,200 in wages. The 700 iron workers [illegible] failed to learn $110,200 through [illegible] idleness, and the 150 stonecutters missed making a total of $[illegible]375. Other union workers [illegible] also suffered losses in pay through interrupting of the construction program, but there is no [illegible] general basis on which these losses [illegible] can be computed.

[illegible] fifty union iron workers made [illegible] several days' pay yesterday and today, being engaged in moving $900 [illegible] by deposit boxes from the National Bank of Commerce to the [illegible] Mercantile Trust Co. Frank J. [illegible] Sexey, president of the union, [illegible] said that the men were paid [illegible] double time at the $1.75 cent scale, [illegible] $2.50 an hour.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—To use a phrase of Senator Tom Heflin when he describes the farmers, the Republican members of the Missouri delegation in Congress "ain't happy." They have been ignored by President Hoover in the making of the political appointments. They believe, to use another Heflin phrase, "that this ought not to be."

The President's appointment of Dwight F. Davis of St. Louis as Governor-General of the Philippines is their latest complaint. Senator Roscoe C. Patterson of Kansas City is particularly put out at what he considers the President's lack of courtesy. He did not learn that Davis had been offered the position until informed by a newspaper correspondent. Later, when Secretary of War Good telephoned him the news, he protested that while it was a "fine appointment," some Republicans back home would object. Patterson also told Good he thought he should have been informed before the announcement was made public. Good's explanation was that he had unsuccessfully tried to get in touch with Patterson before.

Patterson said today that he would not oppose Davis nomination when it came to the Senate. They are personal friends of long standing.

Representative L. C. Dyer of St. Louis protested to the White House against the appointment. He is reported as saying that the selection might offend the "working Republicans" in Missouri, adding that Davis had not been acting in the Missouri organization.

Both Patterson and Dyer remember that they were not consulted on the appointment of Arthur M. Hyde as Secretary of Agriculture. Patterson was informed a day or so before the appointment was announced, but Dyer apparently was left to see the announcement in the newspapers.

The White House view is that the Davis appointment was a personal selection of a former colleague in the Coolidge Cabinet, and not one requiring consultation with the Republican Senator from the home State of the new Governor-General.

Senator and Mrs. Patterson were dinner guests at the White House last night. Patterson said the affair was purely social and had nothing to do with the Davis appointment.

WOMAN, 70, HIT BY AUTO, SUFFERS FRACTURE OF SKULL

Driver, Arrested, Says She Stepped From Behind Street Car Into Path of Machine.

Miss Pauline Mueller, 70 years old, a restaurant employe, 1420 Locust street, was knocked down by an automobile last night as she was crossing Washington avenue at Fourteenth street. She suffered a fractured skull.

The driver of the car, Joseph Lodato, chauffeur, 745 Bayard avenue, was arrested charged with careless driving. He told police that the woman stepped from behind a street car into the path of his machine.

CLYDE VAN DUSEN WINS DERBY IN HEAVY DOWNPOUR

fore getting into the clear and closing with a gallant rush.

The only real drama of the race was packed into this stretch drive and the outside possibility of Naishapur making up the distance between this Western colt and the flying leader. For a few moments it seemed that the son of Omar Khayyam might overtake Clyde Van Dusen. It was a fleeting hope. McAtee shook up his mount a bit in the stretch and held his position safe.

Blue Larkspur's defeat was a bitter blow to the Bradley colt's legion of backers, who had made the son of Black Servant a favorite ever since his sensational career as a 2-year-old. But the favorite, although caught in an early jam, had few excuses and under the conditions was decisively outrun.

Panchio, which raced prominently for the entire trip, barely stuck his nose in front of Blue Larkspur to gain third place in one of the few exciting episodes of the finish. But Panchio was three good lengths behind Naishapur. The only consolation there was for these horses was the distribution of $6000 of the money to Naishapur, $3000 to Panchio and $1000 to Blue Larkspur.

Windy City, owned by F. M. Garbiner of Chicago, raced evenly and held on stubbornly enough to take fifth place, a half length behind Blue Larkspur and a head in front of Voltear, the entry of Charles T. Fisher of Detroit. Karl Eitel, another Chicago horse, finished ninth.

Horses at Post 15 Minutes.

This was the second successive year in which the Derby has been run in the rain, but it is doubtful whether anything has quite swamped the track as today's cloudburst, the climax of a succession of showers. It was bad to start with; sufficiently so to scratch five of the original field named, but it was worse when the race actually was run. The water was inches deep along the rail and for many feet inside it. The rest of the track was fetlock deep in mire. The field went to the post at 4:55 p. m., but it was fully 15 minutes before the starter and four assistants succeeded in lining up the field.

Meanwhile the big crowd, alternately scurrying to and from what shelter was available, took its soaking for the most part and stuck it out, whether they were listed in who's who or just part of the mob. Now accustomed to bad Derby weather, most of them came equipped for it, but thousands of dollars worth of hats, gowns and other apparel was ruined by the downpour.

The great Man O' War was denied a chance to contest for the Kentucky Derby, not being entered. His line of succession scored its first triumph today with Clyde Van Dusen.

The winner of the fifty-fifth classic was bred at the Lexington farm of Miss Elizabeth Daingerfield. Sired by Man O' War, the Derby victor's dam was Uncle's Lassie. Clyde Van Dusen is the seventh gelding to win the Derby, but the first to capture the big prize since Exterminator ran first for Willis Sharpe Kilmer in 1918.

ST. LOUISANS AT DERBY AND THE STYLE SHOW

ST. LOUIS SOCIETY, LOYAL TO DERBY, FINDS LOUISVILLE MORE HOSPITABLE THAN EVER

Round of Breakfasts, Dinners and Dances Fills Every Available Hour — Some of the Visitors and What They Wore.

By MARGARET ALLEN RUHL,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 18.—Derby day this year afforded Kentucky aristocracy another opportunity to dispense its far-famed hospitality as it played host to the thousands gathered to witness the great racing classic.

Intrepid St. Louisans who for four years have braved drenching rains to follow the fortunes of their favorite stable, added another proof of their loyalty as torrents of rain predicted by a truthful weather forecast literally poured over Churchill Downs and much fragile feminine finery and masculine raiment were ruined.

The close bond of social relationship between St. Louis and Louisville because of many intermarriages resulted in animated greetings of relatives and old friends. St. Louis women no longer sanction their former custom of allowing the men to do all of their betting, but, perhaps, with experience gained at Fairmount, awaited their turn in the long queues before the windows.

In addition to the races themselves, society folk from St. Louis have found themselves plunged into a whirl of parties which, instead of being incidental, have become an integral part of Derby festivities.

Breakfasts, Dinners, Dances.

Breakfasts, both in private homes and at the Jockey Club's luncheons, teas and dinners have for several days filled every available hour. Country and town clubs have given dances and guest privileges.

The annual Derby breakfast given by Mr. and Mrs. Sevier Bonnie and Robert Bonnie although smaller this year than usual occupied its accustomed place on the social list.

Much of St. Louis society attended the dinner dance last night at the River Valley Club and more will be represented tonight both at River Valley and the Louisville Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. Caperton were hosts at a dinner last night at their home as were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Culbertson and Mrs. Richard Menefee. Today there was an informal party at the Will Wyman home and tomorrow there will be a breakfast at which Mrs. George Babcock will entertain and at each the guest list has included groups of visitors from St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Wendling, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Langenberg and Mr. and Mrs. Pelham Turner are welcome guests in Louisville, for all three women formerly lived here. They never miss a Derby. Mr. and Mrs. Wendling are with her mother, Mrs. John Avery Haldeman as well as her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Culbertson of New York who came in the private car of Mrs. Edward V. Hartford in a party with Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Belmont, Miss Phyllis Walsh, M. M. Cunliff and C. Greer, all of the East.

In The Boxes.

The Craig Culbertsons were entertained in the box of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Culbertson at the track, as were Mr. and Mrs. Allen T. West of St. Louis and their debutante daughter, Miss Anne West, while Mr. and Mrs. Wendling entertained the remainder of the group in their own box. Miss West one of St. Louis' most attractive buds, was smart today in a navy blue cloth cape backed suit, with a medium sized hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Langenberg, who was Miss Katherine Bonnie, and Mr. and Mrs. Turner, the latter formerly Miss Mary Miller Brown, were in a party with Mr. and Mrs. Donald McLeod of Indianapolis and attended the majority of Derby parties. Mrs. Langenberg's brothers are Robert and Sevier Bonnie of Derby breakfast fame and she is a sister of Mrs. Caperton.

Airplane trips to Louisville are becoming frequent, and a number of St. Louisans availed themselves of this faster and, according to the travelers themselves, more delightful way of traveling. A party of friends, including Mr. and Mrs. Webster Tilton, Mr. and Mrs. John Gates Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, George S. Tiffany and his son, George S. Jr., arrived Friday in a trimotored Fokker, and have a house here for the races, with their own orchestra brought from St. Louis. They were joined here by Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus, who made the trip by train.

Stafford Lambert flew from St. Louis Friday morning, bringing his brother-in-law, Sharp Ezzell.

The Thomas M. Pierce box was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Pierce, Mrs. Adolphus Busch and Julius and Dickson Pierce, sons of the host and hostess. Nearby was a foursome composed of Mr. and Mrs. Elzey G. Burkham and Mr. and Mrs. E. Lansing Ray. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Eden Morris motored down Friday by way of French Lick Springs and were guests in the box of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Dorrance.

Mrs. Julius S. Walsh, formerly Miss Clara Bell of Lexington, and a noted sports enthusiast, whom St. Louis claims, despite her residence in New York for the last few years, was here for the races and was a guest yesterday afternoon in the Hancock box.

Damp But Undaunted.

An attractive group of St. Louisans, damp but undaunted, stood on camp chairs in the rain to witness most of the afternoon's races, included Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lemoine Green Jr., Miss Jane Tyler Messick, Miss Margaret How, Herbert Jones and John F. Betts Jr. Before their costumes were soaked into almost indistinguishable colors Miss Messick was attractive in a poudre bleu short-coated ensemble with a flared skirt with which she wore a tan felt hat. Mrs. Green was in mottled brown printed silk with a deep ruffle-edged cape collar which she wore outside a straight-lined brown silk coat. Her hat and accessories were also brown. Miss How wore printed crepe in the popular yellow and brown combination, with a cape bertha draped at one side and a smart baku hat to match.

This party has an apartment in Louisville for the week-end and tonight will attend the Louisville Country Club dinner dance. The young women of the group were debutantes of the last season and Mrs. Green was Miss Dorothy Drew before her recent marriage.

Miss Messick's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charlton Messick, are the Derby guests of Mrs. Messick's sister, Mrs. H. L. Smyser of Louisville, who gave a luncheon for them today, and later entertained them in her box.

Raskob a Guest of Honor.

Willard Cox is a familiar figure at the Derby and has had his usual suite of rooms at the Brown Hotel for a week preceding the race. His contribution to entertainment was a dinner party Thursday night at the always-popular Pendennis Club, a charming old Southern structure which seems to have withstood the encroaching tide of modernity. His guests of honor were Mrs. Saling W. Baruch of New York and John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Others at the dinner were Mrs. Mary McKinnon of East Hampton, L. I.; Mr and Mrs. Creston Wills of Wilmington, Del., and William D Orthwein of St. Louis.

There was the usual crowd of notables from all over the country. In the Raskob box former Gov. Alfred E. Smith was a conspicuous figure. In the same section Admiral Grayson entertained a group of beautifully gowned women.

Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, smart in a dark tailleur and small brown hat with a dotted eye veil, had as her guests Mrs. George Baker, Mrs. Nelson Doubleday, James Blair and Harry Curtis, all of New York.

Mayor Walker of New York failed to arrive and that he was missed was evinced by many inquiries.

Miss Betty Niles, debutante daughter of Mrs. Francis H. Niles, is here with her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bruce Head and Col. Lyman T. Hay as the guests of Mr. Head's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Gresham of Louisville. They have occupied the Gresham box. "Waldeck," the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Head at Crestwood will be opened for the race meeting.

This afternoon Mrs. Head wore a printed crepe, its finely pleated skirt bordered in blue and made with an uneven hemline. Miss Niles wore poudre bleu with a biege fox scarf.

Mrs. Earl M. Conner and her sister, Miss Ruth Knittel, were with Raymond G. Scott and Edward J. English.

Mrs. John T. Ragsdale Jr. and Mrs. C. H. Fielder came early, wearing modish blue suits and fox scarfs.

Mrs. J. T. Malone's Tea.

The home of Mrs. John T. Malone on Willow avenue will be opened informally tomorrow after noon for a tea to be attended by a number of St. Louisans. One of Mrs. Malone's daughters is Mrs. Thomas Hogan of St. Louis who with Mr. Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lamy of Forest Ridge and Dr. and Mrs. Maurice J. Lonsway, arrived last night to be her guests and attend the Derby. They came by way of French Lick Springs, Indiana, where they visited friends from Chicago. Another daughter, Miss Katherine Malone, is entertaining Mrs. Theodore Mitchell Wall, who arrived Tuesday to spend a week, following a reunion of the Scott family of which she is a member, in Cleveland. She was guest of honor at a dinner party given by Miss Malone tonight. The hostess is well known in St. Louis, having visited there frequently as the guest of Miss Emily Isaacs and Mrs. Albert A. Boettler.

Following the dinner the party motored to the Louisville Country Club for the evening. They occupied one of the desirable upper tier boxes at the track today.

Baldwin Host to Stag Party.

In accordance with what has become an annual custom, L. Warrington Baldwin is host to a large stag party which arrived Friday morning on two private cars. Included in the party were Edward M. Durham Jr., David C. Biggs, L. Ray Carter, John T. Davis Jr., D. J. Perry Francis, Andrew Johnston, C. M. Jones, J. Sheppard Smith, Frank Overton Watts, Harry Brookings Wallace, Thomas H. Wright and U. D. Daly. They are making their headquarters on the cars. Mr. Baldwin's secretary, George C. Stohlman, and Mrs. Stohlman came down for the Friday and Saturday program.

An interesting box party opposite the finish line was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sparks; Mrs. Sparks' sister, Miss Julia Nolan; Mrs. Lloyd L. Tate, Frank C. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs George Rodway and Julian S. Polak. Mrs. Tate and Mrs. Sparks have been here for 10 days visting relatives, and were joined by other members of the party in time for yesterday's races.

Miss Dorothy Hempelman was with Mrs. Robert Mitchell and her daughter, Miss Cecil.

John S. Swift and Mostyn Jones were in a large party with J. B. Ford of Chicago.

Mrs. C. D. Hicks of Mexico City formerly of St. Louis, who is spending the spring and early summer in St. Louis joined a party of friends in Louisville for the week-end to attend the races. Col. Hicks will be in St. Louis in June following a convention of American Association of Railroad Superintendents in Mexico City, and will remain until July.

Two groups of motorists include Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Serrano and Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Norgard, and Mr. and Mrs. Jerome F. Casey, Mrs. Margaret E. Judy, Mrs. Janet O'Malley and Mrs Douglas Fairbury. The latter party are guests at French Lick Springs, and were in the John D. Blong box this afternoon. They will return to the Springs.

Other St. Louisans at French Lick Springs are Miss Ruth and Miss Pearl Bischoff and Miss Lillian Scott; Mr. and Mrs. J. H.

COL. WINN HAS SEEN EVERY ONE OF THE 55 DERBIES IN LOUISVILLE

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 18.

FIFTY-FIVE years ago Matt J. Winn saw Aristides win the first Kentucky Derby from the tail board of a grocer's wagon on the back stretch. He had some goods to deliver to one of the stables and he hung about until the first chapter was written in a turf institution.

This afternoon Col. Matt Winn, now executive director of Churchill Downs and the P. T. Barnum of racing, saw the fifty-fifth chapter ridden as he has seen each one transcribed for the history of the sport since that day in 1875 as a grocer's boy.

FEWER FLARES AND RUFFLES, MORE TAILORED EFFECTS SEEN IN FASHION ARRAY AT RACES

Vivid Colors Give Evidence Women Are Not Aiming at Conservatism Despite Their Desire for Trimness of Outline.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 18—The greatest sporting event we have in the Middle West if not in the entire country, the Kentucky Derby, drew its accustomed thousands to Louisville today, and as usual, predicating one's assertion on a record of four years' standing, it rained. In fact, it poured.

In the morning, between intermittent showers, there were flashes of sunlight enough to encourage the always eager and optimistic racing enthusiasts to turn out and in their gladdest raiment. If there is anybody in Louisville who isn't a race horse enthusiast on this day, from the loudest and loosest spender to the demurest and thriftiest housewife, she isn't in evidence.

It has become traditionally as much a day for airing one's taste in clothes as one's belief in sport and not to be deterred by weather warnings the crowd arrived at the track in its usual gala array. It was only as the time for the great race approached that the elements decided to spoil the brilliant spectacle.

Sartorial Competition.

As a matter of fact there would have to be elimination contests among the aspirants for sartorial supremacy as there are among the horses before this became really a fashion classic. Some people's tastes in clothes are funny and their exhuberance given free rein on this day brings out some astounding costumes. I don't mean merely the men in the startling effects in which they vent their latent yearnings on this day as upon no other, but among the women as well. In the overwhelming abundance of material offered it becomes as much a game picking out fashions vouched for by the stylists, as it is selecting the best bets from the racing forms.

Sometimes both fashion and racing authorities go wrong for example, the fashion experts have ben insisting that the mode is becoming more "feminine" getting away from severe lines and back to more frivolous effects. This was not strikingly demonstrated at yesterday's fashion meet.

Fewer Ruffles and Flowers.

Of course weather forecasts may have had something to do with it but even among those who wore their newest spring costumes there were fewer ruffles and flares, fewer chiffons and velvets, more straight lined skirts, more tailored effects, more tweeds of light weight, friscas and wool crepes, flannels and covert cloths, chantungs and flat crepes than last year. Silk knit and jersey fabrics were especially smart. Even crepes and silks and prints had the tailored effect. A striking instance was an ensemble of georgette with coat all strictly tailored as if made of more substantial material.

Uneven hemlines have been predicted for street wear, but they were negligible in this assemblage and not worn by the right people. The same may be said of sleeveless frocks, which have been persistently touted. Skirts were more sedate as to length than they have been. There were knees exposed, but not by our "best people."

Shoes of Every Color.

This is not saying there were not frivolous touches nor that styles were in any way subdued. Effective accents in the way of accessories emphasize the simplicity aimed at in the silhouette. Accents especially were contributed by the shoes, which never were so varied in color, material and design. Polka dotted shoes made their appearance. It was surprising how many purple shoes were worn by the better dressed. Crepe, plaited leather, reptile leathers and combinations of several textiles and textures might be observed on one shoe; blue shoes, green shoes and red shoes were commonplace. Most were of the fragile sandal type, though newer were the ties with two eyelets. Stockings woven in lace patterns were favored by the best dressed. Sunburn shades carried out the vogue of sunburn makeup.

Handbags lent the most bizarre touch to some costumes, as did costume jewelry. Wooden beads were especially remarked. One bracelet of tinkling little silver bells bid for attention. The popularity of gayly colored and patterned scarfs seemed undiminished.

Colors Vivid and Varied.

Colors, they were the evidence that women are not aiming at conservatism for all their desire for trimness of outline. Vivid purples liberally sprinkled the throng. The Patou nasturtium shades ranging from orange scarlet to russets stood out in number. Billiard green was frequently essayed and a brilliant blue probably outnumbered all other high color spots. Pastel shades and off-whites were popular, but the vogue of beige is waning, according to this crowd. There were many printed crepes, but not so many in large patterns and a coat of monotone usually veiled them.

The ensemble with short jacket on cardigan lines or bloused, some having hip-length capes and the ensemble with three-quarter length coat were outnumbered by wraps and topcoats only because of weather conditions.

Most of these latter were of the sports type. Furs were almost exclusively restricted to the popular scarf though there was a sports coat of palest beige lapin (rabbit skin, of which there were several replicas in the upper tier of boxes, where those spectators who value exclusiveness choose to have their seats.

Few Large Hats.

Very few large hats were worn by the elect, though a medium brim longer at the sides is succeeding the cloche. A new favorite is the fisherman's brim, which extends down over the neck, convenient for concealing bobs that are attaining an awkward length. A popular model was a hat whose brim was turned flat against the crown at the front and rippled into the fisherman's watershed at the back. Hats mostly were of baku, balibunt and other line weaves, trimmed flatly, or of felt, which, perhaps, as a concession to the weather, was quite as popular as it has been.

The shorter waistline and the tuck-in blouse so much touted by the experts were in evidence and always worn by the very smart. Lingerie touches, batiste ruffles decorated tuck-in blouses making them reminiscent of the old shirt waist.

A finely woven covert cloth registered well in ensembles, appearing in frosted blues, oxford grays, greens and a wide range of reds. Women fortunate enough to possess one of these probably were the best dressed for they were particularly suited to the day.

LINDBERGH FLIES WITH FIANCEE TO NORTH HAVEN, ME.

Mother and Sister of Bride-Elect in Party That Lands at Morrow Summer Home on Island.

By the Associated Press.

NORTH HAVEN, Me., May 18.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, his fiancee, Miss Anne Morrow, and other members of her family rested in seclusion tonight at the Morrow summer estate on this little island, 12 miles off the coast of Maine.

Lindbergh, Miss Morrow, her two sisters, Constance and Elisabeth, and Mrs. Morrow landed about midafternoon in a little cove in Penobscot Bay before the Morrow home. They were accompanied by Josephine Graeme, Mrs. Morrow's secretary. The flight was made from New York in an amphibian cabin plane after a short stop at Portland (Me.) airport to refuel.

Soon after dinner the entire group entered a beach car and drove away, presumably on a trip about the roads on the western end of the island. Anne Morrow was driving. Lindbergh was seated beside her. Before leaving for the pleasure jaunt, the Colonel taxied the plane up the beach and moored it on the Morrow lawn, close to a large evergreen tree.

No information regarding the plans of Lindbergh and Miss Morrow was given out, but the "official spokesman," whose name was not divulged, said he would hold a conference with members of the press tomorrow morning.

Four guards, whose only answer to questions was: "I don't know," were about the grounds, keeping newspaper reporters and photographers at a distance.

Noted Portrait Painter Has Commission Here

Louis Betts Executing Portrait of Socially Prominent St. Louis Girl; He Has Painted Many Other St. Louisans.

LOUIS BETTS.

The peculiar penchant of an Arkansas boy for spending his playtime with pencil and paper has resulted in the development of one of America's foremost portrait painters. Louis Betts, now of New York, is in St. Louis to paint the portrait of a young girl of Brentmoor place, whose family is prominent in the city's social life.

A small, diffident man, who would rather be known by his works than his words, Mr. Betts discussed nearly everything but himself with a Post-Dispatch reporter at Hotel Chase yesterday. His wife, Giavonna Kurzenknabe Betts, daughter of a Chicago art collector, whom he met 31 years ago while painting her portrait, was with him.

The artist, who is 55 years old, was born in Little Rock. His father, Edward D. B. Betts, was a well-known landscape painter. Hardly was Louis Betts able to hold a crayon when he began sketching flowers, horses, anything he saw. The walls of his room soon became plastered with drawings. His father chuckled and encouraged him.

As the boy approached adolescence his father urged him to paint still life. The elder Betts, returning from a fishing trip, would say, "Louis, paint that trout, but do it quickly, we're going to have it for supper." So often Louis painted and later helped eat the fish.

Portraits Bring $10,000.

Then he got his first commission. Bishop Fitzgerald of Little Rock ordered a still life and was so pleased with its execution that he paid Louis $10. Today his portraits bring between $5000 and $10,000.

After the boy grew up he went to Chicago. William Kurzenknabe, collector and connoisseur, heard of the young painter and commissioned him to do oil studies of his three daughters. A year later he married Giovanna, the eldest of the three.

Asked how he came to marry the eldest daughter, Mrs. Betts interrupted, "Just have an artist in your home and you'll find out how it happens. We were both interested in art—I was studying at that time. Naturally, an unusual friendship developed."

Is Nationally Known.

Betts, then 23 years old, and his wife went to Philadelphia to study at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. There he won the first three-year Cresson European scholarship.

They went abroad and roamed through Europe, Betts copying assiduously the old masters of Spain, Italy, Holland, France. There, among the art treasures of history, his talent in portraiture matured.

They returned to the United States and Louis Betts quickly became a nationally-known name. Since then he has painted prominent persons in every section of the country.

A few years ago the late George Warren Brown, St. Louis shoe manufacturer, saw some of Mr. Betts' paintings in New York and promptly ordered portraits of several members of his family. Later Louis Mahler of Brentwood Park commissioned Mr. Betts to paint his two daughters.

Dislikes Moderns.

Last week Mr. Betts returned to St. Louis to do a portrait of a girl whom he describes as a particularly paintable subject. Each morning she sits for him in her Brentmoor home and by the end of this week the portrait probably will be completed.

Mr. Betts is a member of the New York Institute of Arts and Letters and of the National Academy. He won the first Altman prize of the academy in 1926 with an imaginative portrait of an ancestor.

He is a close student and admirer of Raeburn, Velasquez and Frans Hals. The so-called modernists he characterizes as "involved in the post-war disease." "Although, of course, they have made a contribution in the matter of form and design," he added.

Mrs. Betts quickly objects to any statement that she has been a stimulus and help to her husband. She has given up painting and prefers to be known simply as an old-fashioned wife.

ALLEGES RATE DISCRIMINATION

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 18.—Discrimination rather than increase is the aim of the hearing brought by Little Rock and other Arkansas towns relative to freight rates in the State, J. C. Murray, traffic manager of the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce, explained on cross examination today.

Examiner Russell M. Brown of the Intetrstate Commerce Commission this afternoon was hearing testimony alleging discriminatory rates from the Northeast and South into Arkansas. It was said that Missouri and Mississippi River port had preference in the making of the rates.

PILOT KILLED, ARMY MOCK WAR CONTINUES

Blues Crush Reds in Attack—Mid-Air Crash Fatal to Flyer.

By the Associated Press.

WRIGHT FIELD, Dayton, O., May 18.—An air attack on Cincinnati and Lunken airport and a review of the 200 United States Army planes engaged in the mock air war over Ohio at North Airfield, Columbus, today followed the biggest sham battle of the mimic war which was marred by the killing of one aviator.

The "attack" on Cincinnati was not a part of the tactical maneuvers but was a demonstration of air forces. The Second Bombardment and Third Attack groups from Wright Field composed the attacking forces while First Pursuit Group from Norton Field and the 95th Pursuit squadron from Wright Field made up the defending detachment.

Major-General Dennis E. Nolan, commander of the Fifth Corps area, reviewed the array of planes at Norton Field after the Cincinnati attack following which the planes returned to their respective stations.

The "battle" over Linden, a suburb of Columbus, this morning in which Second Lieut. E. L. Meadows of Nashville, Tenn., was killed and Second Lieut. A. F. Solter of Los Angeles injured, was by far the largest encounter of the sham war and resulted in almost utter disaster for the Red army, stationed at Norton Field. Fifteen bombers, 15 pursuit planes and 32 attack planes of the Blue army with headquarters here, set out about 8:30 a. m. on a raid on an imaginary reserve depot near Norton Field, the Red army headquarters. They were encountered by 42 pursuit planes of the Red army and the battle began. Planes of Lieutenants Meadows and Solter, both of the 95th Pursuit squadron, from Rockwell Field, Cal., crashed in mid air when signals are said to have become mixed. Both planes dropped in flames and Solter leaped in his parachute to save his life.

More than 100 planes engaged in various tactical maneuvers and umpires declared that the attacking Blue army had made a 100 per cent effective offensive. The Blue attack group cleared the way for the bombardment squadron that followed a few minutes later, laying theoretical destruction to the imaginary ground forces of the Red army as well as playing havoc with the air forces.

The Red pursuit group that put out to ward off the attack failed in its mission, the umpires ruled, and credited the attackers with a complete victory.

The attack on Norton Field followed a day of intense activity on the part of both armies.

Army officials in charge of the maneuvers said that Meadow was killed in the air when his plane was struck by Solter's ship. Meadow, officers said, was leading the flight group of three planes and gave a signal for a turn. Changing his mind without warning to the other flyers, Meadow was struck as Solter followed the signal.

Solter's plane burst into flames and the aviator leaped in his parachute, escaping with burns about the face. Officers said that Meadow's ship was cut in two by the impact of the collision.

THIS IS IRIS SUNDAY AT SHAW'S GARDEN

1000 Varieties in Test Garden and 200 in Another Group.

Irises to everybody's tastes are blooming for Iris Sunday today at Shaw's Garden.

For the connoisseur whose tastes run to $60 a plant, there are the 1000 fashionable varieties, one plant to each kind, in the test garden south of the Henry Shaw residence. For people who merely like flowers or spectacular loveliness there are the thousands of blossoms in 200 varieties in the older iris garden surrounding the red brick Linnaean House.

And what a spectacle it is! For sheer magic in colors, nothing surpasses it in the whole year at Shaw's Garden. There is witchery in the blending of these iris-tints, each so brilliant and distinctive, into one great iridescent cloud. No wonder they call them iris, after the rainbow goddess.

Almost every shade and combination may be found, in every color from blue or yellow that is barely more than white to purple that approaches black. There are irises with light "standards," or upright petals, and dark "falls," or pendant petals, and irises with dark standards and light falls.

There are bearded German iris, beardless Siberian iris and merely "mustached" iris tectorum, or roof iris. It is related that when famine called every foot of ground into cultivation centuries ago in Japan, the women, who ground the roots of the tectorum for face powder, found a way to grow it on the thatches of their homes.

I Want to Sell State Assignment

I would like to sell a State assignment for one place in each State exclusive in this, I should say, famous invention patent pending, title name Heel Plate, made of that aluminum metal; suitable covering will be used; cost $1 or $2 to make. Will be appreciated at $3 or $4. If not I will buy them back after a year's use. Will sell cheap—$500 and 5 per cent. The buyer should make some of his own things to work with. I can supply the specially made emery grinding wheels and sample. Then two or three men can make 15 or 25 a day. Well, say 25 pairs a day would be $7500 in 300 days or a year. By that you can figure how many years it will take to make a set for one out of a hundred people throughout a State. Wake up to the necessity of the thing or -erious need, especially the money the business will make. Owner, Inventor.

50 CLINIC VICTIMS STILL IN HOSPITALS, 14 NEAR DEATH

Death Toll of Cleveland Explosion and Fire, 124—Thirty-Six Funerals Held, With City in Mourning.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., May 18.—Fourteen of 50 persons still in hospitals here, fighting against deadly effects of poison gases they inhaled in the Cleveland clinic disaster, are not expected to recover, doctors said tonight, and the others probably will suffer lung troubles for years to come. The death toll stood at 124. Oxygen treatment was continued for those in hospitals and some of them were given transfusion of blood.

Mrs. Arthur Richards of Sharon, Pa., died today and Herman Kornfield, 74 years old, of Cleveland succumbed tonight. He had stopped at the clinic for a physical examinatioon.

Investigations of the tragedy will continue Monday, Coroner A. J. Pearse said. Much of today's inquest was held in secret.

Under direction of the Coroner, a vivid picture of the beginning of the catastrophe was presented just before the adjournment was taken, by Buffery Boggs, steamfitter, star witness in the investigation.

Down in the charred basement store room where fire in X-ray films released the deadly gasses of the disaster—which chemists today said was enough to have killed hundreds of persons—Boggs reenacted the opening scenes.

The steamfitter showed where he was working when he observed smoke coming from the storage room. "I saw no fire," he said.

Boggs showed the investigators then how he had taken a fire extinguisher and played it upon the smoldering films, only to find that the smoke increased. He told how he finally felt himself being overcome, and showed where he escaped through a trapdoor to the outside of the building.

Despite all their investigation, however, Coroner Pearse and the officials who are working with him, are partly baffled by the case. They hope to have a "final sum-up" of the tragedy, however, next week.

Members of the Coroner's commission include County Prosecutor Ray T. Miller, Gen. H. L. Gilchrist, chief of the United States Chemical Warfare Service; Commander D. C. Walton of the United States Naval Medical Bureau; J. J. Fournier, State industrial inspector, and John E. Cranshaw of the United States Bureau of Mines.

Thirty-six victims of the disaster were buried here today. Among them was Dr. John Phillips, a co-founder of the clinic, and Dr. Charles Edward Locke, brain specialist, another member of the clinic staff.

Throughout the day Cleveland was in official mourning for the dead. The huge American flag in Public Square and others throughout the city were drawn to half staff.

BOOTLEGGER HELD IN KILLING OF TWO BY DRUNKEN DRIVER

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 18.—Accused of selling liquor to two men whose careening automobile killed two boys and seriously injured two others yesterday, John Nelson, 28 years old, was held on a charge of accessory to murder.

The Coroner's jury also recommended that William Sweeney, 27, driver of the car, be held on a manslaughter charge and his companion, Frank O'Dee, be held as an accessory to manslaughter. Sweeney and O'Dee were arrested after their car plowed through the group of youngsters playing in the street. Police said they were intoxicated, and the pair admitted buying liquor and named Nelson as the bootlegger. They were driving a stolen car.

Jerome Boyd, 13, and Robert Hemmel, 12, were fatally hurt. LE Roy Rousseau, 13, and Harold O'Grady, 13, were injured seriously.

William G. Benham Paroled.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—William G. Benham, convicted at Columbus, O., of using the mails to defraud in connection with the International Note and Mortgage Co., and sentenced to serve seven years in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, was paroled today by Attorney-General Mitchell. Benham, who is 68 years old, is in bad health.

PRIORITY OF U. S. CLAIMS ON RAILROAD IS DENIED

Federal Appeals Court Decides Against Government's Claim of Preference.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals here yesterday affirmed a decision of the Federal District Court at Minneapolis denying the Government's claim to preference over other creditors of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad for money lent to the railroad and advances made to it shortly after the Government relinquished its war-time control of the railroads.

The amount of the Government's claim was $2,924,000 and it contended that under Federal statutes this claim held priority over all others, the railroad having been in receivership since 1923.

ATWATER KENT SCREEN-GRID RADIO

There's one more test which you alone can make

SCREEN-GRID! Wonderful new principle of radio—applied by Atwater Kent with almost unbelievable results.

Old words like "tone," "selectivity" and "distance" blaze up with new meaning. The power and reach of a giant—with a voice like a heavenly choir . . .

All over the United States this new Screen-Grid Atwater Kent is winning friends by the thousand. Reports come back: "Extraordinary," "Unbelievable," "Getting stations I didn't know existed," "New chapter in radio history." And so on.

What do you say? How do you like the needle-point separation of programs, the round-up of far-away stations, the flexible volume, the simple and quiet operation, the unclouded purity of reception?

Imagine having an Electro-Dynamic radio set so silently operated that you actually need a tiny dial-light inside the set to tell you whether it is turned on or off!

In pauses between musical selections or between the words of a speaker, this set is quiet—unmurmuring—with the silence of skilled engineering and smooth, unruffled operation. And then when the music comes—what reality! What immense power! What sweetness of tone!

We, who have concentrated 27 years' electrical experience in the Atwater Kent Screen-Grid set, and have proved its quality by every conceivable test and by the enthusiasm of owners everywhere—now we should like to know what you think. Won't you visit an Atwater Kent dealer today, or have a home demonstration—and let us know?

INCABINETS The best of American cabinet makers—famous for sound design and sincere workmanship are cooperating to meet the demand for Atwater Kent Screen-Grid Radio in fine cabinets like these.

SPECIAL SESSION LIKELY TO LAST INTO AUTUMN

Leaders of Both Houses Abandon Hope of Early Adjournment and Plan Short Summer Recess.

DEBENTURE URGED AS TARIFF RIDER

Sentiment for It Growing in House—If It Is Added, Hoover Will Have Excuse to Veto Bill.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The special session of Congress, which was scheduled to enact a farm bill, carry out "limited revision" of the tariff and adjourn about July 1, actually will extend into Autumn and may continue right up to the regular session on Dec. 1. Leaders of both Houses have definitely abandoned hope of an early adjournment, and now are preparing for a prolonged siege to be interrupted only by a brief Summer recess.

The present plan is to take the recess when the farm bill has passed both Houses, and when the Tariff Bill has passed the House of Representatives. These events are expected to occur about the same time, approximately two weeks hence. The Senate plans to recess for a month or six weeks, and the House for two months.

The period of the Senate recess will be occupied by the Finance Committee in the arduous labor of rewriting the House tariff bill. At least three weeks and possibly four will be consumed in hearing witnesses after which the committee will undertake the actual task of rewriting the bill. If history is repeated, the changes will be radical and thorough. The fact that Senator David Reed (Rep.), Pennsylvania, a leading spokesman of the industrial interests, is to handle the bill in committee, indicates that the drastic duties fixed by the House on manufactured goods may be still further increased.

Hoover Said to Be Displeased.

The Senate upon reconvening will receive the bill from the Finance Committee, and then the fight will start. That it will be long and bitter cannot be doubted. Republican members of both houses as well as a formidable section of the Republican press, were startled at the drastic duties in the bill as it came from the Ways and Means Committee and President Hoover, who asked merely for "limited revision," is reported to be severely displeased. Democrats in Congress are almost solidly opposed to the bill in its present form, and nobody expects that it will be modified downward under the direction of Senator Reed.

Debenture Plan as Tariff Rider.

One of the exciting prospects in connectinon with the bill is the certainty of a determined effort to affix the farm debenture plan to the tariff. This assumes that the debenture plan will be eliminated from the farm bill in the meantime, which is taken for granted. Some of the farm organizations have contended from the beginning that the debenture provision properly belongs in the tariff bill instead of in the farm bill since it is so intimately related to the tariff.

The fact that the debenture was a product of the Senate, coupled with President Hoover's vigorous opposition to it, has contributed to its weakness in the House. But it is obvious that sentiment for it is growing rapidly in the House, partly because Congressmen from the farming districts are beginning to hear from their constituents. It is entirely possible that by the end of August the debenture may command a majority in the House.

Chances for a Veto.

If Congress sends President Hoover a tariff bill containing the debenture plan as one of its provisions, he will have no choice but to veto it in view of his emphatic condemnation of the plan.

This has given rise to the interesting theory now current in the cloakrooms. It is said that the President, remembering the difficulties which overtook the Taft administration in consequence of a prohibitive tariff measure, and foreseeing that the present bill would get him into endless trouble, would welcome the inclusion of the debenture plan because it would furnish him with an excellent ground for vetoing the whole bill.

It is a fact that members of the Senate farm bill are being urged to abandon their insistence on the debenture plan as a part of the farm bill, on the assurance that it will have much better chance of being enacted into law as a part of the tariff bill. This probably will be advanced by some of them within the next few days as a reason for changing their views on the debenture feature.

Senate Expected to Recede.

The Senate farm bill containing the debenture clause, goes to conference next week. The outcome is assured. The Senate conferees may insist for a while on retaining the debenture clause, but eventually they will report that the House conferees cannot be induced to accept it, and will recommend that the Senate recede. A vote will be taken, and a sufficient number of Senators who previously voted for the debenture will change their votes and the House bill, minus the clause will be adopted.

While the Senate, after the recess, is engaged in its acrid struggle over the tariff, the House will virtually mark time. Reapportionment and possibly the national origins immigration bill, will be the only measures before it. The steamroller character of the House organization is a guarantee that both will be promptly disposed of, one way or the other. Then the House will have the remainder of the summer and autumn on its hands. It may follow the custom of taking consecutive three-day recesses, or the leaders, moved by generosity and a wealth of time, may permit some of the members who have only been in the House 10 or 15 years, to make their maiden speeches.

Held for Murder Over Liquor.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., May 18.—A Coroner's jury today ordered Gus Markham held for murder in the first degree murder and Mote Robbins as an accessory in the killing Tuesday night of John Krivitz, farmer, at his home north of Poplar Bluff. Testimony was that the two men had been at the Krivitz home drinking whisky and beer and that Krivitz refused to sell Markham any liquor after he realized Markham was becoming intoxicated. A fight started and Markham shot Krivitz when the latter followed him from the building. John Krivitz Jr., 17, son of the slain man, was the chief State's witness.

CHILD GOES ON SPENDING SPREE

Takes $35 From Mother's Purse and Visits Candy Stores.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Helen Marie Gucker, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Gucker, fed up with things about the house, decided to "step out." Spying her mother's purse, she extracted $35 and started on a spending spree. The mother missed her daughter and notified police. Meanwhile Helen had patronized the candy shops and gorged herself on hot dogs and other edibles.

Finally she wound up in a barber shop, where she usually went for a bob. The barber was a bit suspicious when he saw her roll and found no adult along. He too called the police. Helen was taken for a bit of a ride, which she seemed to enjoy. She queened over all hands at the station house for an hour, when "Dad" and "Mom" arrived and escorted her home. She still had $32.86 of the $35.

TWO HELD FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING AFTER CRASHES

Warrants Issued for Erwin W. Grimm and Gene M. Dancy.

Erwin W. Grimm, 4063 Cleveland avenue, and Gene M. Dancy, 1262 Boland place, Richmond Heights, were charged with driving automobiles while intoxicated in warrants issued yesterday by Assistant Circuit Attorney Joseph Lennon. They were arrested following separate crashes Friday afternoon.

Grimm, who is president-treasurer of the Grimm Stamp & Badge Co., manufacturers of the Missouri automobile license plates, was arrested after his machine sideswiped a car driven by Nat Weiner, 3745 Lindell boulevard, when Weiner was waiting for the traffic signal to change at Lindell boulevard and Newstead avenue. He was taken to City Hospital, treated for lacerations of the ears and pronounced to be suffering from alcoholism. A partially filled bottle of wine was found in his car by police. He had been sued for divorce the day before.

Dancy, a salesman, was driving south in Grand boulevard and crashed into the rear of another automobile which had stopped for the Olive street intersection. A City Hospital physician said he was intoxicated.

W. A. BUSCH AND ASSOCIATE WILL SEEK NEW TRIAL

Former St. Louis Broker and George A. Grieble, Cleveland, Convicted of Mail Fraud.

William A. Busch, former St. Louis broker, and George A. Grieble, Cleveland architect, were convicted by a Federal Court jury yesterday of using the mails to defraud in selling bonds on several Cleveland buildings which later became involved in receivership proceedings with loss to the bondholders.

Their attorneys announced they would file motions for new trial and arrest of judgment and would appeal if the motions were denied. The motions probably will be filed and argued tomorrow. Pending disposition of the motions, Judge Faris denied the defendants bail and ordered them taken in custody by the Marshal.

After a trial, which extended over 10 days, the jury found them guilty on six counts. Each count is punishable by a maximum prison sentence of five years or a $10,000 fine or both. Usually sentences on several counts are made to run concurrently.

Deliberated Less Than Three Hours

The case went to the jury late Friday. After deliberating two hours and nine minutes the jurors were permitted to go to their homes. They returned to the Federal Building to resume deliberations at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, and 40 minutes later their verdict was reported to the Court. The jurors told a Post-Dispatch reporter they had considered the evidence against Busch Friday and against Grieble yesterday morning, agreeing that each was guilty, as charged.

Grieble is 54 years old. Busch is 49.

Busch, who has lived for several years at Eldorado, Ark., formerly conducted the brokerage firm of W. A. Busch & Co. in the Federal Commerce Trust Building. In 1923 he took on a new line of real estate mortgage bonds, issued through the Securities Guaranteed Co. of Cleveland, headed by Thomas G. Sloan, a realty operator and reputed millionaire. The bonds were secured by several apartment structures and a public market place, in course of construction. Grieble, an architect for Sloan, was vice president of the Securities Co.

$2,000,000 of Bonds Sold.

After Sloan died suddenly in April, 1925, was discovered he had mixed proceeds of the bond sales with his personal estate, which was of doubtful solvency. Funds to complete the various buildings were lacking and the projects passed into receivership.

Approximately $2,000,000 of the bonds had been sold in 18 states. Busch's firm, with sales of $500,000 in St. Louis and vicinity, led the rest. Busch was the only broker indicted. Grieble and J. Sidney Greene, sales manager for Sloan, were indicted with Busch, but Greene obtained a severance and appeared as a Government witness. Whether he will obtain leniency for his testimony has not been disclosed.

In charging use of the mails to defraud, the Government asserted Busch and Grieble continued the bond sales after they had been informed at a conference in Cleveland, June 29, 1925, that Sloan's estate was insolvent and could not furnish funds to complete the buildings. The defendants testified they were assured just the opposite, that the estate was solvent and would supply the necessary funds.

Bonds Called "Fool-Proof."

The Government introduced witnesses and documentary evidence to show the bonds had been described as "fool-proof," good as Government bonds, and "not dependent upon men or events." Busch replied that Greene, the high-pressure sales manager, was responsible for the sales tactics. Busch said he thought so well of the bonds he and members of his family invested $48,000 in them, which was more than the commissions on his $500,000 sales. Grieble, denying knowledge of the sales methods, testified that he was an architect, not a financier.

In his instructions to the jury, Judge Faris said the trial had been lengthy and somewhat confusing. Referring to Busch's testimony about the $48,000 investment in bonds, the Judge inquired:

"Did he actually buy them for himself and family, or was he unable to sell them and they died on his hands?"

U. S. SUES TWO VALIER, ILL., LIQUOR MAKERS FOR $41,733

Suit for $41,733 for "taxes and penalties under the Internal Revenue act and the national Prohibition act for the manufacture and sale of liquor and the operation of a still without a permit," was filed in East St. Louis Federal Court yesterday by United States District Attorney Baker against two residents of Valier, Franklin County, Illinois.

The suit, against Joe Bozzardi and Joe Marco, alleges that $39,000 is for taxes due under the revenue act and the balance for penalties, principally for the operation of a still without a permit. Both men were found guilty of liquor law violation in Federal Court at Danville, Ill., last September.

Walter Hagen Finds Wales 'Good Golfer and Good Chap'

Champion Coaches Prince in Iron Play and They Win Foursome From Sassoon and Boomer.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 18.—Walter Hagen had a wonderful game of golf today with the Prince of Wales. He said so tonight, when he returned to London from the sporty and aristocatic Swinley Forest course where with his royal highness he defeated Sir Philip Sasson and Aubrey Boomer, British professional, one up.

The pro from the United States was enthusiastic over the game he saw the heir to the British throne play. "He's a good player, and a good chap," said the four-time open champion.

"He hits the ball well and is keen on his game all the time. He's about a 90-man now and with the attention he is giving his strokes and analysis he is applying he ought to improve a lot in not a very long time."

Hagen and Boomer smilingly denied a facetious suggestion that they had been kidnaped when they were taken out to play the Prince, but their disappearance from a big hotel on the Strand was sudden and carefully concealed.

Led Out Side Door.

Neither of the two professional golfers in the afternoon's "foursome" had the faintest idea where they were going when they were steered away from the crowd of newspaper men and photographers thronging the main entrance of the hotel. The golfers were led through an obscure side exit to a waiting automobile that dashed off at top speed.

The motor car was first driven to York House, the Prince's residence, for a brief pause and then picked up Sir Philip, to land the party at Swinley Forest where the Prince of Wales waited.

The match was speedily started and early developed into a close affair. Neither side had an advantage at any time of more than two holes, which was the margin of the Prince and Hagen at one stage, and ended with a victory at the home hole for the Anglo-American pair, by virtue of a good drive by the Prince and great shot to the plateau green from Hagen's brassie.

After luncheon, Hagen went out on the course with the Prince and coached him in iron play, a feature of his game the Prince is anxious to improve.

"I showed him how to put a little hook on them," said Walter tonight. "He got better distance right away. He learns quickly."

Wales Enjoys It, Too.

There was every indication that the heir to the throne enjoyed the spirited, little match and Hagen obviously had a good time.

"What I like about the Prince's game," said Walter in summing up the play of his royal partner, "is his keenness and the generally clean way he hits the ball. He may hit a little over hard at times, but he watches the effect of each shot and tries to see how to better it next time if it doesn't go just as he wanted it to.

"We kept up a running conversation about shots and points in the game all the way around. The Prince was trying out a lot of things and the game was really more of an experimental affair than a real contest although naturally the competitive spirit was there."

Summing up the game of His Royal Highness, the open champion declared himself impressed most by the clean way the Prince goes into the ball and his putting. "He strokes the ball very nicely," said Walter.

One proof that the Prince liked his afternoon's experience was that he immediately expressed a desire for another go with the British champion from the United States. Hagen said they would play again when he returned after playing in Germany. The next match probably will be at Sunningdale, the Prince's favorite course.

SENATE REDUCES PENALTY IN PASSING BOMBING BILL

Changes Minimum From 30 to 2 Years; Measure Goes Back to House.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 18.—The Senate today passed the Krause bombing bill, which passed the House several weeks ago, but amended it so that it will be necessary to return it to the House.

As amended in the Senate, the bill provides a penalty ranging from two years' imprisonment in the penitentiary to death for maliciously exploding a bomb. As passed in the House the minimum penalty was fixed at 30 years' imprisonment.

$3500 JUDGMENT FOR PATIENT

School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo., Loses Suit.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 18.—A judgment of $3500 awarded to Peter O. Noren of Kirksville, against the American School of Osteopathy of Kirksville, in Knox County Circuit Court, for injuries suffered in an osteopathic treatment given him by E. C. Abramson, a student, was affirmed today by Division No. 1 of the Supreme Court.

Noren charged he suffered a dislocation of one of the vertebrae in his neck, by a treatment given by Abramson under a requirement of the college that students give a prescribed number of treatments before graduation. The judgment was against the college. The Knox County Circuit Court ordered a new trial and Noren appealed to the St. Louis Court of Appeals, which reversed the new trial and directed the reinstatement of the verdict. The college appealed to the Supreme Court.

PLANE FALLS, BOUNCES INTO AIR UPSETS; PILOT SLIGHTLY HURT

Carthage (Mo.) Flyer Suffers Only Gash and Bruises in Toledo (O.) Accident.

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., May 18.—Donald Wood, Carthage, Mo., crashed in a new airplane he was testing west of here today. He escaped with a gash on his forehead and bruises. The injuries were not serious.

Wood was making tests with the plane when the motor failed at a height of about 30 feet. The plane fell suddenly, struck a ditch, bounced 75 feet into the air and then landed upside down. Mrs. Wood and E. H. Valkenburg, designer and builder of the plane, saw the accident. Wood jumped from the wreckage and ran to his wife to assure her he was not badly hurt.

Leaps to Escape Fire.

Tony Zacher, 50 years old, was forced to jump to the ground from his quarters over a garage at the rear of 4237 West Sacramento avenue, when the structure was fired by a truck which burst into flames while Henry Greifzer, 4467 Elmbank avenue, attempted to crank it early yesterday morning. Neither was seriously hurt. Greifzer turned in an alarm. Damage to the truck, the building and another truck was estimated at $500.

9 CHILDREN ARRESTED IN RIOT IN NEW YORK

Officers Also Seize 17 Adult Communists Who Had Anti-Police Banners.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 18.—A riot that for a time threatened to break up the police parade was quelled this afternoon by a squad of officers who fought an angry mob in front of the communist party's headquarters at 26 Union Square, and arrested 26 persons, including nine children. One of the prisoners was so badly beaten he had to be removed to Bellevue Hospital.

As the paraders swung around the bend in Broadway at Fourteenth street, they saw a huge red-lettered sign, "Down With Walker Police Brutality!" on the communists' building. It was allowed to remain undisturbed for more than an hour. Then Lieut. Patrick S. Hickey and two patrolmen entered the building and arrested Benjamin Lifshitz, communist district organizer, for erecting the placard without a permit. Lifshitz submitted to arrest, but when the police began to rip down the placard, a crowd of 500 sympathizers staged a demonstration. Lieut. Hickey sent in a call for reserves and was soon joined by five more patrolmen and three Sergeants.

At this moment 50 children belonging to the Young Pioneers of America, a communist organization which had been holding a convention on the fourth floor, trooped downstairs. Hooting and jeering at the policemen, they marched up and down in front of the building with placards. The police vainly tried to shoo them away. Lieut. Hickey ordered the arrest of nine of the young ringleaders.

The group huddled together and with each new arrest burst out cheering. The police could not keep them quiet. One patrolman, stepping up close to the boys and girls, stamped his heels heavily on their toes. A plain-clothes detective placed his hand over the mouth of a girl not more than 14 years old and shoved her back among the prisoners. Fists flew shirts and coats were ripped. As the crowd, now numbering more than 2000, closed in, the detective dashed in among them, seizing more prisoners and using his hands and elbows indiscriminately. Women began to protest at the language used by the detective and some of the patrolmen.

Two patrol wagons drew up and the prisoners, who now numbered 19, were bundled in, together with banners seized by the police and shreds of the original placards.

Within a few minutes a fresh disturbance broke out. A shoe, thrown by some one in the crowd, hit Patrolman William Carreher on the head. Carreher later declared he had been hit by an iron bar and showed a dust mark on his cap to prove it. He and McCabe corraled nine more prisoners, mostly women. In the melee Herman Habel, 33 years old, of Coney Island, was badly beated. He was taken to the hospital with a skull injury.

Those under 16 were charged with juvenile delinquency and the older prisoners with disorderly conduct.

PERU'S PRESIDENT APPROVES TACNA-ARICA SETTLEMENT

Proof of Country's Sincere Love of Peace, Leguia Says.

LIMA, May 18.—President Leguia of Peru, in an interview with the Associated Press regarding the Tacna-Arica settlement, said:

"The settlement announced at Washington by President Hoover in the exercise of his good offices at the request of the two parties embodies the supreme ambition of the Peruvian people and Government. This is new proof that Peru gives for its sincere love for peace. Our pacific ideals and desires to live on friendly and peaceful relations with our brothers in Latin-America, as well as with the nations of the whole world, inspired us to settle the old Tacna-Arica dispute.

"Our decision to abide by and respect, as Peru ever has respected, all of its international agreements, also caused us to accept the settlement. This has been another proof of the respect Peru feels for the person of the arbitrator in whose hands we placed our main foreign problem in accordance with the Peruvian-Chilean protocol signed at Washington a few years ago.

"The Tacna-Arica settlement probably makes Peru the first nation in the whole world to comply with the terms of the multilateral treaty signed in Paris last year outlawing war, as removal of the old quarrel also removes any further cause of discord and hostility with Chile which not only obliged the brother countries to be constantly alarmed, but jeopardized American life and peace. Peru is proud to be the first country to observe the terms of the Kellogg pact."

CAPONE PROMISED AID TO CLEAN UP CHICAGO

Head of Crime Commission Appealed to Him as Husband, Father and Citizen.

CHICAGO, May 18.—Frank J. Loesch, 76-year-old head of the Chicago Crime Commission, told today how he made a direct appeal to "Scarface Al" Capone, for aid in reducing crime in this city. Capone he said agreed to help "make Chicago a better place in which to live."

Loesch said he thinks Capone kept his promise, and after doing so voluntarily sought imprisonment in Philadelphia to escape the vengeance of rival gangsters.

The meeting took place last September in a hotel at the solicitation of Loesch.

Loesch said he appealed to Capone's sense of duty as an American citizen and as a husband and father, and asked him to turn from the path of transgression for the sake of Chicago.

At the end, Capone rose, extended his hand and said: "I'll help you, Mr. Loesch. Will you have a drink?"

Loesch accepted the promise, but refused the drink.

"I asked him about the future—what he was going to do," Loesch said. "He declared he wanted to live in Florida and give up his Chicago connections. 'In Florida,' he said smiling, 'I'll be left alone and they can't drive me out.'

Loesch said he remarked that he assumed Capone was an American citizen. The statement seemed to hurt Capone who assured Loesch he was born in Brooklyn and that his wife and child were Americans.

A Philadelphia dispatch quotes Judge Walsh who sentenced Capone and Cline as scoffing at the idea that the gangster went to prison for fear of the vengeance of rivals, explained that the gangsters sought leniency before pleading guilty. Capone and Cline were moved from Moyamensing to Holmesburg prison today.

TAFT ASSAILS SOCIAL CLIMBING IN COLLEGE

Chief Justice in Speech Before Psi Upsilon Fraternity Pleads for More Scholars.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—William Howard Taft, Chief Justice of the United States and former President, today told delegates to the convention of his college fraternity, Psi Upsilon, that in his opinion extra-curriculum duties were "carried to a great extreme" and that "we must get our public and private school down to a simpler curriculum.

The jurist, who makes speeches only on rare occasions, joked with his audience which included Secretary of State Stimson, Senators Bingham, Goff, Moses, Sackett and Walcott, and others prominent in official circles. He struck a serious note on the "slump" in scholarship, however, explaining that "the war player havoc with a great many conceptions and we haven't gotten over it yet.

"There has been a good deal said about the low standard of scholarship shown in the comparative tables of college fraternities," he said, "and it really, to those who are deeply interested, is a source of the greatest anxiety. I was delighted to hear that the zero point had been reached and that we were going up on the other side. Certainly we ought to."

The Chief Justice observed that many students went to school "for social reasons" and sometimes "to establish themselves by reason of the fact that they are called college men."

Terming this situation a "dreadful waste," he added, "when a man grows as old as I have, he then feels like restoring to profanity as he ought not to do at the misconception of life and the use of education and the use of universities by these feather-headed young men that don't look ahead to know the opportunities they have and to appreciate those opportunities.

Speaking of "strange words" used in educational vocabulary, most freely by "recent graduates of normal schools," he said, "I am very certain that were they called upon to define in any way by which anybody else could understand, what they mean, there would be a stir in educational circles. The trouble now is the superficial nature of what we are trying to teach and we must get our public schools and our private schools down to a simpler curriculum so that when we know a thing we know it.

Time and Money Wasted.

"I don't want to criticise athletics" or a "great many extra-curriculum duties," he added, "but I think there is a great deal of time and money wasted in those things which many of you most enjoy."

Secretary Stimson, who was Secretary of War in the Cabinet of the ex-President, and later occupied the post of Governor General of the Philippines, which the Chief Justice once held, paid tribute to his former chief.

SUPREME COURT HANDS DOWN DECISIONS IN 6 CIVIL CASES

Former Employe's $18,000 Verdict Against Judge & Dolph Upheld.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 18.—Division No. 1 of the Supreme Court today handed down decisions in six St. Louis civil suits.

A judgment of $18,000 obtained by Priscilla Messing against the Judge & Dolph Drug Co. for injuries suffered while employed by the company was affirmed.

The Court affirmed a judgment of $25,000 obtained by E. C. Vaughn against the Merchants' Bridge Terminal Railway Co. for injuries suffered when Vaughn, assistant yardmaster for the company in the railroad yards at Madison, was knocked from a box car being switched past a line of standing cars.

A new trial was ordered in the $25,000 damage suit of George Bell of St. Louis against the St. Louis Terminal Railroad Association, because of errors in instructions to the jury in the lower court trial which resulted in a verdict for the company. Bell filed suit for $25,000 damages for injuries in a fall from an ice-covered step of a Terminal Association locomotive, on which he was working as a fireman, in January, 1925.

The Court affirmed a verdict for the St. Louis Public Service Co. in a damage suit filed by Ida Parlon of St. Louis over injuries she was alleged to have suffered through premature starting of a street car on which she was a passenger. Commissioner A. M. Seddon, who wrote the Supreme Court opinion, held there was no reversible error in the trial.

A judgment of $16,200 obtained by the Jones Bros. Real Estate Co. against John Hill of St. Louis for commissions alleged to be due in a deal for sale of the Majestic Hotel, St. Louis, which never was completed, was reversed outright.

PROPOSES CONSOLIDATION OF RADIO AND WIRE COMPANIES

Gen. George S. Gibbs Tells Senate Committee Present Law on Communications Is Reactionary.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 18 — Consolidation of radio, telephone and telegraph companies into communications companies regulated by the Government was proposed as an economic necessity today by Major-General George S Gibbs, chief signal officer of the army, in testimony before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

He declared that the present law, which forbids radio communications to own telephone and telegraph stock, was "unfortunate and reactionary."

The committee is considering a bill to set up a Federal communications commission to regulate radio, telegraph, telephones and cables in interstate commerce.

"The method of the present law is all wrong," Gibbs said, adding that the "time will come when all communications will be carried on by companies formed to operate by wireless as well as by wire." He asserted that "erection of artificial barriers between radio and wire companies makes for inefficiency."

The army, he said, which controls all communications in Alaska, "would not have done so well if it had had to contend with such barriers."

GARNER PROPOSES SLIDING SCALE OF DUTIES ON SUGAR

Texan to Offer Amendment, if Permitted, to Make Tariff Low When New York Price Is High.

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The House took a day off today after eight days of debate on the tariff bill, but farm state Republicans continued to plead for higher duties on agricultural products before the Ways and Means Committee Republicans in executive session.

Representative Garner of Texas, the minority leader, announced that if the opportunity arose he would propose an amendment to the sugar schedule providing a sliding scale of duties, instead of the 2.40 cents a pound on Cuban raw carried n the bill. The present rate is 1.76 cents.

Under Garner's proposal, which may be offered on the floor only in event the Republicans decide to open the sugar schedule for amendment, the highest duties would be effective after the new York price, minus duty, had dropped to a low point. The rates would be less as the price increased and after it reached 5 cents a pound, no tariff at all would be collected.

Garner's Schedule of Rates.

As an example, Garner said if Cuban raw sugar was selling for 1 cent a pound at New York, the duty would be 3.20 cents, making the wholesale price, plus duty, 4.20 cents. At one and one-half cents, the duty would be 2.80; at 2 cents, 2.40; at 2½ cents, 2.00; at 3 cents, 1.60; at 3½ cents, 1.20; at 4 cents, .80; at 4½ cents, .40, and at five cents no duty.

The Texan said he understood his proposed rates were not acceptable to the "sugar people," but appeared to him to be "a fair, just, and equitable solution of the problem."

"If one must judge by past experience," he said, "it will give to the American people not exceeding 5½-cent sugar at all time, which I think is a reasonable price and constitutes the cheapest food in America.

"Moreover, it will enable the beet and cane sugar people to know in advance that they are going to receive at least $4.20 per one hundred pounds for 96 degree sugar and they could plant their crops accordingly. This proposal would probably stop in the future continued agitation as to the sugar rate. When Cuban sugar was selling low, as it is now, the rates would be high. When Cuban sugar was selling high the rates would be low.

"It seems to me this is to the best interest of all concerned, Cuba as well as the United States. I submit the suggestion for the consideration of the country as well as the House of Representatives."

The idea of a sliding scale sugar tariff is understood to be receiving some study from advisors of President Hoover, who have indicated disapproval of the rates carried in the pending bill. The exact basis upon which they have been working, however, has not been disclosed.

Bank of Commerce Moves to Mercantile Trust With Which It Is Merged.

More than $70,000,000 in securities and $138,000 in cash and currency was removed in two armored cars under police guard yesterday from the National Bank of Commerce at Broadway and Olive street to the Mercantile Trust Co., at Eighth and Locust streets preparatory to the opening Monday of the Mercantile Commerce Bank and Trust Co., formed by a merger of the two depositories. The currency on hand had been diminished earlier in the day by the transfer of $170,000 to the Federal Reserve Bank. An additional unestimated amount of valuables was contained in safety deposit boxes.

Curious crowds paused in the rain to watch the armored cars followed by police riding crews proceed east on Olive street to Fourth street, north on Fourth to Locust street and west on Locust to Eighth street to the west door of the new bank. Police and 18 detectives under Lieut. John P. Coakley were stationed along the route and at each bank.

Moving began early in the day when nine trucks with 50 men started hauling away desks, chairs, filing cabinets, and other office equipment. In the afternoon while the money and securities were being transferred, another crew of 40 workmen was busy removing the safe deposit vaults in sections and taking them by truck to the new location. Moving of the vaults continued through most of last night.

As soon as the two banks closed their business day yesterday clerks began balancing their books and scores of them were kept busy until a late hour last night. Most of the employes of the merged bank will report for duty for the official opening tomorrow morning.

At a meeting held late yesterday officers of the merged bank were announced as follows:

Chairman of the board, George W. Wilson; president, John G. Lonsdale; vice presidents, W. L. Hemingway, Arthur F. Barnes, Davis Biggs, W. M. Chandler, W. B. Cowen, F. E. Eaton, Thomas C. Hennings, G. 'PRETTIEST PRINCESS' BREAKS ENGAGEMENT

Irene of Greece Refuses to Wed Prince Christian of Schaumburg-Lippe.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 18.—Princess Irene of Greece, second youngest daughter of the late King Constantine, today broke her engagement with Prince Christian of Schaumburg-Lippe, nephew of King Christian of Denmark.

It is understood that Princess Irene, who is the prettiest member of the Greek royal family, disavowed the engagement because she found that she would be obliged to live almost permanently in the austere atmosphere of German monarchist and military society at Potsdam. Prince Christian lives usually at Potsdam.

Princess Irene is herself of Danish and German origin. Now she will have to wait for another marriageable European Prince and the stock of eligible royal bridegrooms is dangerously low.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, May 18.—Wheat closed higher to lower, the market still being affected by the huge supplies present and prospective. Corn was influenced by wet weather and closed higher.

In the cash grain market Saturday soft wheat was 1c and 2c lower. Offerings comprised about 4 cars, but there was little call. Country run No. 2 sold at $1.17, with some offered at $1.16. Damaged sample grade wheat sold at 80 to 85c. There was little hard wheat for sale. Market was nominal. No. 1 hard was offered on a basis 1c over the Chicago July price. Corn was steady to 1c lower. Higher prices were attributed to light receipts. The demand was narrow, mill and order buyers filling only most urgent needs. Oats were steady. Demand was good. Offerings were moderate. Mills, shippers and elevators were the buyers.

After opening lower July wheat sold back to previous close and September fractionally higher. Winnipeg was up fractionally early. Liverpool was closed and will not reopen until Tuesday. The same influences as recently affected market continued to exert themselves. Corn was higher early.

July wheat opened at $1.03⅞, September wheat $1.07⅞, July corn 88¼, and September corn 90c.

Local wheat receipts which were 47,600 bushels, compared with 63,800 a week ago and 105,000 a year ago, included 7 cars local and 27 through. DOLLAR-A-BUSHEL WHEAT MISSED BY ONE CENT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 18.—Influenced by reports that millions of acres more wheat were to be harvested this season than last year, wheat prices today at times dropped to almost $1 a bushel. Winter wheat plantings alone in 17 countries that have reported thus far aggregate 130,810,000 acres, against 131,582,000 acres last year. Notwithstanding that price recoveries took place, the wheat market undertone throughout the day was heavy.

Wheat went down today to the lowest price May delivery in Chicago has touched since 1915 and within a cent of $1 per bushel.

Speculators led the selling, which was based on over-plentifulness of supplies and on crop prospects pointing to additional big accumulations. Starting 6c to 7c lower, wheat afterwards showed some recovery. Corn, oats and provisions were relatively firm with corn opening unchanged to 1 cent higher.

With latest reports today from Kansas, the banner wheat State, the country saving general crop conditions were very promising, traders here largely were occupied in efforts to fix limits of probabilities. Aside from the fact that wheat values were abnormally low, however, no immediate reason was apparent for wheat buying, and even ardent friends of higher prices conceded that any advance must come from crop damage, export demand, farm relief measures or all three sources combined.

For the time being, holidays abroad were interfering with export business. However, prices today had got close to the old-time dollar a bushel level, a number of standing orders to buy appeared and the market responded with rallies.

Corn advanced in the face of wheat weakness. The principal reason was that wet weather prevailing over a large part of the corn belt, and that delays to corn planting were being intensified. Furthermore, a good-sized reduction of the corn visible supply total on Monday was expected. Cash demand was active, with sales to Montreal reported and loading of corn here for Quebec.

Oats rallied as a result of corn strength.

All deliveries of rye paralleled the action of wheat, and sold today at a new low price for the season.

Provisions held about steady, influenced by upturns in the value of hogs.

EXCHANGE COMITTEE AGAINST DELAYED DELIVERY PLAN

NEW YORK, May 18.—A delayed delivery plan, urged by some member firms of the New York Stock Exchange, under which the time for delivery of securities would be extended from 24 to 48 hours, has been rejected by the Governing Committee of the exchange.

Rules of the exchange call for delivery of stock by 2:15 p. m. on the day after sale and this was felt by some brokers as being too short a time to complete all the necessary transactions.

The question was referred to a special subcommittee which, in its report advising against the new plan, said it did so because any help provided from such a plan would not be sufficient to call for its adoption and because of the possibility that its inauguration "would possibly cause very dangerous results from the standpoint of the credit situation."

CREDIT OUTLOOK CAUSES NERVOUS STOCK SELLING

Prices Depressed by a Steady Trickle of Liquidation in a Quiet Half-Day Session.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Stock prices were depressed by a steady trickle of nervous liquidation in a quiet half-day session on the New York Stock Exchange today, as the credit outlook appeared still more cloudy.

With all 12 Federal reserve banks now on a 5 per cent rediscount basis, the San Francisco bank having fallen into line, Wall street is inclined to the belief that one of the last obstacles to putting the rate up to perhaps 6 per cent in Eastern centers has been removed and it is understood that both the New York and Chicago directors are prepared to raise their rates as soon as the reserve board in Washington will permit.

Anxious About Next Few Weeks.

With a call money market so sensitive that the rate jumps to 14 or 15 per cent on a moderate calling of loans, traders contemplate the next few weeks with some anxiety, as it is estimated that the exercising of rights to additional stock financing will require about $1,000,000,000 before early July and much of this drain upon the money market will coincide with the requirements of the midyear settlements.

It is reported that some lenders are asking as much as 9½ per cent for the shorter maturities in the time money market, the highest rate in many years.

In contrast to the rather unsettled aspects of the credit situation, the rather meager business and industrial news that came to hand today continued generally favorable. The week-end reviews stressed the surprising maintenance of near capacity operations in the steel industry.

Short Covering Rally.

Such important issues as American Can, Packard, Lambert, U. S. Steel, Western Union, Warner Brothers and Canadian Pacific lost a couple of points or so, although short covering toward the close caused a slight rallying tendency.

The Advance Rumely issues again broke rather sharply, dropping 6 and 7 points, and the preferred regained much of its loss before the close. Adams Express, which has been rather inactive of late, dropped 35 points to 600 in a single sale. Commercial Solvents and Case Threshing lost 6 points and more. Allis-Chalmers sold down about 5 points.

Coppers were again heavy, Anaconda selling down about 3 and Greene Cananea more than six points. Kennecott, however, held nearly steady, with prospects of an increase in the dividend rate next week.

Few Points of Strength.

There were a few points of strength. General Electric made an extreme gain of four points, and Allied Chemical was well bought. Burroughs Adding Machine and Sparks Withington were again buoyant, mounting about 10 and 8 points to new peaks. Curtiss Aero was sent up eight points. General Motors and Radio overcame waning tendencies and closed firm.

In the commodity markets, cotton sold up more than $1 a bale on short covering on an unfavorable weather map, but encountered realizing. Wheat eased a little further, but corn rallied about 1 cent a bushel on weather unfavorable to planting.

Foreign exchanges were dull and inclined to heaviness, with sterling cables touching $4.85, making gold imports probable.

INTERSTATE AIRLINES ACQUIRED BY AVIATION CORPORATION

NEW YORK, May 18.—The Aviation Corporation, new $200,000,000 holding company, today announced acquisition of Interstate Airline, Chicago mail and passenger Transport Co.

The new acquisition links the Aviation Corporation's northern and southern systems, which were previously unconnected.

Graham B. Grosvenor, president of the holding company, said that control of the Chicago company had been obtained from the United Aviation Corporation through an exchange of stock.

With Interstate the Aviation Corporation has approximately 7000 miles of established air transport lines. It has in the North the Universal, Embry-Riddle and Colonial Airways, extending from Minneapolis and St. Paul to Montreal and Boston. In the South it has the Southern Air Transport stretching from Atlanta to El Paso.

The Interstate 632-mile trunk line has a junction with Universal at Chicago and with Southern at Atlanta. Interstate also has a 145-mile spur from St. Louis joining the trunk line at Evansville, Ind.

Silk Market.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Raw silk futures closed steady; sales 550 bales; May (1), July 4.80; September 4.75. Open market quotations (sixty days basis): Shanghai steam—extra B 4.90; Canton filature extra A 14-16S 3.85; Japanese stock double extra rot A 5.05.

MAJOR FEAR IN MARKET IS CREDIT

Between Now and Mid-July the Exercise of Stock Subscription Rights Will Drain Off in Excess of a Billion Dollars—Midyear Settlements Impose Burden.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Sentiment in the stock market still turns hot or cold on small provocation but underneath the trading runs a strong feeling that the credit situation might become acute with the approaching mid-year settlements. Here and there the market gets evidence of slower business but the unmistakable full flow reported by key industries keeps the general outlook clear. Even building once more is beginning to expand whereas the ability of the steel and motor industries to maintain their record pace is a matter of common remark. So the major fear of the stock market continues to be elsewhere than in business. The skies just now are darkened by an unprecedented combination of demands about to be imposed simultaneously on strained credit structure. Two heavy loads shortly must be taken over by the money market; the approaching mid-year settlements impose normal credit burden second only in size to that at the year-end and between now and mid-July the exercise of stock subscription rights will drain off in excess of a billion dollars.

Apprehensive of July Developments.

"With the heavy demands thrown on the money market in connection with the quarterly and even the month-end settlement periods everybody has been made familiar in 1929. In the absence of any reversal in reserve policy it is natural that the market should become more apprehensive than usual with the approach of July. The turn over at that season exceeds any other except that at the year's end, and so far we have no indication that the reserve will lift its hand in relief. But that is not all. In recent years and more especially in recent months an increasing proportion of corporate financing in this country has been undertaken through offerings of subscription rights to stockholders giving the latter an opportunity to buy shares from the company at a given price usually below the market before a specified date. This practice has grown at an accelerated rate until it now presents an entirely new phase of corporate financing and affects vitally our computations on brokers' loans. Since a substantial part of these funds enter into the loan portfolios they tend to swell loans at the time payment is called.

Billion Dollar "Rights" Call.

"In the next 60 days through the maturity of subscription rights, American corporations will dip into the country's money bags far in excess of $1,000,000,000. This huge sum represents what stockholders will be called upon to pay corpoorations between now and mid-July in the exercise of subscriptions rights. It involves an amount so large as vitally to bear on credit developments at a season of the year when the mid-year settlements themselves present a problem. Figures on past sums involved in connection with the exercise of stock subscription rights have not become a part of our statistics yet it is scarcely an exaggeration to say that the payments to be called from stockholders in the next 60 days run to a total as large as that for the entire calendar of 1928. Here is a new method of financing that must be recognized in any appraisal of the expansion in brokers' loans and on which new light presumably will be shed with developments of succeeding weeks.

Prices Hold Near Peaks.

"With the credit signals set against the stock market prices hold with remarkable tenacity close to the peak levels for all time. Essentially the market remains high for the reason that leading American corporations are reporting tremendous earning gains and that so far no convincing signs of a recession in business have come to hand. Until it gets evidence that business is falling off the market seems destined to remain fundamentally bullish, although on the surface it chances character readily with shifts in the credit news. While there is a general belief that the Reserve feels satisfied with the gradual reduction in member banks loans on securities—these have fallen $314,000,000 since the early February warning—fresh signs of disagreement within the Reserve family tend to shake confidence in the methods employed by the central bank authorities.

Kennecott Meeting Monday.

NEW YORK, May 18.—That part of the street which has been bullish on Kennecott Copper prospects has not changed its views that the outcome of the directors' meeting scheduled for Monday will be productive of developments favorable to shareholders.

PITTSBURG, May 18.—Ray Kremer, the pitching hero of the Pirates during their recent championship years, has been what the bleachers call "a big bum" this season. He has gone to the hill frequently, but he has been knocked out four times. And so when the Cardinals punched left-handed Fred Fussell for two singles and a double and the southpaw filled the bases by issuing a pass in the fourth inning, the fans passed the razzberries when the big Frenchman was called from the bull-pen.

"Well, this will be his fifth straight knockout," one wag remarked.

"Who'll relieve Kremer?" another asked.

"Burwell now pitching," they would have said at Sportsman's Park.

But Kremer was no "big bum" this afternoon. He was a master of curves and speed, with a jumping fast ball and a sweeping curve that darted over the corners of the plate and baffled the hard-hitting Cardinals. Douthit tripled to right center in the fifth and Andy High followed with a single to left and in the seventh Douthit got another single to right. But that was the extent of the attack against Kremer and the Pirates. Inspired by the comeback of their ace great pitching star, jumped on Bill Sherdel and gave the Cardinals a beating in the series final, 6 to 3. It was the fifth defeat of the trip for the Red Birds and it was the first series they have lost during this road campaign.

Kremer Big Star.

Kremer was the big defensive star of the Pirates. Paul Waner made one great play, robbing Frankie Frisch of an extra base hit with a spectacular running catch in the eighth inning. But except for that play the Pirates didn't have to do anything sensational i nthe field. Easy flies and many bounding grounders were such that the Cardinals could manufacture out of Kremer's slants. Extra base hits by the Pirates featured the afternoon for Sherdel. Comorosky started the bombardment in the second inning. Bill gave him a slow ball and the Pole

Dempsey Has Signed To Fight Again for a Million, Normile Says

By the Associated Press.

RENO, Nev., May 18.—Jack Dempsey, dethroned king of heavyweight battlers, will enter the ring again at Agua Caliente, Tijuana's neighboring rival in Mexico, in an attempt to regain the world's championship honors, Gene Normile, who was Dempsey's manager for the first Tunney fight, announced here today.

Normile arrived in Reno from the East last night by train and this morning took the Reno-Los Angeles plane of the Nevada airlines for San Diego to complete arrangements for Dempsey's attempted comeback.

While in Reno Normile showed friends an agreement signed by Dempsey which carries a million dollar guarantee for the former heavyweight king to meet an opponent at Agua Caliente at a time to be fixed later.

Normile is reported to have said that the contract is a result of negotiations that started when Dempsey was offered $800,000 to enter the ring at Agua Caliente and that the one million dollar figure was finally agreed upon.

It is understood that those backing the proposed fight include Wirt G. Bowman, head of the syndicate which is promoting Agua Caliente, and Baron Long, race track man and owner of the U. S. Grant Hotel in San Diego. Bowman is related by marriage to Gov. Rodriguez of Lower California.

Clyde Van Dusen taken into the lead after the first quarter, saved ground while making pace in the going, responded to a light shaking up in the stretch, held his opposition safe. Naishapur slow to get going and raced wide, began moving up after five furlongs and after being blocked in stretch where he swerved, closed with a rush when clear. Panchio prominent for the entire mile and benefitting by strong ride, outfinished Blue Larkspur. Latter went well to the stretch turn, where he dropped back, but came again gamely after going to inside in stretch and just failed to get up for third. Windy City raced evenly and held on stubbornly. Voltear tired in the drive. Ben Machree closed with a rush. Karl Eitel tired. Minotaur was always far back. Essare had early speed. Folking was done after reaching the stretch.

$2.00 mutuels paid. Clyde Van Dusen, $8.00 win, $2.70 place, $3.06 show; Naishapeir, $4.72 place, $3.26 show; Panchio, $3.50 show.

By George Daley.

(Of the New York World Sport Staff)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 18.—H. P. Gardner's Clyde Van Dusen, a son of Man o'War, galloped to the glory and riches of the 55th Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, here today, to a tumult of noise from the throats of 60,000 half-drenched, semi-hysterical women and half-mad men.

Lightning was flashing and thunder rolling as the good son of a great sire took the track at the start and, making all the pace under the guiding hands of Linus (Pony) McAtee, won by a good two lengths.

Thundering down through the stretch between a human lane of dripping enthusiasts, who recked not of the rain, the chestnut colt with his blazed face standing out boldly against the gloom, beat Chaffee Earl's Naishapur, the Tijuana Derby winner, while three lengths back Three Ds Stock Farm's Panchio earned third money, a short head before Blue Larkspur, the outstanding favorite, with four or five others in a cluster.

It was a triumph for an Eastern owner with what has come to be called a Western horse.

Pays $3 to $1 to Win.

He paid $8 for each $2 ticket, or 3 to 1. Naishapur, a son of Omar Khayyam, himself a Derby winner, paid $4.72 to place, or just short of 8 to 5, while Panchio, which was one of the 11 field horses, paid $3.06 for third.

Clyde Van Dusen ran the mile and a quarter over the sloppy, greasy track in 2:10 4-5—a good performance, all things considered.

Windy City finished fifth and Voltear sixth.

Race Won at the Start.

McAtee, from one of the extreme outside post positions in the big field of 21 starters, beat the barrier a step or two and by so doing slammed the door of racing fame in the faces of all the others. Clyde Van Dusen, a superior mudder, had the speed to cross over to a position on the rail inside the first quarter-mile without bothering a single horse in the battling field, and once in the lead he had the stamina to go on with danger never threatening.

McAtee rode H. P. Whitney's Whiskery to victory in 1927. His face was wreathed in smiles as he jogged back to the stand to have a huge blanket of roses thrown over the withers of his mount, and to reach down for a monster bunch of American Beauties himself.

Many in the throng, dripping wet but overflowing with enthusiasm, rushed out on the soggy track to congratulate the boy and all but mobbed him as he slid off the horse. The victory was popular. Clyde Van Dusen was second choice in the betting with a host of followers and these raved in their joy and exultation.

Mr. Gardner, who makes his home in Amsterdam, N. Y., was at the track but did not see his favorite win. He turned his back. He was too nervous to look on, but it did not take long for the news to reach him. His happiness knew no bounds.

Blue Larkspur, Off Among the Leaders, Runs Like a Horse Over-Conditioned

Clyde Van Dusen, trainer of the good colt named in his honor, did look on and his shouts rose above all others. He said:

"I love that horse. Once I saw him in front from that terrible outside position I knew he would win. He can run all day."

Clyde Van Dusen is the first son of Man o'War to win the Kentucky Derby.

Blue Larkspur, the favorite, had no excuses. He simply ran as if drugged by an overdose of preparation. He, too, broke with the leaders, and was in third place passing the stand the first time. Mack Garner placed him nicely, reasonably close to the pace, but when he called on him at the head of the stretch, the response was not there. The favorits battled on but missed third place by a head.

E. R. Bradley, who had counted on being the first man to win the Derby three times, smiled in defeat but under the surface was hurt, even though he accepted the condolence of his friends. He hated worst of all to send the news to his trainer, Dick Thompson, lying ill in the hospital.

Naishapur broke well enough, but soon dropped back and ran a game race through the flying mud to finish second. He came with a rush in the stretch from seventh place and deserved a better fate.

Gov. Sampson of Kentucky presented the gold trophy to a representative of Mr. Gardner in the stand of the stewards before the cheers had died away. He said in part:

"In recognition of the endurance, speed and superiority of this horse, we crown him with a garland of American Beauty roses. To his proud owner we deliver, on behalf of Churchill Downs, this gold trophy, engraved as a testimonial of a brilliant performance. We wholeheartedly join the owner in acknowledging the undisputed ability of the horse and jockey. It was a good race and a fair one and the sporting world will acknowledge the winner."

Money simply oozed out of the pockets of the holiday, merrymaking host. More than $800,000 passed through the mutuel machines on the Derby alone. The handle for the afternoon was estimated at $1,400,000, and the profit to the association, with all expenses paid, including the $50,000 added to the big race, must have been in the neighborhood of $40,000.

The race had a gross value of $64,475, of which $53,950 and a gold cup went to the winner—a rich reward. Naishapur earned $6000 for running second. Panchio $3000 for being third, while Blue

SOLDAN WINS DIVISION 1 TITLE IN TRACK MEET BY ONE POINT

WEBSTER GROVES IS SECOND, UNIVERSITY CITY, THIRD; FULTON TOPS DIVISION 2

By Jerry Bernoudy

Under a merciless rain which turned the Francis Field track into a veritable swamp, Soldan High school carried away first place honors in division 1 for the second consecutive year at the Ninth annual Washington University Interscholastic meet, staged on Francis Field yesterday. The west end athletes ran up a total of 37 points to just barely nose out Webster Groves by one point. University City finished third in the large school division with 24 points.

Fulton (Missouri) High School was a rather easy victor in division 2 with 40 points to 22½ for St. Charles which finished second. Benld (Illinois) High School, the winner in this division for three consecutive years, finished third with 20½ points.

Individual honors in division 1 went to Ormond Beach, stalwart representative of Pawhuska (Oklahoma) High School, who was the sole competitor for his school garnered a total of 15 points by winning all three weight events. Beach who is the Oklahoma Interscholastic champion in the shotput, set a new mark in that event by tossing the iron

Soldan's victory was largely attributable to its superiority in the track events, in which they took five first places, three thirds and a fourth. In the field events they totaled only 12 points. Fulton's triumph was even more marked in this respect than that of Soldan, for they scored all but three of their points on the cinders and failed to place first in only the half-mile event. The discouraging weather conditions proved more retarding to the efforts of the jumpers and pole vaulters than to the runners, and none of the marks made in these events were more than average.

Vieing equally for honors with Beach and Edwin Hall, scintillating Fulton sprinter, who shattered two records and won three first places in division two. In the first event of the afternoon, the 100-yard dash, he established a new mark of 10.2 seconds, an achievement which was little short of miraculous considering the water-covered condition of the track. His other new mark was hung up in the quarter-mile race when he covered the course in 53.2 seconds. He also led his field to the tape in the 220-yard and was anchor man in the winning 880-yard relay team.

ROBINS TURN TRIPLE PLAY; SPLIT EVEN WITH PHILADELPHIA

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, May 18.—The Phillies defeated Brooklyn by 8 to 6 in the second game of a double-header here today to divide the day's spoils. Brooklyn won the opener by 20 to 16.

The Robins helped their cause in the first game by executing a triple play, the second of the National League season. Holloway and Thompson singled to open the Philadelphia fifth, but O'Doul lined to Hendrick who stepped on first to double Thompson unassisted. Hendrick then lined the ball to Bancroft, catching Holloway for a triple killing.

SPORT SALAD by L. E. Davis

A Stand Patter.

I BOUGHT a "Walter Hagen" ball.
And "Walter Hagen" club;
But found, alas! that after all
I still remained a dub.

With stiff left arm and proper stance,
The ball I tried to biff,
But it was patent at a glance
That I was just a stiff.

Said I, as in my wrath I rose:
"With experts I am done;"
Then smacked that pellet on the nose,
And made a hole in one.

Since then I haven't touched a club,
For, be it understood,
I'd graduated from a dub
And quit while I was good.

As far as the baseball magnates are concerned, they don't care if it never rains on Sunday.

In fact, when that 13-month calendar is being perfected the baseball boys would be just as well pleased if it could be arranged so that all the rain could fall on Monday.

Northwestern Defeated by Michigan, 13-0

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 18.—A scratch single in the eighth by Oliphant, Northwestern first baseman, today cheated big Fred Asbeck, Michigan hurling ace, of a no-hit game, but his mates raked three Wildcat pitchers for a 13-to-0 victory. The win was the Wolverines' fourth straight and kept their Big Ten slate clear.

Oliphant's hit was a slow roller down the third base line which Myron was unable to handle fast enough. In addition to stopping the Northwestern batsmen cold, Asbeck led the 14-hit assault of the Wolverines, with three singles in four times at bat. Weinraub and Kubicek hit home runs for Michigan.

Only 28 men officially faced Asbeck, who walked three and fanned seven batsmen. Score:

QUALIFYING PLAY OF DISTRICT MEET TOMORROW

By W. J. McGoogan

Drenching rains yesterday morning forced the postponement of the 18-hole qualifying round of the fourteenth annual district golf tournament, which was scheduled to start at Sunset Hill Country Club, until tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock, when the field of 150 is slated to tee off.

A few twosomes had started the journey when it was decided to call them back and postpone the event until Monday. The time schedule which was announced for yesterday will hold tomorrow.

Match play which was to have started tomorrow will begin Tuesday and the open date which was set for Friday will be used for the semifinal round, with the finals Saturday. All matches up to the semifinals will be at 18 holes, while the semifinals and finals will be at 36 holes.

The second monthly amateur handicap tournament Friday and the two preceding days of practice have caused quite a lot of locker-room talk over the probable winner of the district. The two outstanding favorites seem to be Clarence Wolff and Dick Bockenkamp, Wolff because of the fact that he is playing his home course and Bockenkamp because of his excellent showing in the tournament Friday and during other practice rounds. Dick shot a 68 Friday, the day before he had a 79 and the day before that a 73. He seems to be right at the top of his game.

Jim Manion, defending champion, also must be reckoned with, while there are several others who are not rated very highly that are conceded a chance to surprise with a victory.

The course was in fine shape Friday. Despite recent heavy rains there were few soggy spots and it appeared that by starting time Saturday it would be in perfect condition, but the soaking rain of yesterday may cause a very slow track for Monday, although the course drains very well.

Tomorrow afternoon the professionals of the district are scheduled to play at Woodlawn, but so far this season they have been unable to get through with their weekly rounds.

Team play in the Women's District Association is scheduled for North Hills tomorrow. This competition also has suffered from postponements this season.

The women's individual tournament, which was scheduled for Algonquin, Friday, May 3, but was postponed on account of rain, will be held Friday morning at Algonquin, with competitions in all flights for low gross score, low net and fewest putts.

CLYDE VAN DUSEN WINS DERBY IN HEAVY DOWNPOUR

Jockeys Appear Dazed.

Most of the riders appeared dazed immediately after the race. Pounded with chunks of mud from the heels of the fast flying thoroughbreds for a mile and a quarter as they were, the boys could give few impressions of what went on about them.

All agreed, however, that neither they nor their horses were at their best under the adverse conditions of this, the worst Derby track in years. The riders as well as the horses were ridden out at the finish, and the same could be said for most of the drenched spectators who roughed it through a rainstorm to see this race.

As to the others, their turn may come but, for this afternoon, they were just mud-spattered sweepings for the dustpan of blasted hopes.

12-Minute Wait at Start.

This left 21 striving for the prize and prestige. In the paddock before the struggle trainers stood about trying to cover up their nervousness in deep puddles of water. When the bugle sounded and the thoroughbreds, with their jockeys in bright, new colors, paraded, the picture was one of rare beauty in spite of the dark skies. On the instant the applause broke out as hearts began to pump and the blood pressure go up. It was the first vent to emotions deeply stirred. On top of the applause came that restless buzzing which always marks a crowd when excitement reigns.

The start far up at the head of the stretch was delayed a full 12 minutes, but Bill Hamilton finally snapped the barrier and to a fair sendoff. The race was on to the roar of the throng which grew in volume until the final crash came.

Victor Has Won $111,187.

It literally was a one-horse race, with drama lacking, and yet the thrill was there. Folking was second for a time, while Panchio, Essare, Voltear and Blue Larkspur were the only ones of the others to be close enough to Clyde Van Dusen at any time to suggest winning until Naishapur closed with a rush. The Nut came from well back but could not get in the picture.

Clyde Van Dusen ran an even race over the sloppy track. The fractional times were 0:24, 0:49, 1:13 2-5, 1:42 4-5, for the mile, and 2:10 4-5.

The Man o'War gelding won $55,768 as a 2-year-old last season, including the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes, and by his sterling victory this afternoon jumped into that select silver circle of horses winning $100,000 or more. His total earnings now stand at $111,187. His fame is world-wide.

Browns Have Hit .305 In Last Seven Games; Oppose Indians Today

By James M. Gould

Organized baseball having absolutely no such thing as "flood control" another of the Browns' games yesterday was added to the long list to be played later on. Today, however, the weather wet-blankets have promised to shut the water off and permit the final of the series between the on-stride-again Brownies and the Cleveland Indians.

Thus far, three games have been contested between the two clubs and the Indians are scalpless with each defeat being by a one-run margin. Crowder beat them in Cleveland 4.—3, and here, 1—0. A combination of Ogden, Blaeholder and Collins won a 7—6, decision Friday. The same pitching stars nominated for Saturday duty will perform today—Sam Gray for the Browns and Willis Hudlin for the Indians.

A victory for Howley's men would bring their home-stay percentage to an even .500 which is fair enough considering that they started the sojourn by losing four straight. With the Chicago White Sox due tomorrow for a set of three, there seems little likelihood of the Browns going away Wednesday any lower in standing than they now are which is high enough at the present stage of the 154-game competition.

Shires Will Be Missing.

Chicago will present an interesting if not especially brilliant batting order. Three of their older pitchers—Thomas, Lyons and Faber—and two of their youngsters—Grady Adkins and southpaw Bob Wieland—are good enough to give any team a battle but the infield outfield and catching departments are not keeping Howley, Huggins and Connie Mack awake because of defensive or offensive strength.

St. Louis fans will be deprived of a sight of Art Shires, for a brief time in spring camp, captain of the team. Shires recently offended what is considered good taste in baseball by landing several hard rights and lefts to the eye and chin of Russell (Lena) Blackburne, the manager. Shires, who freely admits that he is the best first-baseman in the game, is under suspension and, so far as the White Sox are concerned, is through.

From hitting about .067 against the Athletics and Yankees, the Browns have leaped to life and in the three games against Boston, two with Washington and a pair against Cleveland have batted .305 for seven games in a row. And, the record has been made against some pretty good pitchers—Ruffing, Morris, Liska, Braxton, Walter Miller and Miljus, for instance.

Seven Wins by One Run.

The same spirit which imbued the Browns a year ago when, almost unanimously picked to finish in the cellar, they finished third, is carrying the club along nicely this year. Results of one-run games indicate the morale, the "fight" of a ball club. It is therefore interesting to note that of the 16 victories to the Browns' credit, seven of them have been by this slimmest of margins.

The Browns depart Wednesday night for Cleveland where, in five days, they play the Indians, six games, a double-header being scheduled for Thursday. They move on to Detroit for four games and then, with an off-day intervening, tackle Washington, Philadelphia, New York and Boston in that order. They return home for a series with the White Sox, June 19.

Cardinals and Browns Even in Season's Play

WHEN Pittsburg defeated the Cardinals yesterday by a 6—3 score, they brought about a rather unique situation in St. Louis baseball. It was the tenth defeat for the Cardinals in 26 games. A look at the American League standings shows that the Browns' record for 1929 is exactly the same—16 victories and 10 defeats.

The percentage of both St. Louis club is .615.

Sidelights on the Derby

By John T. Rogers,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

CHURCHILL DOWNS, LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 18.—History repeated itself in the first race when Eskimo galloped in a winner in the first race. He was not favored as a likely winner among the form players. It was this horse that took the opening race on Derby day of last year.

Eskimo rewarded his backers with $12.26 for $2. In the opening betting this colt was posted at approximately odds of 12 to 1. The price was said to have been beaten down with commissions from outside bookmakers. It is known that $2000 was thrown into the machines at the last moment on a commission from a Louisville bookie.

An extension to the far end of the clubhouse, accommodating 5000, noticeably relieved congestion among the privileged spectators. The attendance this season appeared to be at least 10,000 under that of last year and the year before.

The betting was heavy in the machines that were opened for wagers on the Derby at 10 a. m.

Crowd Crashes Gates.

As always happened after the third race on Derby day thousands crashed the far gates of the back stretch, and literally swarmed over the beautifully landscaped grounds within the field. Most of these were lads who had wistfully witnessed the first races from the stable sheds. The mounted police failed as they always have to hold the gate crashers back.

It's a Dizzy Whirl.

This is the way one writer for an Eastern publication started his introductory paragraph for the day's story. "The town is all steamed up over the Derby. Some folks are already stewed up and there are more stews to come. Even the hotels are full."

The ubiquious—One-Eyed Connelly was here. He bought a ticket.

"Naw," he exclaimed: "I didn't crash the gate. It was too easy. And besides, there are too many amateurs butting in on my racket. All they want is publicity." He modestly remarked, "so I beat them to it this time by buying a ticket."

That was Mr. Connelly's idea of news.

Is This You, Victor?

A Louisville newspaper listed as among celebrities present "Mayor Julius B. Miller of St. Louis." Not so good.

Race Worth a Fortune.

As late as 1913 the Derby paid only $5475 to the winner. Its value has been augmented until today the Churchill Downs Corporation adds $50,000 to the stake.

Track a Mire Once More.

A stiff wind that blew for 45 minutes from the south through warming sunbeams brought with it very black clouds and a downpour that drenched spectators in front of the stands and the luckless ones in the field.

The course, which had been drying out was deluged and all hope for a reasonably good track was blasted once for all. This storm, accompanied by lightning and claps of thunder, cast the Downs in darkness.

Horses' Colors Not Discernible.

The fourth race, that preceding the classic, was run in a driving rainstorm through water several inches deep on the course, and in the teeth of a terrific wind that swept down the home stretch from the post. So dark was it that the colors were not discernible a hundred yards distant. The horses were at the five furlong post less than a minute. Amid flashes of lightning the event was won by Lightning Jones, second choice in the betting.

UHLE WINS HIS SEVENTH STRAIGHT; TIGERS BEAT SOX, 11-4

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., May 18.—The Detroit Tigers clawed the White Sox badly today, hitting 17 times to win an 11-to-4 victory. A heavy rain which fell throughout the game made the field a sea of mud and at times lent comedy to the antics of the skidding fielders.

George Uhle rose to new heights, the victory being his seventh in as many starts.

Wray's COLUMN

Purely Financial.

THE American League has abandoned its "most valuable player" award. Internal dissensions, jealousies and SALARY DISPUTES were caused by this feature, it was asserted by officials who knifed their own offspring.

Apparently, it was a Frankenstein that Ban Johnson created some seven years ago, when he evolved the plan and promulgated the rules governing the affair. The thought of the owners who recently killed the award seems to have been that it puts a club into the hands of players honored, one which enabled them to batter their way into higher and more unreasonable salaries than they already enjoy.

The "jealousies and the internal dissensions" you can put into your right eye and wink without noticing them. It was the salary bomb that caused the dirty work at the cross-roads.

Mickey Cochrane had to kick over the beans by becoming a holdout, following the announcement that he was the 1928 "most valuable."

Rules Were Handicap.

IN the main it is just as well the American League cut short this contest, at best but a gesture, under the rules laid down governing it. The writer was a member of the commission from its beginning, and twice moved to have the rules changed. It was argued that the rule which prohibited a player from gaining the award more than once was unfair. Also, there seemed no valid reason why a playing manager should not be eligible to receive the award.

However, the rules were NOT changed, with the result that on more than one occasion the award was a mockery, significant of nothing. In the seven years in which awards were made, the following were voted the honor: Sisler, Ruth, Johnson, Peckinpaugh, Burns, Gehrig and Cochrane.

But for the rule limiting the honor for any individual to once, Ruth would have gained the award at least FOUR times and perhaps more. Peckinpaugh, Burns and Cochrane would not have been chosen, but for the embargo on Ruth.

Five Managers Barred.

THE rule barring managers was even more ludicrous for at one time during the operation of the "most valuable" award there were five playing managers who at least had a theoretical look-in at the honor—George Sisler, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Eddie Collins and Stanley Harris.

The National League organized its award on a more solid and sensible basis and admitted managers to competition and permitted successful players to succeed themselves, if they were able.

The "most valuable player" feature is interesting to fans and will not cause any jealousies or dissensions, as advertised, if the best man, irrespective of conditions, is admitted to eligibility.

The First "Most Valuable."

YEARS ago the first "most valuable player" award came to grief. It was created by an outside interest, Hugh Chalmers of auto industry fame. He gave an automobile annually to the best player, an honor which Cobb seemed to have hog-tied.

This trophy was suspended, however, more than 15 years ago, when the famous Lajoie-Cobb scandal developed. With both players near to a tie in batting form, on the closing day of the season Lajoie made eight hits in the final double-header of the season, here in St. Louis, apparently putting Lajoie in front and giving him the auto.

The phenomenon was investigated and President Johnson decided that the affair was a conspiracy to put Lajoie over as the leading hit

MONROE KENNEL CLUB TO OPEN NEW TRACK AT DUPO IN JUNE

Anthony P. (Tony) Foley has abandoned, for the present at least, the idea of becoming an oil magnate, and will open a pretentious greyhound racing plant on his recently acquired 22-acre tract at Dupo, Ill. Work on the track will be started immediately, Foley said yesterday, and the track will be in operation within the next month. Foley took an option on the land six months ago and purchased it for $30,000 six weeks ago.

A corporation was formed under the Illinois laws to be known as the "Monroe Kennel Club," the corporation to run for 99 years. The incorporators are listed as Edward F. O'Brien, 5136 Lexington avenue; Cornelius J. O'Brien, 3741 Lincoln avenue, and Bartholomew Holland, 4468 Belmont avenue. East St. Louis. Besides Foley's regular downtown office, temporary offices have been opened in the Bowman & Miller Real Estate Co., 122 Broadway, East St. Louis, to comply with the Illinois law. Permanent headquarters will be at the track as soon as it is completed.

The club, according to the incorporation papers, is authorized to conduct greyhound racing, automobile racing and other racing contests and shows; to conduct agricultural fairs, livestock shows, automobile shows and other fairs, shows, exhibitions, entertainments and amusements."

The grandstand will seat 60,000 persons and there will be ample space for several thousand to watch the races from the rail. The construction of the plant will be under the supervision of Paul Holland, who also supervised construction of the Ramona plant, another Foley project, the operation of which was halted by a ruling of the Missouri Supreme Court holding dog racing unlawful in this State. The Ramona track was recognized as one of the finest in the country.

Foley also was interested in greyhound plants in Atlanta, [illegible]

O'Rourke was the only available third baseman able to hold the job, Oscar Melillo got his chance at second.

And that's all that he needed, apparently. His record at second base shows that in 25 games he has made only two errors and one of these was questionable. He is proving a great defensive asset and could he only become a resounding hitter he would open the eyes of the baseball world.

Melillo is not just "finding himself." He was always brilliant. Sickness put him on the shelf, for two or three years. Before that he set a record for infielding at second base that still stands.

In playing at second base for the Milwaukee club he handled 1086 chances in 152 games, which is better than Frankie Frisch's major league mark of 1037 chances in 154 games, made in 1927.

This stands as the best record in any league for the same number of games. Fred McGuire of Toledo, handled 1015 chances in one season but it took in 171 games played.

Baseball Form.

ONLY one-sixth of the baseball season has been completed and the early form is a bit baffling. It is very evident, however, that some surprising changes are in store for the forecasters if the present trend continues.

Figures prove that. Comparing the standings of the leagues for last year with 1929, on equal dates, we find some surprising shifts in winning percentages. The following table speaks for itself:

(Including Yesterday's Games)

Cincinnati	.440	.588	—.148
New York	.391	.577	—.186
Brooklyn	.308	.544	—.236

Five clubs of the National League are playing better than they did last year. Two of them show remarkable gains—Boston and Philadelphia.

In the American League the reverse is true as five clubs have lost ground, among them New York. The Athletics have neither gained nor lost. The Browns have gained nearly .200 points, bearing out Manager Dan Howley's statement that he has a better club than last year, while the Yanks seem not so good as formerly.

Of course the pay-off station is remote. But the figures certainly hold out hope to St. Louis that at least one of its clubs will come through to world series prominence.

It also indicates that the lone away of the New York Yankees is ending.

AMERICAN WINS ON 37TH GREEN BY HOLING OUT A 20-YARD PUTT

MOORTOWN, Eng., May 18.—Joe Turnesa, New York pro, won the Yorkshire Evening News thousand guineas golf tournament today, defeating Herbert Jolly, British pro in an extra hole match after the American had won three holes in a row to make it all square after 36 holes. It was the first time an American had won the event since its inaugural seven years ago.

Turnesa won at the thirty-seventh hole when a few minutes before he seemed hopelessly beaten. Jolly contributed to his own downfall with poor putting at the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth. With one chance left, needing only a half to win, he was trapped on the thirty-sixth. Turnesa won at the extra hole when he holed out from 20 yards for an eagle three.

His followers gave up at the thirty-third hole when Turnesa became three down and only three to play—but Joe did not quit. He kept slamming away calmly with defeat staring him in the face. He hit every shot firmly and putted with boldness to find his reward beyond the end of the trail.

In winning the tournaments at Leeds, he accomplished a feat many American professional golfers have tried only to fail.

In the last open championship of the United States he finished in a tie for sixth. Two bad rounds placed him out of the running in the British open.

Turnesa started off with a rush to win the prelunch round, taking the first and second holes with birdies, but after a seesaw battle broke badly at the sixteenth and lost a pair of holes by vicious hooking with the iron and from the tee.

Turnesa's play near and on the green was perfection, but his spasmodic errors with his iron gave the Britisher three holes. Twice he hit seconds out of bounds, once into a ruinous ditch. Then his seventeenth tee shot struck a tree on the left fairway. It rebounded into a deep dross trench for a penalty.

OTT'S HOMER IN TENTH GIVES GIANTS EVEN BREAK WITH BRAVES

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 18.—The Giants gained an even break with the Braves by winning the second game of today's double-header, 6 to 5, in 10 innings. Melvin Ott's tenth homer of the season and second of the day decided the game after the Giants had tied the score with one run in the ninth. The Braves won the opener, 5 to 4.

Schang, 39 Years of Age, Is Still First String Catcher for Browns

Wallie Has Played in Six World Series During His Sixteen Years in American League.

By James M. Gould.

Sixteen years ago, a young catcher came up to the Philadelphia Athletics and throughout the season of 1913 and the World Series that followed the regular season, proved one of the sensations of the year. Today, that same catcher, sole playing survivor of that World Series still is in major league harness and, moreover, catching a majority of the games for his team. The sensational youngster of 1913 and the veteran of today is Wallie Schang of the Browns.

Catching 77 games in 1913, Schang batted .265 and fielded for .967. Last year, for the Browns, he batted .285 in 91 games and fielded .984. Thus, in his sixteenth year of major league service, Schang showed considerable improvement both on offense and defense over his first year performances.

St. Louis is the fourth city in which Schang has played, parts of his career having been spent in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

Mack Discovers Schang.

Mack, then as now manager of the Athletics, discovered Schang playing for the Buffalo club of the International League and won Wallie in the draft after nearly every club in both majors had put in a claim for him. At that time, Schang was 23; he is 39 now and, apparently, has several years of catching (big-league catching) left.

Wallie considers himself and is considered by other players as well, as one of baseball's "luck children" in that he has played in and shared in the profits of six world series.

There were "giants" in baseball way back in '13 and many of them were with Schang on the Athletics and on McGraw's Giants, who opposed them in the big fall series. As regulars, they all have faded out of the picture but Schang.

In the 1913 series, the Athletics won four of five games. Schang caught four of the games and, as it happened, the four victories. The only game the Giants won was the second when Christy Mathewson shut the A's out, 3-0, Plank and Jack Lapp composing the Philadelphia battery. Schang batted .357 in this, his first world series in his first major league year and had one error in 21 chances.

Stars of Yester Year.

The Athletics who appeared in the series were pitchers Bender, Bush and Plank; catchers, Schang and Lapp; infielders McInnis, Eddie Collins, Barry and Baker and outfielders Murphy, Oldring and Strunk. Of all these, only Collins remains in the majors and he is Connie Mack's first lieutenant, breaking into the game only infrequently as a pinch-hitter.

Of the Giants who played, the pitchers were Mathewson, Marquard, Tesreau, Demaree and Crandall. The catchers were Myers, McLean and Wilson; the infielders Wiltse, Snodgrass, Merkle, Doyle, Herzog, Shafer and Fletcher, and the outfielders Shafer, Snodgrass, Murray and Burns.

Pitcher Christy Mathewson of the Giants and Catcher Lapp of the Athletics are dead. Larry Doyle of the New York club is a scout, outfielder George Burns is a minor league manager and Arthur Fletcher is a Yankee coach.

Last year, Schang broke his leg and many observers were of the opinion that the accident would put a period to his long and honorable career. Schang had no such idea, reported to training camp, and, when the season opened, was in fine physical shape. Manager Howley, realizing the value of his catching experience and his ability to hit when men were on, used him from the very start and today he has more games to his credit than either Rick Ferrell or Clyde Manion, both much younger in years.

Grover Alexander and Jack Quinn are examples of the 40-year old pitcher. Unless all present indications are wrong, Schang will show that four decades can sit as lightly on the much more strenuous life of a catcher.

To Schang's undoubted value as a player must be added the fine fighting spirit and splendid even temperament which makes him such a great man for a ball club and which has served to make him one of the most popular players baseball ever has known.

must have been longing for one. For he timed his swing perfectly and cracked the ball to center of the line. The ball hopped over Douthit's head, glanced off his glove and Comorosky and a lenient scorer scored it as a home run.

Paul Waner followed with a single to center and Earl Sheely then developed the first of four telling thrusts, dropping a three-bagger just inside the right field line to score Paul.

High started the fourth inning rally that tied the score, lining a single off Sheely's glove. Frisch singled to right, sending High to third, and after Bottomley popped out, Hafey doubled against the scoreboard in left, scoring High and putting Frisch on third. When Holm drew a pass Donie Bush shushed Fussell to the showers and called in Kremer.

Gelbert sent Frisch home and advanced the other runners with a sacrifice fly to Lloyd Waner, but Wilson's line drive sailed straight to Paul Waner.

Douthit's triple and High's single, previously described, put them one up in the fifth and also ended the St. Louis scoring for the afternoon.

Two were out in the sixth when the Pirates started their next big drive. Paul Waner skipped a single past High and went to third on Sheely's single to left. Hargreaves then found the extra-base range and drove a triple to right-center, scoring Paul Waner and Sheely.

Sheely Hits Again.

Comorosky led off in the eighth with a single to right and Paul Waner sacrificed, but that self-denial was not necessary, as Sheely had another extra-base hit in his bat. This time it was a triple to center, a tremendous drive, and Comorosky trotted home. Hargreaves sent Douthit back for a long sacrifice and Sheely, the villain, crossed the plate with the Pirates' sixth run.

Two triples and two singles ran off Sheely's bat, and the Chicago White Sox discard scored two runs and drove in two.

Hargreaves also was a couple of thorns in the side of the Cardinals, driving in three runs with a triple and a sacrifice fly.

Douthit and High did three-fourths of the hitting for the Red Birds. Taylor contributed a triple and two singles and High three singles, Hafey's double and Frisch's single were the other St. Louis safeties.

When the Cardinals removed Fussell from the picture they were jubilant. They don't like southpaws, and Kremer had been their "cousin" in the past, but not this afternoon. Chick Hafey didn't get a good foul off the big Frenchman, taking a called third strike in the sixth and missing three powerful swings in the eighth.

The Red Birds still have a good record for their trip, with nine victories to offset five defeats. If they can continue that pace in the series with Cincinnati, they will have shown championship power during the road campaign.

And next time, with more respect for Kremer, they may do better.

Red Bird Notes

Sylvester Johnson will pitch the opening game of the series with the Reds tomorrow.

The Pirates got a fine break in the first inning of the series final. Douthit led off with a safe bunt toward third and High hit a clean single toward right but the ball hit Douthit going to second and he was automatically out. Taylor could have taken third on the hit, if it had gone through. The break pulled Fussell out of a hole.

French's luck against the Cardinals caused Bush to choose the southpaw Fussell in preference to Ray Kremer, who was due to work.

The weather was warm and about 18,000 persons attended. Clouds hid the sun after play started.

The view from the grandstand of the Pirate ball park is beautiful. Schenley Park is beyond the center field, with a rugged gorge cutting between a level grass plot and a close-cropped hillside, extending to a wooded ridge beyond. On the left of the hill side are museums and college buildings of architectural beauty "where every prospect pleased"—except left-handed Pirate pitchers. And Cards fixed that up when they knocked out Fussell in the fourth.

This Homer Was a Single.

Comorosky's home run in the second inning was an ordinary single that bounced over Douthit's head. It should have been scored as a triple and an error, Comorosky had stopped at third, but when he saw Gelbert fumble Douthit's throw-in he headed for the plate and safe when the ball bounced out of Wilson's glove. The official scorer in Pittsburg is very lenient.

Sherdel walked Kremer to start the fifth, but it did no damage as Bartell and L. Waner filed out and Traynor forced Kremer at second.

Paul Waner robbed Frisch of an extra base hit in the eighth. Frank led off with a tremendous drive to right-center. Waner started with the crack at the bat, judged the ball perfectly and his speed enabled him to haul down the drive near the wall of the stand.

Earl Smith drew the only pass of Kremer with two out in the ninth. Orsatti ran for him, and Roettger, batting for Sherdel, filed to P. Waner.

ATHLETICS WIN TWIN BILL AND RETAIN LEAD

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Philadelphia won a double-header from Washington today by making its hits count, taking the first game, 5 to 4, and the second, 7 to 5. Miller's triple to center in the ninth inning of the first game scored Foxx, who had singled to left, with the winning run. The double victory enabled the Athletics to retain first place.

INDIANA ERRORS HELP MINNESOTA WIN, 13-8

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 18—Twenty-one runs, 24 hits and 11 errors made a wild game out of the Indiana-Minnesota contest here today, which Minnesota won, 13 to 8, aided to a great extent by six Hoosier misplays.

It was the Gophers' second win over Indiana and their second big Ten victory in five starts.

Paul Herrell, Indiana third baseman, was the hitting star of the two game series. He reached first on each of his 10 trips to the plate. Today he hit two homers and a single, walked once and was safe on an error. Yesterday he connected for a homer, double and two singles and was hit by a pitched ball.

Missouri Boxing Fans Like New Commission

Hope Reorganized Board Will Build Up Sport in State—Appointment of Seneca Taylor, St. Louisan Is Applauded.

By Damon Kerby

Hope that springs eternal, is again springing in the breasts of Missouri boxing fans, following the reorganization of the Missouri Athletic Commission the past week by Gov. Henry Caulfield. Seneca C. Taylor of St. Louis and Harry S. Davis of Kansas City are the new appointees, taking the places of Harry Castlen, St. Louis, and the Rev. Burrus Jenkins, Kansas City. Chester Brewer of Columbia, will retain his office as chairman of the reorganized board.

The appointment of Taylor and Davis means that for the first time since its organization two years ago, the official board will have men familiar with the boxing game on the State commission. They are well versed in punches as well as politics.

A Long, Long Trail.

Taylor will bring to the commission experience of more than 30 years as a devotee of boxing. He was a fighter himself during his college days. For more than 20 years he has judged amateur bouts in St. Louis, due to his love of the game. This knowledge will be applied first-hand, according to the new Commissioner from St. Louis.

"No subordinate or secretary will speak for me," he said, on receiving the notice of his appointment. "The Governor has named me to the board, I am responsible, and I am going to handle the job, as far as the St. Louis district is concerned."

In making this statement, Taylor touched on a point that has caused considerable adverse comment by the local boxing clan in regard to the State commission. The complaint has been made that the business of the commission was being done through a paid secretary, who is not a member of the commission, but is paid by the State merely to keep the minutes of the meetings and handle other routine duties. Letting the secretary pass on questions that should be handled by three memoers of the commission defeated the purpose of the law that called for a three-man commission, was the claim.

Reorganizing the commission was the most forward step in Missouri boxing since the law was passed creating the board, according to Jack Tippett, at present the leading local matchmaker. Especially is Tippett pleased with the selection of Taylor as the St. Louis Commissioner.

"Taylor is interested in the game and knows what it is all about," said Tippett. His statement the other day that the boys must either fight or be thrown out is o. k. with me. The more action the public gets the better is is for all of us. And when Taylor himself is at the ringside, the boys will know that a commissioner is looking, on who knows all the finer points and will act accordingly. Taylor has my unqualified approval and promise of co-operation."

Davis Is Experienced.

Davis, who succeed the Rev. Burrus Jenkins of Kansas City, for the past year has been a member of the American Legion boxing committee in Kansas City. While now a secretary of an improvement association, he has had several years' experience in newspaper work. He served as a first lieutenant in the Marines during the war. He will have charge of the Kansas City district.

As told previously, Brewer will remain as chairman of the committee. He is director of athletics at the Missouri University. He told the Post-Dispatch yesterday that he would call a meeting of the reorganized commission as soon as possible. It is likely the meeting will be in St. Louis.

Among the details to be considered will be the decision as to a new secretary of the reorganized board. Ben Harrison of Springfield is the present secretary. Reports from Jefferson City during the past week were that he would not be reappointed.

ILLINOIS TITLE MEET ENDS IN 15-POINT TIE

By the Associated Press.

MEMORIAL STADIUM, Champaign, Ill., May 18.—Tilden and Hyde Park high schools tied for the championship of the 35th annual interscholastic track and field meet here this afternoon with 15 points each.

Oak Park was third, only one point behind Tilden and Hyde Park. Fourth place in the meet went into a tie between Murphysboro, Atwood and Streator.

Metcalfe, the colored flash from Tilden, was the outstanding athlete in the meet and gave his team the tie with Hyde Park. He established a new national interscholastic record in the 220-yard dash, running the distance in :21 3-10 seconds, took first place in the century, and ran anchor on the winning half-mile relay team.

Eggleston, taking first in both the low and high hurdles, was instrumental in placing his team at the top, while his teammate, Dickow, scored the other first place that gave Hyde Park a joint State championship.

Hansel of Malden High broke the only other record of the meet by stepping the 440-yard dash in 51 1-0 seconds. The old State record was set by Beckmeyer, Carlyle, in 1926 and tied by Young of Edwardsville last year. Hansel's feat was

FAIRMOUNT DERBY MAY PROVE BETTER RACE THAN KENTUCKY CLASSIC

SAME ELIGIBLES WILL HAVE HAD LONGER PERIOD OF PREPARATION

By Dent McSkimming

With virtually all the 3-year-olds of note, east or west, in the long list of eligibles, the Fairmount Derby, leading feature of the spring meeting, becomes one the most interesting of the early summer stake races. The Derby, to be contested on Saturday, June 1, just two weeks after the running of the Kentucky Derby, is the richest of four big features which give color to the local meeting. The others, each for $5000 added money, are the Collinsville Handicap, the Statler Hotel Stakes and the Jefferson Hotel Stakes.

In the Collinsville Handicap, feature of the opening day card, next Saturday, May 25, are many of the best horses in training. The list of nominations reads like Turf's blue book. Among the 3-year-olds nominated are several which prepared for the Kentucky Derby. Taking into consideration the numerous unavoidable withdrawals, there is certain to remain a field of at least a dozen of the best racers. Among the probable starters are Senator Seth, Bobashela, Judge Murphy, Golden Prince, Flag Bearer, Dinner Dance, Shasta Lad, McTinkle, The Padre, Flat Iron, Polygamia and others.

Captain Hal First Winner.

This race was first run in 1926 when Captain Hal, at the height of his brilliant career, won easily from Sunsard and Prince of Wales. The Prince, however, came back the next year to win, and in 1928 Shasta Lad was the victor. The distance is six furlongs.

For the Derby, to be run on the following Saturday, Fairmount patrons are sure to have as brilliant a field as that which faced the starter at Churchill Downs in the $50,000 classic. Coming as it does two weeks after the Kentucky event, the Fairmount Derby is benefited by a sifting of the chaff from the contestants and further by two weeks of preparation. If there is one valid objection raised against the date of the Kentucky Derby it is that May 18 or 19 is too early in the season to bring out the best that is in a 3-year-old horse.

Since the field of nominations is almost identical, the Fairmount Derby offers almost the same ground for conjecture that was found at Churchill Downs.

The Statler Hotel Stakes at five furlongs and a half to be run on June 15, is restricted to 2-year-old fillies. It is out of such races that the future stars of the turf develop.

A similar stake, for 2-year-old colts and geldings, is the Jefferson Hotel Stakes, to be run on June 22.

CALIFORNIANS TAKE TO NEW SPORT WHICH IS PLAYED AT NIGHT

ESCONDIDO, Cal., May 18.—"Night ball," a contest similar to indoor baseball, has become a favored nocturnal sport here with two leagues playing complete seasons.

The game is played on a regulation diamond with powerful lights illuminating the field.

There are two leagues of eight teams each and at the conclusion of the regular playing season there is a "series" for the championship.

SPRINTERS USING STARTING BLOCKS ARE DISQUALIFIED

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—Two national intercollegiate records were established here today at the California intercollegiate track and field meet in which the disqualification of the majority of the Stanford athletes gave the University of Southern California a decisive victory with a total of 70 points.

Harlow Rothert, Stanford weight man, heaved the shot 51 feet, 1¾ inches, bettering by more than a foot the mark of 50 feet, one inch established last year at the intercollegiates at Cambridge by his teammate, Eric Krenz, who finished second today.

Emory Curtice, captain of the University of California track force, hurled the javelin 209 feet, 9¾ inches, surpassing by more than 4 feet the previous record of 205 feet, 7⅝ inches made by C. B. Hines of Georgetown in Philadelphia in 1927.

Stanford, picked to win the meet, went down to defeat when Robert S. Weaver, chairman of the Southern Pacific Association of the amateur athletic phlon, upheld the referee, who disqualified athletes from the university for the use of "mechanical devices" in the form of wooden blocks spiked to the ground. These blocks were used by some of the Stanford men to brace their feet or rest their hands when in a starting position. Handicapped by loss of point makers, Stanford finished second with 46½ and California third with 33.

The announcement of the ruling against the mechanical device, at the end of the 100-yard dash, disqualifying Hec Dyer, Stanford's spring star, who placed second in the event, failed to cause the Cardinals to discontinue using the blocks. Coach "Rink" Templeton, Stanford mentor said the blocks were an experiment and those men on his team who desired were using them today with his permission.

Temple said he did not believe the blocks were in violation of the intercollegiate ruling against mechanical devices.

LA COSTE'S VICTORY OVER BRUGNON CHEERS FRENCH NET FANS

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 18.—Rene Lacoste's victory over Jacques Brugnon upon the taciturn one's return to the courts, and his first appearance in tournament play this year, have greatly cheered French Davis cup tennis fans and officials.

Not only the victory itself but the masterly way in which it was achieved, Lacoste turning back his musketeer colleague in London, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3, have proved very encouraging to Capt. Pierre Gillou, as he had feared that the long absence from the courts had disorganized the smooth working game of the "most mechanical tennis player in the world."

It is safe to predict, although no official announcement has been made by the Selection Committee, that Cochet and Lacoste again will look after France's Davis Cup interest in the singles.

Many combinations, such as Borotra-Brugnon, Cochet-Brugnon, and perhaps Cochet-Borotra, last year's victorious Davis cup doubles pair over Tilden-Hunter, are being contemplated for the doubles team.

SOUTHWORTH ANALYZES NATIONAL LEAGUE RACE; FEARS THE CUBS MOST

CARDS MANAGER THINKS GIANTS AND PITTSBURG UNDERESTIMATED

By J. Roy Stockton
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 18.—Billy Southworth has seen the Cardinals in action against every club in the league now, and he has picked the Chicago Cubs as the most dangerous rival of the Cardinals in the pennant race. McGraw's Giants are the next strongest, and the Pirates rank third, Southworth declares.

He believes the Cincinnati Reds will show the way to the second-division clubs, though he thinks the Phils, with added hitting strength, will put up a strong fight for a high berth in the second division. Bill does not expect the Braves to stay up after the hot weather arrives, and considers the Brooklyn Dodgers hopeless tail-enders unless somebody comes to the rescue of Wilbert Robinson.

SOUTHWORTH

"Don't ask me to pick where the Cards are going to finish," said Bill, when he was asked to weigh the clubs in the flag race. "I didn't say in the spring that we would win the flag. It is foolish to claim the pennant in the spring, and it is still early in the race.

Cards Will Be In The Race All the Way.

"However, I will say this much: The Cardinals as they stand, with a strong outfield and infield and well fortified in outfield reserves, and with pitchers tried and proved, will be in the race all the way, barring injuries.

"I am much pleased over Mitchell's improved showing this season. My other regulars have not shown any weakness and it looks like the staff is set for another great year.

"Gelbert has done brilliant work in the field and is improving daily. He is showing more punch at the plate in the last few days and I believe he is going to start hitting now. When he gets his stride up there at bat he will be an offensive as well as a defensive asset.

"McCarthy's Cubs look to me like the most dangerous team we will have to meet. They have a great outfield and a fairly strong infield. The catching is a bit weak, with Hartnett out. English is a good defensive but only a fair offensive shortstop.

"Much will depend on McCarthy's young pitchers. I refer to Malone, Root and Bush. They have had experience despite the fact that I speak of them as young pitchers. Blake and Carlson are likely to be steadier. Carlson hasn't done much yet, but I believe he will be of great value to McCarthy. If the younger pitchers stand up under the strain when the race gets hot and into the stretch the Cubs will be especially dangerous.

Giants Dangerous In Spite of Poor Start

"I rank the Giants next, not entirely because of McGraw. New York has a good team, good pitching and a good outfield with a punch. With Reese in there at second it is a good infield. Also, then McGraw is a smart baseball man. He never overlooks a chance to use his reserve strength to advantage. The team is off to a poor start and I believe that later in the season the other contenders will be mighty glad that New York didn't get off to a good start.

"Bush is still experimenting with the Pirate outfield, trying to find the best possible combination and then injuries have handicapped his outfield plans. His catching is good but his pitching has been uncertain. When Bartell is able to return to duty, Bush probably will put Grantham at first base again. Sheely's failure to hit in early games of the season has been another handicap to the team.

"Philadelphia is much improved. The addition of O'Doul and Friberg's rejuvenation have done much for Burt Shotton's team. It will be hard for the Reds to stay at the top of the first division, I believe.

"I don't take Boston's spring showing seriously. The Braves always have been a great spring team. Every year they start in training camp and humble the best teams of both leagues in exhibition games.

"They have done that time and again, scoring easy victories over teams which later won pennants while the Braves won't be up there in the stretch.

"Brooklyn appears to be hopeless. The infield and outfield problems that confront Robbie look to be hopeless, unless somebody helps him out."

MISS WILLS IS VICTOR IN NET MATCH ABROAD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, May 18.—Miss Helen Wills evened up the match score in the international women's tennis competition between the United States and France when she disposed of Mme. Lafaurie of France in straight sets, 6—0, 6—2, in the Roland Garros Stadium today.

Like her friend and compatriot, Miss Edith Cross of California, who lost to Mme. Mathieu of France in the first singles match, 6—3, 6—2, "Queen" Helen was flaunting bare limbs after established American fashion.

Miss Cross had startled the colorful throng in the stadium by introducing the stockingless fad in the first match.

Miss Wills played her usual unbeatable game. Her opponent found great difficulty in returning her serves. Her placements usually found the French woman on the other side of the court. She scored 70 points to her opponent's 42.

The spectators gave Mrs. May Sutton Bundy a rousing reception when she appeared on the courts with Miss Morrill for the doubless match against Mme. Kleiadel and Mlle. Barbier of France.

Most of those in the stands were too young to remember the time when Mrs. Bundy, then May Sutton was startling the world with her tennis about 20 years ago. However, they cheered her for her courage in still playing with the present leaders. Mrs. Bundy now has a daughter who is said to be fast coming to the front ranks of tennisdom. The American doubles team, Mrs. May Sutton Bundy and Miss Morrill lost to the French pair, Mme. Bordes and Mlle. Barbier, in straight sets, 6—3, 8—6.

Rain Spoils High School Sport Program

By Harold Tuthill

The city high school athletic program at the Public Schools Stadium, yesterday, consisting of preliminary trials in the midget will qualify tomorrow and Tuesday and junior divisions for the nineteenth annual track and field meet in the morning and the double-header in baseball between Cleveland and Roosevelt and between Soldan and Beaumont in the afternoon was postponed on account of rain. No definite date has been set for the resumption of activities, although it is likely the track stars day.

According to Fred C. Voss, secretary of the Athletic Board, there was some difficulty about the use of the Stadium for the high schools during the present week, but it is hoped that the baseball games will be played off so that the tournament may begin on Saturday.

There would be no effect upon the ultimate outcome of the race if the games were canceled, since Central has been eliminated. The two contests will do no more than serve to give next year's promising material active competition.

The standing of the teams:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Soldan	3	0	1.000
Cleveland	2	1	.667
Beaumont	2	1	.667
Roosevelt	1	2	.333

Just Average Players But Good Golf Teachers

By W. J. McGoogan

Not always do the best golf players make the best teachers, sometimes the average player with a keen insight into human nature and a keen ability to win the confidence of his pupil, together with a thorough knowledge of the game, makes a better instructor than a man who is continually knocing par cold.

In the class of good teachers and average golfers belong the Harrisan brothers at Algonquin, who have plied their trade there for the past seven years, after ten years at Triple A.

Neither Elmer nor Donald is a great golf player. They spend so much time teaching others how to swing clubs at a golf ball in proper fashion that their own game is neglected. So busy are they that it is infrequent that they are able to get around to the professional tournaments in the district.

1000 Lessons a Season.

"But," says Donald, "I think we could both get into the 70 class without much trouble. At least Elmer could, for he is a better golfer tahn I am.

"Throughout a season here we give perhaps a thousand lessons. That, together with looking after the many wants of our club members, supervising the caddies and repairing clubs, takes up so much of our time that it is seldom we are able to play a round of golf ourselves."

Both the Harrison brothers started in the game of golf at Triple A as caddies and both graduated to the professional ranks there after apprentice periods served in the pro shop at Triple A mending and polishing clubs.

No Book of Rules.

Many of the golfers of the city have at one time or another taken instructions from the Harrisons and all of their pupils are loud in their praises them as teachers.

The Harrisons haven't any pet theories as to how an individual should play—they just try to take the material they have and make the most out of it.

No hard and fast rules have they about how clubs should be gripped. The pupil is told to use the grip which suits him best, which seems natural to him, and to learn to hit the ball with a free and easy swing.

Horton Smith Tells How He Got Golfing Start With One Club, a Midiron, as His 'Bag'

By Horton Smith.
(Copyright, 1929.)

SCHOOL mates in Springfield, Mo., my birthplace and my home until I became a professional, were the first to interest me in golf. I was 12 years old and a number of my boy friends caddied at the Springfield Country Club. They urged me to go along and earn some money. This was in the fall of 1921 and I have been at golf ever since.

Perry H. Smith, my father, was a member of the Springfield Country Club, but played very little golf. It was through the caddies that I discovered the game which for eight years has afforded me so much pleasure that I am looking forward to a lifetime of it as an American professional player.

All my experiences in golf have been happy ones, my many friends in Springfield, Joplin, other cities in Missouri, and new ones I have found in touring, have given me their help and good wishes and I appreciate it.

H. SMITH.

In the fall of 1921 I visited the golf club about six times and did some caddy-ing, my first job being for J. H. Doggerell of the Frisco Railroad. I did not lose any balls and other caddies told me enough about it so that I managed to make a good enough job of it from the start. In fact, Mr. Doggerell has been a good friend ever since.

My first golf equipment consisted of one midiron, which I purchased from the caddy master for one dollar and 10 cents. I had earned the money caddying.

Winter came along soon after I purchased this stick and I had to put it away until spring, when I took up golf, caddying and playing, in earnest.

I had a big advantage because, early that spring, my father moved from the city to a 30-acre place bordering on the golf club and, as he was a member, I was able to play every morning and caddy in the afternoon.

Becomes Serious.

When I took to golf seriously—and this dates approximately from my first day as a caddy—I had already graduated from the grammar grades of school. And though hours in the morning and afternoon were spent on the links, that work (it was really play) did not interfere in my high school studies.

And I must note here that, for the boy who would learn golf from its very foundations, caddying is the most practical of that game's schools. To the young caddy, that important "feel" of the various clubs should soon become a part of his system if he has a real spark of golf in his spirit.

For weeks, I had only one lone club—that second-hand mid-iron; but in caddying, day after day, I handled and got the preliminary "feel of all the sticks" in golf's repertoire.

Sometimes Mr. Doggerell or some other friendly club member would let me try their sticks. The very swing of them, even without a ball to aim at, gave me a thrill.

Before I got my own second club, I really knew the "feel," and use, of every club in the bags. Today, I usually have 16 sticks in my own bags. And I still get my caddy-days' thrill from the very "feel" of them!

My next article will tell of some early link duels with my brother "Ren." It will be published next Tuesday.

AMATEUR PITCHER HAS RECORD WHICH RIVALS THAT OF ALEXANDER

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 18.—Birmingham has a baseball pitcher who can rival Jack Quinn, Grover Alexander and other big league veterans in point of long service. He is Lefty Smith, an amateur who has been playing in the City League for 24 years. He never has hankered to become a professional.

Despite his advanced age, Smith is regarded as one of the best amateur pitchers in the State.

DE KUH FIGHTS KNOST HERE ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Five St. Louis boxers who have compiled creditable records in amateur boxing competition and who have since turned professionals are scheduled to trade punches with out-of-town battlers in a program of four 10-round contests and a six-round preliminary Tuesday night at the Coliseum arena under the auspices of the Fred W. Stockham American Legion Post.

Dave Knost and Tom Pivac, heavyweights, Al Stillman and Frank Power, middleweights, and Jack Wilson, a featherweight, are the local fighters appearing on the card. Knost and Stillman are former National A. A. U. junior champions of their respective weight divisions while Pivac, Power and Wilson achieved Western District title honors before their graduating into the professional field.

Knost to Meet De Kuh.

The main event brings Knost against Arthur De Kuh, an Italian heavyweight, who has knocked out 22 opponents in 34 contests since he began his American ring campaign four years ago. De Kuh is an athlete of Knost's own dimensions, standing six feet four inches in height and weighing 215 pounds.

De Kuh's only defeat in his last 12 fights was recorded when he lost a 10-round decision to Jack Sharkey in a Boston ring last year. In more recent engagements the Italian knocked out Joe "Tiny" Roebuck and George Widde at the Madison Square Garden in New York City; Jack Shaw and Frank Zavette in Brooklyn bouts, stopping all four men in the first round. He also fought Big Boy Peterson of Minneapolis, and Franz Heller of Germany, in the Brooklyn ring, winning decisions over both men. He holds a draw with Pierre Charles, the Belgian, who fought here last year.

Walter "Farmer" Lodge of Chicago, a veteran of more than 10 years pugilistic experience, is the fighter slated to oppose Pivac. Although he has seen his best days in the ring Lodge is still capable of putting up a good fight against Pivac, judging by reports. Pivac's defeat by Babe Hunt at Tulsa several weeks ago marked the St. Louisan's only setback in 10 fights this season.

Stillman will be pitted against Jack Broughton of Salt Lake City, Utah, in one of the middleweight events. Stillman has chalked up 16 knockouts in 17 amateur and professional contests. His kayo record was marred only by a defeat on points in an amateur match with Jimmy Reed at the Armory early last summer.

Power Will Try to Get Hurt.

Power is slated to box a return match with Cecil Hurt, an Indianapolis scrapper, who fights under the name of Jack Doyle. The Indiana middleweight dropped a close decision to Power in an intercity amateur bout at the South Broadway club two years ago and was again outpointed by the St. Louisan in a lively 10-round setto on the last New Coliseum card.

Billy Champagny, the hefty lit-tle Boston boxer, who punched his way to a decisive victory over Pete White two weeks ago, will meet Wilson in the six-round curtain-raiser.

Tilden, Hunter Available for Interzone Play

CHERBOURG France May 18.

BILL TILDEN and Frank Hunter, America's first and second ranking tennis players, now are in Paris.

"I consider we have as good, if not a better, chance than last year to bring the Davis Cup home," said Tilden. Hunter agreed. They said they had both declared themselves available for play in the interzone finals for the Davis Cup if needed and also for the challenge round.

Tilden and Hunter said they would play in the French championships opening Monday in singles and men's doubles. Hunter also will pair with Miss Helen Wills in mixed doubles. Tilden has not yet decided whether to enter this phase of the tourney. Later Tilden and Hunter will proceed to Amsterdam for the Dutch championships June 4 and thence to Wimbledon for the British classic.

Wrestlers Train For Matches Here

Final training workouts of the wrestlers billed to participate in three heavyweight wrestling matches tomorrow night at the Coliseum, will be held this afternoon at the National Gymnasium, where Jim Clinstock, the Oklahoma Indian, and Charley Strack of Nyack, N. Y., have been tuning up for several days in preparation for a one-fall finish match billed as the main event.

Roy Steele, Seattle, and George Hagen of New York, a newcomer to local mat circles, are slated to meet in the semifinal, a one-fall event with time restrictions of one hour.

Jim McMillan, former Illinois University football star, who defeated Jack Washburn and Firpo Wilcox, and who wrestled Strack 45 minutes to a draw in previous local engagements, will meet Rudy Dusek of Little Rock, Ark., in another heavyweight event limited to 45 minutes. Dusek "gave up" to Londos in a match at Philadelphia Friday night.

A pair of local grapplers to be selected from the group serving as training partners for others on the card will be matched for another prelim event, according to Promoter Tom Packs.

"Few Big League Pitchers Cheat"—Heydler

UMPIRES SHOULD NOT LET HURLERS SNEAK OVER A QUICK DELIVERY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 18.—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, says that all National League umpires are watching pitchers closely for cheating on the balk rule. Man to man, he likes the Yankee idea of numbering players, and he thinks that the 10-man ball team is not dead, but just sleeping.

"I don't like ever to see my name in the papers at this time of the year," he declared.

"The fans grow tired, I think, of hearing executive voices. After the season starts, baseball belongs to the players."

Heydler talked about the old standby, the weather. It has been the worst for baseball he has seen in four years.

"Think of the crowds we would have had with any kind of a warm spell!" sighed the disappointed president.

"Was the National League going to take the same drastic action on the enforcement of the balk rule that the American League was taking?"

Always Watch Pitchers.

"We have smart pitchers to be watched the same as they have," said Heydler. "Our umpires are always after the pitcher who wants to beat the balk rule. We have to be strict and stop any new style of delivery instantly. If we let one man get away with it, 40 others would soon be doing the same thing."

President Heydler recalled the pitching motion of "Dummy" Taylor, a Giant hurler, a decade ago. If Taylor could not talk he could read and he looked in vain for anything in the rules that forbade him whirling around on the mound like a whirling dervish.

"Why, he faced every base before he threw," declared Heydler. "That would have given base runners a pretty show if allowed to continue. But the majority of complaining runners don't study the pitcher enough, in my opinion."

90 Per Cent Legitimate.

Heydler thinks that 90 per cent of the pitching nowadays is perfectly legitimate. He denied that the two leagues split on the question of the quick delivery that came up in St. Louis during the last world series. There is no rule against it in the National League, but no umpire on his job will let a pitcher sneak across a strike before the batsman is ready.

"We called only 12 balks in the National League all last season," he said and then he gave some figures from memory, "and they were by 12 different pitchers. The American League had three more if I am not mistaken. The umpire does not want to stop smart pitching. I have instructed them to watch the pitcher who bends his knees. We have had trouble, too, with the hurler who starts to throw to first base, sees the base runner start for second, and changes his mind. That's a balk. I understand Barnard's trouble has been with the pitcher who takes his foot off the rubber.

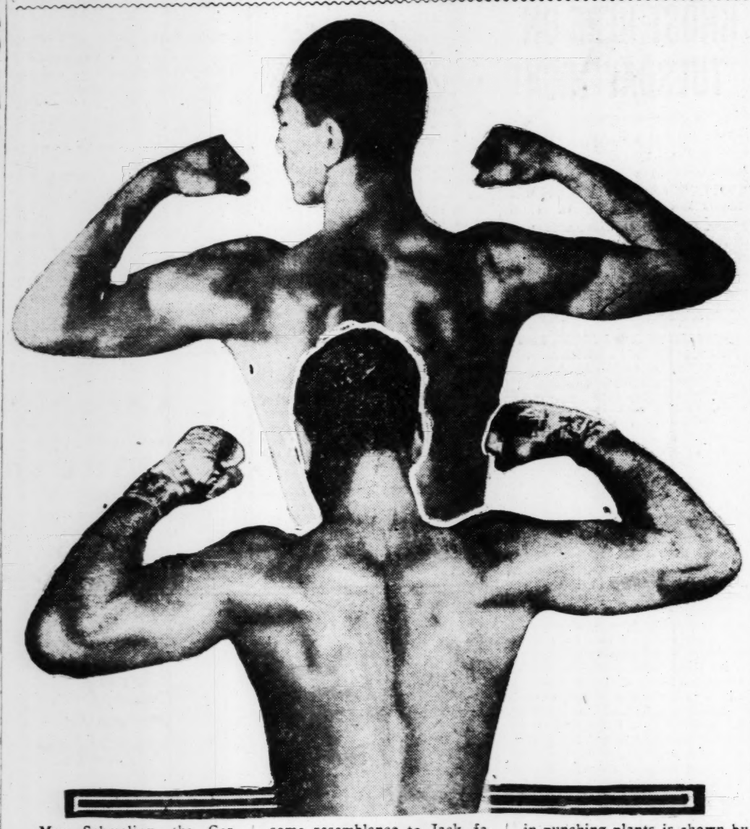
"The pitcher for a legal delivery must keep one foot on the rubber and the other directly in front of it. If he switches his leg off to the side, that gives him a tremendous crossfire advantage."

Likes Idea of Numbers.

That subject exhausted, Heydler was quizzed on what he though of numbering players.

"Personally," he said frankly, "I sort of like the idea but it isn't worth anything unless all the teams in both leagues adopt it. You know the Cardinals used it five years ago but Branch Rickey made the mistake of sewing a small number on the sleeve. He should have gone in for big numbers on the back like the Yanks.

How the German Dempsey Compares With Jack



Max Schmeling, the German fighter, who has just returned to this country to prepare for a second campaign, with the world's title as his objective, has been called the "German Jack Dempsey." That is because he not only bears some resemblance to Jack, facially, but in fighting style he follows the Dempsey lines.

He also is a rather nifty puncher and, all in all, he is considered the nearest thing to the Manassa Mauler that has been developed.

How the two men shape up in punching plants is shown by the above pictorial comparison. Dempsey's photograph, the lower picture, was taken in 1928 as he was preparing for his fight with Tunney. Schmeling's development was registered only a few days after his recent return to America.

Gavuzzi Loses Pyle Parade Lead to Salo

BIG SPRING, Tex., May 18.—Johnny Salo, Passaic, N. J., policeman, today snatched the lead in the Pyle cross-country marathon, from Peter Gavuzzi of England, who he had trailed since the runners passed through Ohio.

Salo, by finishing in a tie with Giusto Umek of Italy on today's 40-mile jog from Colorado, Tex., established a lead for himself of 4 minutes and 30 seconds.

Gavuzzi was third in the lap covering the distance in six hours 49 minutes and 30 seconds, as compared to the six hours nine minutes and forty seconds scored by the winners of the lap. It is the second time Salo has held the lead.

The standing of the first eight in elapsed time:

PENN DEFEATS HARVARD AND NAVY OARSMEN

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 18.—Pennsylvania crews took double honors in racing on the Severn today with Navy and Harvard oarsmen.

Penn not only took the varsity race in a battle so close that Navy's shell was a bare two feet behind, but the 150-pound crew from Pennsylvania also triumphed in their shorter race.

Navy, however, annexed the junior varsity contest, leading Harvard by three lengths, while Pennsylvania trailed in third. The varsity race over a two-mile course Pennsylvania's time was 11 minutes and four seconds, with Navy clocked at 11 minutes 1 1-5. Harvard's time was 11 minutes 7 seconds. Throughout the two miles the close battle was maintained, with Penn and Navy alternately taking the lead. Harvard, rowing a good race, hung on doggedly, finishing only a length behind the others. At the midway mark Navy drew ahead about 10 feet, the greatest advantage either held during the race. Soon the Pennsylvania oarsmen had pulled up and taken a similar lead, but as the finish neared a Navy spurt put the Middies' shell on virtually even terms again. Penn, however, met the challenge successfully to cross the line a winner.

The 150-pound race saw only two crews, Pennsylvania and Navy in action, over the Henley distance, one and five-sixteenths mile, Harvard having decided not to enter this event. The Penn men got the jump at the very start and kept the advantage, finishing in 7 minutes 44 seconds, while the Navy crew was timed at 7:50.

Thunderstorms and high wind delayed the races until it was nearly dusk when the varsity crews, last to row, paddled up to the upper course for their contest.

Columbia Is Winner Over M. I. T. Crews

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Continuing a spectacular string of victories without a single defeat so far this season, Columbia's varsity eight outclasses Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the Harlem today to win a mile and three-quarter race by five and one-quarter lengths. In three other races Columbia eights also defeated the New Englanders.

Columbia's clean sweep was the third this season. At Derby four Columbia crews humbled Yale and Pennsylvania and again at Princeton last Saturday swept the river clean of the Tiger and Pennsylvania shells in another series.

RAIN STOPS STARS' GAME WITH CUBANS; SERIES OPENER TODAY

A heavy rain and wet grounds yesterday caused postponement of the St. Louis Stars opening game with the Cuban Stars at the Stars' Park. The first contest of the five-game series will be played this afternoon starting at 3 o'clock, weather premitting.

Many new faces will be seen in the Cuban lineup and it has been reported that he Islanders have a stronger club this season than last. The St. Louis Stars lead the Negro National Baseball League teams by the small margin of a single game.

Daniel Ewing Wight Weds Helen Conley In Frederick, Md.

Fashionable Gathering From St. Louis, Baltimore, New York and Philadelphia Witness Ceremony — Bride Made Debut in St. Louis.

FREDERICK, Md., May 18.

THE most brilliant wedding to take place at Frederick, Md., for many months was solemnized at noon yesterday in St. John's Catholic Church, when Miss Helen Abell Conley, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Conley of Frederick, became the bride of Daniel Ewing Wight, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira E. Wight of St. Louis. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. M. J. Finnerty in the presence of a fashionable gathering that included guests from St. Louis, Baltimore, New York and Philadelphia.

The candle-lighted altar was adorned in profusion of Easter lilies against a background of greenery. More of the blossoms in great clusters were placed in the chancel which was banked with palms and lighted by cathedral tapers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful gown of ivory bridal satin revealing the princess silhouette. Exquisite lace, an heirloom in her family was used lavishly in trimming the gown which was made with long tight sleeves of the satin and a skirt of irregular hemline which fell into the train trimmed in more of the lace. Her hair was covered by a cap of lace to which was arranged her tulle veil reaching to her finger tips in the front and sweeping the length of her train. As her only jewelry she wore on a chain about her neck a diamond that has been a treasure in her family for generations. She carried an armful of Easter lilies.

Mrs. H. J. Hedding of Coronado, Cal., was matron of honor and wore a princess gown of point de sprit of an egg shell tint. The gown was trimmed in an immense butterfly bow of green taffeta placed below the natural waistline at the left side. She wore a large braid picture hat and satin slippers to match her gown. Her flowers were delphinium.

Miss Victoire Conley, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore an attractive tailled costume of point de sprit of the egg-shell tone trimmed in a bow of blue taffeta. Miss Martha Conley and Miss Elizabeth Hedges of Frederick, Mrs. Joseph D. Baker Jr., Miss Elizabeth Cushing Knapp and Miss Mary Macgill of Baltimore, and Miss Mary Gay of Uniontown, Pa., were bridesmaids. Their gowns fashioned on princess lines were of egg shell colored point de spirit with butterfly taffeta bows of blue and green. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids wore garden hats of hairbraid to match their gowns and egg shell tinted satin slippers. They carried bouquets of delphinium.

The bridal path was strewn with flowers by Mary Claire Conley and Eleanor Brooks Conley of Frederick and Frances Fenwick of Baltimore. They wore dainty organdie frocks of the egg shell shade with hats and slippers to match.

Mr. Wight had as his best man his brother, Ira E. Wight Jr., and as groomsmen, his cousin, Charles Ewing, Charles H. Conley Jr., brother of the bride; Robert Brookings Smith and Thomas Skinker Maffitt Jr. of St. Louis, Ian May of New Orleans and Jack E. Ewing, John Parsons, Donald Ross, Bayard Griffin, Edward M. Green Jr. and G. A. Hitchins, all of New York.

How Charles U. Becker Plays The Old-Fashioned Game of Politics at Jefferson City

Secretary of State Clinches Power Through Rural Newspapers, Auto Licenses, Banks —Also Ingratiates Democrats.

By CURTIS A. BETTS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 18.—The long struggle in the Missouri Legislature this year for adoption of a budget system and a central purchasing system in the State Government, which has ended in partial success and partial failure, has been marked by the most determined stand of the professional politician against the inroads of progress that has appeared in Missouri politics or Government in recent years.

The fight was that of Secretary of State Charles U. Becker, a remarkable character in politics, standing virtually alone. He was aided haltingly and timidly by State Auditor L. D. Thompson and a few others, but Becker bore the brunt of the battle for the reactionary forces and liked it.

Whether Becker came out of the fight stronger or weaker politically than when he entered it is a debatable question in Jefferson City. He lost in the effort to beat the budget system, but he was triumphant in his opposition to the central purchasing system, and that was the issue in which he was most vitally interested because it would have wiped out his control of much patronage on which he relies for his political strength.

Budget Law Can Only Hamper.

The budget law, which now virtually is certain of passage, will hamper him, and if it is effectively enforced it can break his hold on important patronage, but it cannot interfere with a big part of the newspaper patronage and with the huge contracts he makes for public printing.

The Budget Commission, if it wants to do so, can go through his office and check the necessity for the huge force of clerks. It can decide whether it will recommend appropriations for employes assigned to duty at the numerous desks, many of which are vacant for hours at a time, in the long string of big office rooms which extend across one entire side of the second floor of the Capitol and encroach on two other sides. It can decide whether it will recommend funds for numerous purposes for which Becker spends State money, and for which the usefulness is open to question.

But it can only recommend. The Legislature can follow the recommendations or not, as it pleases, and Becker, through the numerous avenues patrolled by patronage, has an immense influence with the Legislature.

He was defeated in his opposition to the budget bill by the mere fact that Gov. Caulfield took a hand in the fight, while he remained passive on the central purchasing legislation.

The Chief Executive started out to get a budget system and a central purchasing system, both of which were to be all inclusive and take in every State department and State institution. A long preliminary campaign for the reforms had been conducted by the Associated Industries, an organization of manufacturers and business men reaching into virtually every county in the State. They were interested in reducing the extravagance and waste in the Government because business pays most of the tax bills of the State and they thought the efficiency of modern business applied to State affairs would mean lower taxes.

Made Issue of Big Business.

Becker was too shrewd a politician to make open warfare on the Governor and his program. Instead he chose the Associated Industries as his foe. A press bureau, conducted in his office with State-paid employes operating in a State-managed office, worked overtime flooding the State with attacks on the association, which in the propaganda sent out was represented as an organization of big business which was seeking to control the Government in order to take all the taxes off of business and put it on the farmers and land owners.

By characterizing the leading candidate for Speaker of the House as a tool of the association, Becker was able to block his election, and thus to have an important hand in the organization of the House. He joined forces with Jones H. Parker of St. Louis and through his aid Parker was elected.

He found a ready outlet for his publicity bureaus in every county in the State where there were from one to four newspapers which he had fed with official printing at big prices, due to the fact that no bids were asked. Becker's force checked these newspapers to see whether the propaganda was being printed, an essential work in the program because there was to be other printing let in the future.

Becker Enlists Governor.

Notwithstanding this campaign the situation looked a little dark for Becker on the budget and central purchasing bills. A committee of Democrats in the Senate was drawing the bills which were to carry out the program of the Republican Governor, and these bills were being drawn to include Becker's office under all the regulations. The Governor was maintaining silence and the impression got abroad that he favored placing the public printing under the proposed purchasing agent.

Becker finally called on the Governor and that same day the executive recommended to the Senate committee that it exclude printing from the purchasing bill. The Governor would not make an issue which threatened to disrupt the Republican organization at the Capitol. The committee did not accede to the Governor's request, but without his active support the bill could not be passed.

Becker long has been a colorful figure in Missouri Republican politics, recognized as one of the remaining figures of a vanishing type of politician. He plays the game the way it used to be played, and so far has been successful. In an election he almost invariably comes out winner with a majority close to or ahead of that of the head of the Republican ticket. He believes patronage is the source of political strength and he dispenses it lavishly.

Politician and Dime Novelist.

He is 60 years old, having been born in 1868 in New Haven, a small town on the Missouri River in the central part of the State. He attended the public schools and the State Teachers' College at Cape Girardeau, and taught school several years. Following that he was a reporter on St. Louis and Kansas City newspapers a few years, and then went to Wishart, a village in southwestern Missouri, where he devoted his time to writing lurid dime novels, in which the "Red Skins" always "bit the dust," writing magazine stories of outdoor life, and fishing and hunting.

It was while he was in Wishart that he entered politics. He was elected to the Legislature from Polk County several times, served as Secretary of the State Highway Commission before the enactment of the law creating the present Highway Department and in 1920, was the nominee for Secretary of State. That was a Republican landslide year and he was elected by a majority of more than 150,000. He was re-elected in 1924 by a majority of more than 57,000, and again in 1928, his majority being more than 96,000.

As an official he has been popular. Always ready for a joke or a frolic, he is found in his office at almost any hour of the day entertaining friends from many parts of the State. Until about three years ago a corncob pipe was an inseparable part of his attire, but he gave up smoking.

No Bids Asked on Publication.

If there has been anything a practical politician could think of to build a personal organization about him that Becker has overlooked since he became Secretary of State, it is not in the records.

The law in Missouri requires that preceding each election there must be published in one newspaper in each county all constitutional amendments and initiative and referendum proposals to be voted on. The law fixes a maximum price of $1 an inch which may be paid for such publication. It gives to the Secretary of State the authority to select the newspapers for this publication, and as it does not say anything about letting the work on bids, Becker, in this, following a precedent established by his predecessors in office, did not ask for bids.

There used to be a section requiring that officers having the letting of public printing should let it at the most advantageous rates obtainable. This might have been construed to mean that he should ask for bids, or at least attempt to get the matter published at less than the maximum legal rate, so Becker used his influence with the Legislature and the law was repealed.

Then there are counties which have no Republican newspapers. Here Becker turned to Democratic newspapers. And there are a few counties where there are Republican newspapers, but in which the Republican vote is so small as to be negligible, and voters are reached more effectively through Democratic papers. Becker has been known to ignore the Republican newspapers in such counties and to give the printing to its Democratic rival.

Propaganda With Auto Licenses.

The fact that the registration of automobiles is lodged in the Secretary of State's office has not been overlooked by Becker as a valuable political adjunct. There are approximately 600,000 automobile owners of Missouri, and each must obtain his license from the Secretary of State, remitting to him for it. Last year, an election year, when each owner received his receipt for his license payment, there were inclosed two or three of Becker's campaign cards on which were his picture and an announcement that he was candidate for re-election. It would have cost him something like $12,000 to have mailed cards to each of these persons. He explained that it cost the State no more for him to inclose them with the license receipts than if the envelopes had not contained them.

In other ways he has shown himself to be very accommodating. For some reason there are several thousand persons who wish very low numbers of their automobile license, or wish particular numbers —12, 1000, 10,000, 200,000, etc. Becker pleases them by holding the same numbers for them year after year. Quite naturally the recipient of these favors feel kindly to Becker, and it may be assumed that most of them vote and work for him when he is a candidate for re-election.

Then he obtained legislation authorizing him to establish branch license offices in many parts of the State. They provide temporary jobs each year for a few clerks in each, or the garage owner who has a branch in his place of business appreciates the favor. It brings in a lot of people who may remember the place and return as customers.

Then he obtained the passage of a law permitting him to deposit automobile license receipts in banks all over the State. The bankers usually are influential citizens, and their support means something in an election. Of course, the State receives a lower interest rate on the funds he deposits than it would receive if the money were promptly transmitted to the State Treasurer and placed in the official State depositories. But such a practice would not help Becker much in a campaign.

Becker has studied the patronage problem from all angles and has worked it down to rather a science. He by no means limits his appointees to Republicans, and has a number of Democrats on his office payroll. The practical politics of this may be realized when it is known that such Democrats are sons of Democratic Senators, or close political friends of Democratic Senators or Representatives, or are influential in Democratic politics in their communities. Democratic legislators whose friends or relatives have been befriended by an official are likely to feel very kindly toward him when he wants something from the Legislature, or opposes something like the budget or central purchasing bills, and the Democrats so befriended are not likely to work very hard against Becker at election time, even though he is a Republican and they are Democrats.

Becker knows the old game of politics and plays it. He has been so successful that he is a power to be reckoned with in any political battle, and as he did not lose his printing patronage through the passage of a central purchasing bill, he will continue to have power.

Europe Must Abolish Tariff And "Disarm Economically" To Survive, Herriot Asserts

Former Premier of France Calls on Nations to Unite and Give Up Ideas of Trade Barriers.

By EDOUARD HERRIOT,
Former Premier of France.

PARIS, May 18. (By Cable.)

EUROPE, growing economically minded, leans more and more toward the idea of an economic United States of Europe to solidify its efforts to compete with the great American Republic in the trade marts of the world. The eyes of those interested in the formation of a United States of Europe are turned to Geneva where during May the League of Nations' Economic Consulting Committee sits to decide what should be done regarding the recommendations of the preceding conference, called in 1927 upon the initiative of the French Minister, Loucheur.

In 1927, observing the general tendency of the nations towards protectionism, the Economic Conference prescribed certain measures of wisdom and foresight, and even if it is true that most of the treaties of commerce drafted in 1928 did not bring any real reduction in customs duties and if several nations built their customs walls even higher, making real economic fortresses of those states, these treaties did see at least the generalization of the most favored nation clause.

That was the first victory for the economic peace makers at Geneva. In addition the plurilateral conventions, real economic Kellogg pacts, were established.

Hope for Coal Pact.

On the other hand, the experts studied the markets of raw materials essential for production. Their research was directed first to sugar, next followed the study of the coal industry in the hope of realizing some day an international coal agreement. It already is real progress to see qualified experts and specialists called to handle the problem.

Thus politics loses its purely abstract aspects. A new sphere is in preparation, of which the first sketches should be studied with greatest interest by those interested in humanity. That is what Georges Theunis, former Prime Minister of Belgium, who worked side by side with me in drafting the London accord in the summer of 1924, declared forcefully at the inaugural session. His optimism was tempered by prudence. He even severely criticised certain governments which should have "a more vital comprehension of their responsibilities in applying the practical ideas of their experts."

But governments are usually nothing but theoretical organizations, and the progress which should develop from putting their words into acts must always be accomplished outside and with the help of public opinion. A diplomacy of an entirely new kind must be instituted. The old ideas of protection, already too simple, like the idea of prohibitive tariffs must be opposed. Really serious experts must look for products on which agreement can little by little be revised. What we call customs is a dogma established by the ancient Venetians, if we can believe the traditions of the Doges. There was also a consolidated tax imposed on France by Colbert, and the famous ordinances published in 1664 to 1667 which established a protective system.

Treaty With England.

We are well informed of the workings of this regime especially in our relations with England up to the treaty of Jan. 23, 1860, which introduced the principle of commercial liberty.

To demonstrate the errors of this economic war, it is sufficient to recall the continental blockade which Napoleon decreed against his enemies across the Channel on Nov. 21, 1806. This system was merely an exaggeration of the formula adopted by Colbert and continued by convention. It has caused more wars and provoked more deaths than the most vain ambitions of sovereigns and statesmen.

Theunis was indeed right in his most clear-sighted way to invoke interest for the future of the principles established by the economic conference of 1927.

Unfortunately, the Geneva program conflicted with certain agricultural interests which predicted or rather feared an imminent crisis. The Geneva program was also confronted by difficulties summed up by M. Trendelenburg, who himself complained of the dreadful governmental routine.

As far as it concerns Europe, this attempt at organization finds itself obstructed by the voluntary isolation of Russia. The difficulty is aggravated, moreover, as has been declared by Signor Pirelli, the president of the International Chamber of Commerce, by the absence of an indispensable entente between Europe and America. Nevertheless, to encourage the optimists let us observe some interesting facts produced at Geneva.

Plans for World Bank.

Pirelli has suggested the creation of a Bank of International Regulations, to facilitate world commerce and finance, which would oblige nations to co-operate in a new field and which, without being super-bank, would bring together in closer relation, the directors of the various national banks. We believe the idea contains much in the way of international co-operation. The opposition which came from the ranks of the agriculturalists, either by Powlanski for Poland or De Nikgi for Hungary, could be withdrawn in a few days if agriculture itself should ordain it and if the celebrated and active International Institute or some similar group should institute a vast inquiry on the origin and exportation of products. Therein must be found the new efficacious remedies to replace the old ones, which never worked.

Let us endeavor to see clear in this situation of economic disarmament which is as serious, if not more so, than the question of military disarmament. Has the world really made any progress in recent years on the road to economic liberalism? In fact, no. On the same day as the session opened at Geneva, we learned from Washington that the Americans were revising tariffs, that a new project was laid before the House of Representatives and that a document was being prepared in great secrecy to raise the rate on sugar, except for the Philippines.

Doubts Value of Tariff.

Will this reinforcement of protectionism appease the demands of American farmers and manufacturers? One is obliged to doubt it. The doubling of the tariff on meats and the increase of three cents a pound on raw wools will certainly strike Argentine, which will retaliate by turning to France to market the product.

In the Geneva speech, Locheur made an allusion to the American tariff bill, but instead of making vain protestations, he arrived at the same conclusions as the other experts had observed at Geneva, namely that "the problem of the hour is in the economic organization of Europe to meet America, the first necessity being that Europe organize itself. From the political point of view, a United States of Europe appears a Utopia. Too many elements divide us, history, customs, languages. From an economic point of view there ex-

LIFE'S DAILY ROUTINE WITH BYRD'S MEN IN WINTER QUARTERS IN LITTLE AMERICA

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica.

OUR whole existence has changed with the coming of Winter. We of the Byrd Expedition have become a family of moles who scuttle through glittering snow tunnels with lanterns and flashlights, live all day by the light of lamps, and only emerge into the dusk of outdoors for a short walk in the bitter cold or for some task which must be done, temperature notwithstanding.

What is our life in this lonely spot, separated by 2000 miles of stormy sea and ice from the nearest civilization, where by day a glow in the northern sky tells of the lost sun and the moon shines brilliantly in a band of purple, and at night the stars gleam with unnatural brilliance and the mysterious aurora undulates overhead in streams of colored light? Try to imagine one of our days.

It is 1 o'clock in the morning and a faint light from the moon outlines the windows of the mess hall. Only an uneasy sleeper stirring in his bunk or a snore breaks the silence. A door opens as the clock strikes a high pitched note, the temperature so affects the bell, and the yellow rays from a lantern carried by the night watchman throw a sudden illumination into the long room. There is a row of double wooden bunks, their ends hung with clothes and boots, each holding a small huddled figure in a sleeping bag, heads drawn under like turtles.

The Morning Fires.

The watchman, clothed in furs, his parka hood over his head, throws some kindling into the kitchen stove—a long black stove on the side of the room opposite the bunks—lights it and puts on coal. Silently he sits and watches it. In the gloom back of him figures stir restlessly, and one or two turn over, with many thumps and sighs. Then there is silence once more, except for the crackling of the flames and the roar of the draft.

The watchman has been up all night, huddled near the stove in the library of the other house, reading by the light of his lantern and going out every half hour to see if the aurora is flashing its messages across the sky, to mark the clouds and look in at the thermometers and thermograph, to make sure that the cold has not stopped the clockwork mechanism. It is a cold, lonely, eery job.

The kitchen fire going well, he pokes George, the cook, in the ribs and goes back outside, if the weather is good, through the tunnel if the wind is blowing hard, to the big house, which, although named after Edgar Barratt, has been dubbed the "country club." A look at his instruments and he lights the stove in the bunk room. It is soon sending a cheery roar up the pipe leading along under the peak to the outlet in the roof. The only light is that of his lantern, and it is difficult to distinguish the outlines of the bunks and the corridor between them leading to the far end of the building, past the hospital room and the radio experimental room, dark and cold and uninviting.

Early Rising in Antarctica.

When 8 o'clock comes the watchman wakes Larry Gould, second in command here, who is nicknamed Simon Legree for reasons which will become apparent presently. Larry leaps into his clothes with a speed which would shame a fireman going to a three-alarm fire, for as the door of our house is kept open at night it is cold. There is a pink glow around the sides of the stove, but it takes a long time to warm the house. There is a significant silence. Heads burrow a little deeper.

"Everybody out!" yells Simon. "Get up, O'Brien, you lazy, good-for-nothing Irishman. Hey, Cyclone, do you think this is a day off for a weather man? Hop to it, Captain Parker, would you mind arising? There is food for you, Joe, Van, Taffy! Russ, do you think you can run that fire from your sleeping bag? This is no remote control stove. Oh, Taffy, I said get up!"

"I'll get 'em up for you, Simon," says

"On an upper bunk Joe de Ganahl is pounding away on a typewriter."

O'Brien, huddling down in his bag in mock alarm. "Taffy, get up; don't you hear Simon calling you? Dana," he whispers loudly to Doc Coman across the way; "Dana, let's get up. All together now. One, two, three"—and he and Doc roll over on the other side. "Isn't that fine, Simon?"

"Confound you," laughs Larry with a show of great wrath and seizes a coal shovel. O'Brien disappears into his sleeping bag as if somebody had yanked him by the feet, howling while Larry belabors him with the shovel. "I'll get up, Simon; yes, I will." And then Larry starts for the door and breakfast. O'Brien sighs a long sigh and relaxes again, murmuring as he goes to sleep: "It's all right, Taffy, Simon's gone."

But in a few minutes figures shuffle out of the gloom and gather around the stove and lantern, for the gasoline light is not turned on at first. They group elbow to elbow near the comfortable red glow of the fire, warming their hands and pulling on the socks and boots which they could not put on in their bags.

Every one has to get up for breakfast, a routine must be maintained and nobody is permitted to lie abed just because he wants to. That way lies breakdown and insanity. Normal life is difficult at best under confinement and lack of sunlight, and we have four months of darkness ahead.

One by one the men pull on their parkas and go quietly out of the door, subdued as men are the world over before breakfast. The moon is shining in a weird-looking sky. It is light-colored over the gray snow line of the horizon, and above purple or magenta. In the north is a yellow glow, which shows that the sun is shining somewhere. We slip down the outside passage to the mess hall, and a puff of vapor rushes in as the door is opened.

News From the World.

Those who live in the mess hall have finished their breakfast and are standing or smoking or lying on bunks enjoying the relaxation that follows a good meal and tobacco. There is talk of the faraway world, news that came in the night before over the radio, and wonder at all the awful things which happen there—floods and tornadoes and airplane wrecks and murders and burglaries. It must be a tough place to live in, that world; not quiet and peaceful like ours, with only the Barrier and scurvy to worry about. But this breakfast is a serious affair, for we have only two meals a day, and needed immediate attention.

Sometimes we have stewed prunes but usually the first dish is cereal, excellent cereal, on which is milk made from milk powder or canned milk. Very good, too. We have almost forgotten there is such a thing as cream. Then cakes and syrup or honey, with coffee or tea, or perhaps George has been feeling particularly beneficent and has thawed out some eggs for scrambled eggs and bacon, with hot corn bread and syrup. And a few days ago he raised us all to the tenth heaven of delight with chicken a la king on toast for breakfast. No wonder Taffy Davies is getting fat and Paul Siple weighs 200 pounds.

The meal over, there is the usual period of doldrums and lazy conversation while smoking and then the men drift out to various tasks. The mess table is cleared and June, who is a jack of all trades, gets out a sheet of aluminum and a pair of dividers. With his square head and beard he looks like General Grant. George Tennant, with his clipped red head and spectacles, and Arnold Clark, in his immaculate undershirt, are clearing away the remains of the meal. Mason is wrestling with a burnt transformer which is an incredible mess of twisted wires and insulation. Peterson, with earphones clamped over his blonde head and with long legs stretched under the radio table, is trying to pick up a station in New Zealand and cussing under his breath in Norwegian. On an upper bunk Joe de Ganahl is pounding away on a typewriter for which he has rigged up a sliding desk which he can move back and forth over his legs.

Keep Working Is the Rule.

Chips picks up a saw and hammer and nails, and, with a bite in his ever-present plug of tobacco, goes off to his task of converting odds and ends of boards into something useful. In the machine shop there is the whir of a lathe where Czegka, whose passions are bridge, higher mathematics and his tools, is making a tiny screw for a theodolite. He peers over his glasses with an unseeing glance at an intruder and goes on working silently.

In the other house old Martin Ronne has settled himself and his hawklike nose over his sewing machine. Martin can make anything for man to wear—windproof clothing, canvas boots to go over reefer socks, new types of helmets, all sorts of things come from his busy machine where he blinks contentedly all day long.

"Keep working all the time, everything all right," is Martin's motto. He ought to know, as he has been through two Arctic winters with Amundsen on the Northeast Passage and came down here with the Fram. He has been sailor, mate, captain of square riggers, petty officer in the Norwegian Navy, and on three polar expeditions. His greatest pleasure is listening over the radio every other Saturday evening to his son. Martin is a great favorite.

"Don't touch those fires," warns Cyclone Haines. He and Harrison pull on their parkas and go out to make a balloon run. Poking the fire makes smoke which interferes with the observation. Cyclone fills the balloon in the little shelter against the house, and when it is released goes back inside to record the altitude and angles telephoned to him by Harrison, who, muffled against the cold, turns the screws on his theodolite with aching fingers and vainly stamps feet which grow painful and then numb. Many a frostbite is the price of meteorological data work.

A dirty parka, from which peers a round face and round glasses on a round nose moves out of the door and into the tunnel. Taffy Davies is inside supporting the glasses, and lantern in hand he clambers through a tunnel to the house where his magnetic instruments are placed, to do mysterious things with them, so incomprehensible that only a few have the timerity to ask what it all

Tariff Tinkers in Dilemma Striving to Aid Lumber, Yet Not Ruin Shingle Industry

If Duty Is Increased, as Proposed in New Bill, the Chief Effect, Experts Point Out, Will Be to Drive Builders to Patent Roofing.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 18.

THE tariff is likely at times to be a two-edged sword. It is so in the case of shingles.

To protect the lumber mills of Oregon and Washington against Canadian competition, the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, in their secret drafting of the new tariff bill, wrote into the measure a 25 per cent ad valorem duty on shingles. Shingles are now on the free list.

To those who know anything about tariff making, it is significant that the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Representative Willis C. Hawley, is from Oregon and the dominant member of the sub-committee which passed upon the lumber schedules, Representative Lindley H. Hadley, is from Washington.

In his blistering attack on the tariff bill in the House last Saturday, Representative Henry T. Rainey (Rep.) of Illinois, charged without qualification that the shingle duty was imposed because Mr. Hawley lives in Oregon and Mr. Hadley lives in Washington. Neither of these gentlemen undertook to deny the impeachment. The Illinoisan declared that their joint efforts would tax the people heavily "in order to enable the lumber barons of Washington and Oregon to maintain an industry which does not exist, because the shingle industry in those States is a by-product industry."

Rainey estimated that all the increases in the lumber schedule—for new duties were placed on maple and birch and cedar lumber as well as on shingles—would add nearly $300,000,000 a year to building costs in the United States. He congratulated Hawley and Hadley on their "effective" work in the committee.

Just why the shingle tariff may prove a two-edged weapon is shown in the record of an investigation made by the United States Tariff Commission in order to determine whether differences in production costs between the United States and Canada were such as to warrant the protection sought by domestic producers.

Testimony of Experts.

The Tariff Commission's conclusions, embodied in a report to President Coolidge, formed the backbone of the argument presented to the Ways and Means Committee against the proposed tariff by a group of stained-shingle manufacturers and 510 lumber retailers from all over the United States. The Commission's report has been called to the attention of President Hoover, and there is reason to believe that some of his advisers, on the strength of it, are apprehensive of ill effects from the proposed duty that would far outweigh any possible benefits.

In the first place, a tariff on shingles would hit the American farmer harder than any other class of consumers, for the farmer is estimated to use 70 per cent of the total annual shingle consumption in the United States. His shingle bill is placed by the retail dealers at about $24,000,000 a year, to which would be added, under the proposed duty, about $6,000,000, without taking account of the pyramided costs of the tariff.

In the second place—and this is a point which also is giving concern to Administration officials—there is solid ground in the Tariff Commission's report for the fear that if the price of wooden shingles is increased, as it would be increased under the Hawley-Hadley tariff, the effect would be to wipe out the wooden shingle business in the United States and turn it over wholly to the makers of patent shingles.

Less Demand for Wood.

The Tariff Commission reported that in recent years there has been an enormous expansion in the sale of composition shingles, largely at the expense of cedar shingles. Asphalt roofing, especially, has been since 1908 a damaging competitor, and in the same years there has been an increase in the production of other roofing materials, notably tile and asbestos.

For these and other reasons, including the multiplication of anti-shingle ordinances in cities and towns and the general farm depression, there has been a steady decrease in the use of cedar shingles, in spite of increasing population.

From United States Commerce reports, the lumber dealers in their argument before the Ways and Means Committee estimated that the annual consumption of wooden shingles declined from 20,000,000 "squares" in 1909 to 10,500,000 in 1927, while in the same period the use of patented roofing materials grew from 10,000,000 "squares" to 34,000,000.

The lumber dealers also pointed out that the inroads of patent roofing materials on cedar shingles were not checked during the four years of the Payne-Aldrich law, carrying a duty on shingles, but that, on the contrary, American shingle production declined 12 per cent while the competitive materials continued to gain.

The truth is, the lumber dealers assert, that the trouble with the domestic shingle industry is too deep-seated to be cured by a tariff. The underlying trouble, as they see it, is that the domestic industry has persisted in turning out a low-grade shingle, with the result that consumers have turned to the patented product, or, where wooden shingles were preferred, to the superior Canadian shingle. The Canadian mills produce a high-grade "edge-grain" shingle, whereas, as the report of the Tariff Commission shows, the Washington and Oregon mills produce, for the most part, a low-grade shingle known to the trade as "flat-grain."

Criticism of Quality.

The "flat-grain" shingle, in the combination lumber and shingle mills of Oregon and Washington, is made from the poorer parts of logs, after the better parts have been utilized in lumber manufacture. It was this practice which led Representative Rainey to characterize the shingle industry of those States as really a non-existent industry, in that the shingles produced by the combination mills are a by-product in lumber manufacture. The British Columbia "edge-grain" shingle requires the use of the whole log. Better logs are used, and the result is a superior product, costing considerably more to make than the inferior domestic shingle.

The lumber dealers maintain that the continued manufacture of low-grade shingles by the domestic mills is directly responsible for the passage of anti-shingle ordinances by more than 200 American cities.

"As pointed out by the Tariff Commission," says the brief of the lumber dealers, "low-grade shingles have a tendency to warp and curl, and they constitute a serious fire hazard by permitting the lodgment of sparks and burning embers beneath the roof covering. Shingles of the better grades are at least as fire resistant as patent roofings, and in

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Thinks Literature Has Degenerated.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN this day and age, it seems that the colleges throughout the country have lost most of their prestige, which they had a century ago. I do not mean that the high standards and abilities of our professors have deteriorated, as compared with the old regime, but I do mean they lack the culture of their antecedents of a century ago. I do not mean this as a disparagement or innuendo on their ability. No doubt this is caused by our age of commercialism in which nothing is of any value which does not help to produce the God Almighty Dollar. Nowadays few go to college for the sake of learning or for culture development.

It seems to me that the trend of literature is gradually on the downgrade instead of the reverse—in this country as well as in England. Compare the literature in both countries of the first 50 years of the 15th century with that of the latter half and today. No doubt, there is a profusion of writing today, but behind it is the dollar, not literature. The high ideals of literature are fast slipping away, the sources of inspiration are fast precipitating into nothing, and soon we will have nothing but a claptrap routine of experimentation, which now is slowly beginning. No doubt the benefits of science to mankind are opulent but the price being paid is very great. Day by day man is fast becoming a cog in a huge machine and soon his individuality will be devoured.

The attitude of the average college student is very discouraging. He doesn't seem to have any idea or thought of what it's all about and instead of developing his intellectual powers, it seems to be vice versa, the sensual. This, no doubt at the present, is but on the surface, for with the supremacy of the machine and this age of commercialism, of what use is intellectual culture. Commercially, it is practically valueless, but spiritually and for the beauties of God, it is priceless. The pleasures of the mind and the insight to see the beauties of it and of God, are the highest attainments that man can strive for.

Radio and the Weather.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AS I lie here with the rain tap-tapping a melancholy dirge—a death song for another crop year, as I cannot plow for corn or make a garden—I marvel at the depravity of the human mind.

With what arrogance does it exploit new inventions regardless of the general good!

What if the radio is responsible for the awful weather conditions all over the world? Is it not a wonderful invention and does it not employ so many interesting, if useless, people?

It would be a shame to stop broadcasting even temporarily or discontinue in the spring so the farmer could get in his crop, as this would inconvenience such lovely talented folks and certain people's dollars. WM. WOLFE.

Hopewell, Mo.

Blessed Be the Talkies.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A DEAF man lifts his glass in your column to the manager of a New York movie theater who advertises his house as "100 Per Cent Silent" and is doing a capacity business. I hereby offer a resolution that this manager be hanged, drawn and quartered. Like your Normandy correspondent I, too, am among the unfortunate who "having ears hear not." Unable for years to go to the spoken drama, I have been dragged to the "movies" by the family's unanswerable argument that it was the only form of dramatic entertainment I could enjoy. Then came the "talkies," which have been to me like the King's pardon.

Now I have a valid excuse before which the wiles of women are helpless. Now I can stay at home o' nights, without fighting the 15 decisive battles of the world, all of which I regularly used to lose. Now I can commune, when the mood is on me, with that candid old snob, Montaigne; with that grand old grouch, Carlyle; with that princeliest of American Democrats, Thoreau; linger an uneasy hour in Swinburne's "Forsaken Garden"; and occasionally gallop along with some pranky adventurer of the haute monde and the underworld whom E. Phillips Oppenheim has pulled out of his inexhaustible silk hat. Yes, here's a deaf man who has been liberated from the inanity of the movies by the talkies, bless their chattering tongues.

EARLESS.

Mr. Bartlett and His Client.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

NONE of the finer instincts of honor and decorum seem, as a general rule, to animate our public officials in this day. Coarse disregard of the conventional forms of decency is the rule rather than the exception.

The public being prepared, the Governor announces that Mr. Bartlett of his firm, attorney for Mr. Ryckoff, is doing the proper thing to remain as a member of the St. Louis Police Board while defending a man charged with an offense against the city of St. Louis.

I believe Mr. Bartlett has been poorly advised.

MR. HOOVER'S OPPORTUNITY.

President Hoover is reported in Washington dispatches as dissatisfied with some of the schedules in the new tariff bill, particularly those of sugar, brick and cement. Just what his attitude is is not definitely known, though it is a fair presumption, to put it mildly, that he questions the wisdom of the proposed levies. What he intends to do is unknown. His silence in the circumstances, or deliberation, is understandable. The attitude of public opinion towards the President is, we believe, genuinely friendly.

His position is difficult. A Congress, of his own party, has at the beginning of his administration, run amuck. There was no mandate from the people in the November election for Congress to enact a new customs act. The expectation was for a "limited revision," as Mr. Hoover stated in his message. But the Ways and Means Committee has flouted the President and defied public sentiment. Instead of "limited revision" it has in effect undertaken to repeal the present customs law by drafting a new act which will add hundreds of millions to the cost of living.

We do not believe it extravagant to say that Mr. Hoover is confronted by a crisis, that the success or failure of his administration will largely be determined by his action or inaction, that he will emerge from the test with his leadership established or gravely impaired, if not destroyed.

The Post-Dispatch sincerely hopes that Mr. Hoover will meet the challenge of the special privilegists with courage and decision. Every properly selfish reason urges that course, as does every patriotic reason. Mr. Hoover can have no illusions as to how he reached the White House. He knows he never was the choice of the party bosses, that he was never the choice of the interests which the Ways and Means Committee are serving with unconscionable grants of subsidy. Public sentiment nominated him. Public confidence elected him.

A man of the President's extraordinary business training and mastery of economics can clearly foresee the popular reaction at home to increased prices for food, clothing, shelter which must inevitably follow the enactment of the Hawley tariff bill. He can clearly foresee that the reaction of other nations, of which the first murmurs are already heard, will be reprisal. His vision of a sounder, broader prosperity—the vision which inspired his laborious tour of South America as President-elect—will be shattered. His dream of a finer international comity, under the aegis of liberal, mutually profitable trade relations, will be wrecked. The country's high hopes of his presidency, predicated upon his unparalleled equipment and practical genius, will be dashed to the ground by the rapacity of the tariff barons.

This is no time for mincing words. It is either fight or quit. There has been nothing of the quitter in Herbert Hoover's career. He has fought his way to the top. If he continues in character he will now wage the fight of his life.

As to what his generalship should be, history is as always the great tutor. Our fighting Presidents—the Wilsons, Roosevelts, Clevelands—never hesitated to appeal to the people. And none of them, perhaps, ever commanded greater public confidence than Mr. Hoover does at this minute. Nor was any of them ever armed in greater righteousness than Mr. Hoover will be if he chooses to declare war upon the tariff spoilsmen.

The going may be rough for a time, but the opportunity has been presented to Mr. Hoover to rout the enemy, to intrench himself impregnably in the people's esteem and trust, and to lay the foundation for a notable presidency by keeping faith with the American people.

AUTOMATIC PROSPERITY.

It has been for a long time suspected that wants are insatiable, that one want is satisfied only to create another.

We have now the impressive authority of Mr. Hoover and a dozen other men of affairs that this is an incurable characteristic of humankind. In their Report on Recent Economic Changes they foresee only rosy skies ahead of our prosperity because "wants are almost insatiable," and "one want satisfied only makes way for another." As they see it, what we have now was no more earnestly desired than what we hope to have in time to come. It is upon this philosophy that our prosperity is founded. "Believe it or not," as Ripley says, there is no such thing as the satisfied man, woman or child. This is, too, the philosophy back of the new industrial belief in which Mr. Ford, Mr. Vauclain, and Mr. Gerard Swope, are united. These gentlemen hold that only high wages make buyers of the working classes, and therefore only high wages are industrially scientific. It is also the philosophy behind the growing feeling in the United States against immigration. The poor immigrant, once sought because he would work long hours for small wages, is now rejected by the industrialist because as a non-buyer he is not a market for what he produces.

Says the report which Mr. Hoover and his associates have signed: "The conclusion is that economically we have a boundless field before us; that there are new wants that will make way for newer wants as fast as they are satisfied."

So don't worry about prosperity. It is automatic.

It will be interesting to watch for economy editorials in some of the Missouri newspapers that helped to down central purchasing and thus preserve to themselves the privilege of printing constitutional amendments at maximum prices. This bill against the State runs from $300 to $2000 annually for each of the 114 counties.

THE HAIG AND THE PRINCE.

Just as soon as the negotiations were concluded and the announcement unequivocally made that Hagen and the Prince of Wales would meet Sir Victor Sassoon and Aubrey Boomer in a friendly foursome in Swinley Forest we were morally certain that Hagen and the Prince would win. This conviction, let us hasten to say, implied no disparagement of Sir Victor and Aubrey. They are rare golfers, those chaps, who have proved their mettle op many a terrain, but the fact remains, nevertheless, that when Hagen is at his top stride and the Prince is poking par in the ribs they are just about an unbeatable team. In any event that was the position we took and steadfastly held to, despite the contrary consensus of the cognoscenti.

And when at last the great day dawned, and when the Prince stepped up to the first tee in a blue shirt and flowing serape and the plum-color velvet knickers popularized by Ambassador Dawes, the Adolphe Menjou of diplomacy—when Eddie Windsor thus arrayed took his stance while Hagen stood reassuringly by in a white surtout, lavender pants, pastel slippers, fondling a driver like the club Frederick Barbarossa used to wield—when our heroes thus appeared we knew that they were as ready as Gridley was when Dewey said "Shoot!"

Win they did. And Swinley Forest licking its divots, smiles and carries on.

MR. LENROOT WINS.

The experience which ex-Senator Irvine L. Lenroot has had with the United States Senate ought to be salutary. Mr. Lenroot has finally been confirmed as a member of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, but it has required the whole strength of Mr. Hoover's administration to put him over by a vote of 42 to 27. The vote was preceded by seven hours of debate in executive session.

What was the objection to Mr. Lenroot? For years a member of the Senate from Wisconsin, he was recognized as one of the ablest men in the upper Chamber of Congress. He enjoyed at the outset the support of the La Follette liberals, and it was they who at last turned him out. Like Mr. Kellogg, and like Mr. Cummins of Iowa, indeed like many another United States Senator whose heart at the outset beat for popular causes, Mr. Lenroot succumbed to the subtle influences of privilege which play around a United States Senator at Washington as lightning plays about the summit of Pike's Peak. His complete apostacy came when as Chairman of the Public Lands Committee in the Senate he used the great influence of that office to obstruct inquiry into the naval oil leases. In that unparalleled opportunity for public service the Wisconsin Senator finally sank into the background and let Senator Walsh of Montana, who was merely a member of the committee, make the investigation his own.

That ended Mr. Lenroot in the Senate. He next appeared as the leader of the Power Trust's great Washington lobby, for which he is said to have received $20,000. In the hearing before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce Mr. Lenroot carried the argument against an investigation of the Power industry by a Senate committee. Nevertheless, Mr. Coolidge nominated this obviously disqualified lame duck to a place on the Customs Court. The Senate refused to confirm him. Nothing daunted by what had happened, one of Mr. Hoover's first official acts was to renominate Mr. Lenroot. After another Homeric debate, most of it in executive session and therefore unheard by the press, the nomination was confirmed.

Unless we are mistaken, the moral in this case can hardly go unheeded either by the people of the United States or their future Presidents. Public decency can be beaten down, but it is heartening to see it go down fighting as it did in this case.

CONUNDRUM.

It is the opinion of K. Reid Campbell, writing in the financial publication, Your Money, that the aircraft industry is facing a season of overproduction. At the beginning of this year there were in operation 6700 planes in the United States. It is estimated that in the present year the numerous airplane plants that have sprung up will produce between 15,000 and 20,000 finished craft. Taking into consideration the ships that will be exported and those that will be junked, Mr. Campbell figures that there will be 15,000 planes "in service" at the end of 1929.

It happens that the actual number of licensed pilots in the country totals only 6600. Mr. Campbell estimates, on the basis of the capacity of existing air schools, that 2500 students will become licensed pilots by the end of the year. There then will be 9100 pilots to fly 15,000 machines. He asks who is going to buy the planes that will be turned out this year and who is going to fly them? It is not easy to reduce to terms of mathematics the future status of a dynamic industry; nevertheless, Mr. Campbell poses an interesting conundrum.

Dwight Davis has accepted the Governorship of the Philippines. As Mr. Stimson proved, one way to get home in the President's cabinet is to touch some of our territorial bases on the way around.

CENTRAL PURCHASING LOSES.

Central purchasing in Missouri, which it was estimated would save the State $750,000 a year, has gone down to defeat.

Loss of this measure is a severe blow to the prestige of Gov. Caulfield. He made central purchasing one of the principal planks of his legislative platform, but if he moved to save it the effort was futile. It is not apparent that the Governor went to great lengths to prevent its defeat. He apparently has not the quality of constructive leadership which characterized such governors as Woodrow Wilson, Robert La Follette, and Alfred E. Smith. Gov. Caulfield sat in his office and saw Secretary of State Becker carry Capitol Hill, an incident far from comforting to the people Missouri.

It is likely that in the absence of strong leadership the State was not ready for such a constructive move. The oposition of Mr. Becker was powerful enough, but central purchasing was also opposed by the State Highway Commission, the State University, and the four state teachers' colleges. Theoretically all these should be under a central purchasing agency, but the inevitable opposition to change proved too much for the bill. It has not been a matter in which Missouri can take pride. The spectacle of a considerable segment of the country press fighting for the present privilege of printing constitutional amendments at top prices, and the somewhat low comedy of the Secretary of State and attaches of his office rallying all those in their political debt to support the grab-bag we have now, is not a pleasing commentary upon our State government.

Apparently the American experts will have to wait for an answer on reparations until the British elections are over. As the Spanish writer, Senor Madariaga says, all foreign affairs unfortunately have to be negotiated with foreigners, and they too have politics.

Golf balls are to be larger next year. An efficiency survey shows that .31 per cent of all swings miss the ball and .13 top it; but next year all blows will be 100 per cent. What a country!

If the street railway company thought terminable permits could be terminated, it would not want one.

The best thing the Cardinals have done on their eastern trip was to get out of Pittsburg.

WILL HE USE THE BIG STICK?

A Defense of Mass Production

Edward A. Filene, famous Boston merchant, has studied mass production in all its aspects since its inception and is convinced, that properly used, it holds possibilities of inestimable good to mankind; cites the automobile industry as evidence mass production does not result in unemployment.

EDWARD A. FILENE in The Atlantic Monthly.

IT IS obvious, with a little thought, that the masses of the American people are consuming many things which they could not afford to buy even 10 years ago. The contribution of mass methods is reflected in the general comparatively high standard of living, in the rarity of acute poverty among those who are able and willing to work, and in the general ownership of such luxuries as the motor car and the wide use of the telephone.

The point is this: Mass production, by reducing costs and prices and by increasing wages, has increased the purchasing power of everyone. The increase in per capita consumption has kept pace with the increase in per capita production, so that in the long run, mass production has not resulted in unemployment. The reverse is true.

Take the automobile industry as an example. In 1895 only four automobiles were made in the United States. Probably only a few dozen workmen were employed in the industry. For the next few years the increase in the use of cars was slow, chiefly because the price was high. Automobiles were rich men's toys. But, as mass production brought the price of cars down to a point where most people could afford to buy them, the sales of cars rapidly increased.

In 15 years the production of cars per man hour increased tenfold. That is, in a given period one man can turn out the number of cars that 10 men made 15 years ago. To the old school of thought it would follow that nine men out of every 10 were laid off in the automobile industry because of the improved methods. The fact is that the number of workers in the automobile and subsidiary industries has grown constantly until in 1926 there were employed, directly and indirectly, 3,743,781, according to figures of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. In 1919, in automobile and truck factories alone 210,559 workers were employed. In 1926 this figure had grown to 375,281, in spite of the fact that production per man hour had increased more than 25 per cent between 1919 and 1926.

While only 375,281 workers were employed in automobile and truck factories in 1926, hundreds of thousands more found employment in industries directly dependent on motor cars and trucks. For example, there were 320,000 workers in automobile-accessory factories; 100,000 tire-factory workers; 455,000 dealers and salesmen distributing automobiles, trucks, tires and other accessories; 1,400,000 chauffeurs and truck drivers; 575,000 garage and repair-shop employes. The automobile is the largest consumer of gasoline and oils, and it is estimated that 110,000 workers in this field owe their employment to the motor industry.

In addition, nearly 400,000 jobs in a wide variety of industries and professions probably would not exist if mass methods had not brought the automobile to its present general use—if machinery and intelligent management had not made possible the great increase in the volume of production. Some who have studied this situation—and I can find no grounds for disagreement with their figures—estimate that the automobile has given employment to 70,000 iron and steel workers, 95,000 railroad workers, 15,000 plate-glass workers, 10,000 tannery and leather workers, 15,000 woodworkers, 20,000 machine-tool workers, and that is not a complete list.

So I cannot see how anyone can find just cause to regret the application of scientific mass methods to the automobile industry, or to any other industry. There is no ground for the fear that machinery and the consequent increased productivity will cause more than temporary unemployment. In the motor industry there is no evidence of even temporary unemployment due to increased production. With the exception of 1921, the year of our most serious depression, the number of workers in automobile factories has increased each year, advancing from 210,559 in 1919 to 375,281 in 1926. In the same period the average earnings of these employes increased from $1482 to $1726 a year, an increase of more than 23 per cent. To complete the case for scientific mass methods, the figures show that the average wholesale value of motor vehicles declined from $955 in 1919 to $714 in 1926—a reduction of more than 25 per cent.

That is what happens in most basic industries which adopt scientific mass methods. As prices come down and earnings rise most people increase their consumption of practically all kinds of goods. It is hardly possible to set a limit to the number of suits, hats, dresses, books and household supplies the average person would buy provided the price were made low enough and wages were increased. And this will apply to almost all "luxury" goods—if mass methods put the price within the reach of the general public.

Thus, while for a short time a great increase in the productivity per man in a particular plant may cause some workers to be laid off, yet very shortly the stimulated consumption due to the increased buying power brought by the use of mass production creates added demand for commodities and services which give employment to as many as or more than before.

I have studied mass production in all of its aspects since its inception, and have watched its development. I have studied especially closely its social and economic aspects, and I can say without qualification that if it is used by leaders who understand that in order to make the greatest total profits they must pay ever-higher wages, constantly reduce prices, and keep profits per unit of output down to the very minimum, mass production holds no dangers to the common welfare, but on the contrary holds possibilities of accomplishing for mankind all of the good that theoretical reformers or irrational radicals hope to secure by revolutionary means.

OPTIMIST AND PESSIMIST.

SPIKE—a famous polo pony and the favorite mount of Gen. Pershing—had the spotlight at one of Washington's smartest balls the other night.

From a loose box at the end of the ballroom Spike surveyed the scene during the evening he submitted, somewhat bored, to being petted and fed sugar by the gay crowd.

The occasion was the polo ball, and another famous polo pony, Hunter, were the honor guests.

Both of the horses saw service in France during the World War. Spike has been retired from further service at the age of 26. But Hunter at 25 still is going strong.

A mock polo game was the feature of the evening. While the game was in progress all traces of boredom disappeared from the two horses. They watched every move with keen attention and quivered with excitement at every sound of the referee's whistle.

IF he is in the right mood, Col. Arturo Maria Zuloaga, the military attache of the Argentine Embassy, can fairly take your breath away with the story of how he once risked his life in a balloon trip across the Andes.

Meteorologists in Argentina and Chile were mapping air currents. There was a dispute as to whether the high altitude winds over the Andes blew east or west. Zuloaga and a companion volunteered to find out.

They would go up in a balloon at Mendoza on the west coast of Chile and let themselves be floated by the high altitude winds. It was suicide if the west winds theory was wrong.

Five miles up they were blown by a two-mile gale across the peaks of the Andes. Their point was proven.

They successfully made a dangerous landing on a precipitous mountain side were reached, hours later, by a rescue party from below.

Not since that time has a balloonist made the same perilous trip across the world's second highest mountain range.

$2,000,000 ASKED FOR ENLARGEMENT OF KOCH HOSPITAL

Bond Issue Would Provide 600 Beds for Tuberculosis Patients at City Institution.

TWO COMMITTEES FORMED BY SOCIETY

One Will Prepare Necessary Ordinance and Other Will Create Public Interest in It.

Plans to obtain a $2,000,000 bond issue to increase the bed capacity at the Robert Koch Hospital have been undertaken by the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis, it was announced today. It is the intention of the organization to obtain 600 beds at the hospital in addition to the 416, which is the present capacity.

Two committees, one to prepare the necessary ordinance for the bond issue and one to create public opinion in favor of the measure, have been formed. William 3. Bedal, Charles P. Williams, John C. Tobin, John B. Edwards, Homer Hall, J. Sidney Salkey and Eugene Tittmann, all attorneys, comprise the legislative committee which will prepare the ordinance. Edwards, former chairman of the St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners, in addition, has been named chairman of the special bond issue committee.

Indorsements of the plan, according to an official announcement of the committee, already have been received from the Trudeau Club, which consists of 70 tuberculosis experts, from the St. Louis Medical Society and from the health department of the Community Council.

It is planned to make the Koch Hospital improvements part of a general bond issue if one is voted upon at the fall election, and to make it a special measure on the ballot if there is no general bond issue.

The necessity for the improvements according to Tobin, who is president of the society, is based upon facts brought out by Dr. Howard Bell, tuberculosis controller and by conclusions reached by the American Public Health Association as the result of a survey of conditions in St. Louis. The organization found that St. Louis' bed capacity is below the standard for adequate city work, and is below that of other large cities.

The tuberculosis death rate in St. Louis, Tobin pointed out, increased 8 per cent last year, because St. Louis has not met the problem of increased population.

BEST GARDEN CONTEST OPEN TO ALL AMATEURS IN CITY

$25 District Prizes of $25 Each Offered by Horticultural Society.

A "Best Garden Contest," open to all amateurs living inside the city limits, and governed by the same rules as last year's contest, was announced today by the St. Louis Horticultural Society. An award of $25 will be given to the winners in each of 25 districts, and two city prizes, of $100 and $50, will be awarded in addition.

No award will be made in any district with fewer than 10 entries, the announcement stated. All gardens will be visited several times in the summer by judges. Entries must be made at the office of the Horticultural Society, 821 Central National Bank Building by June 1.

The name of the winner of the $100 prize will be engraved on the St. Louis Horticultural Society silver loving cup presented last year by the late Eugene H. Angert. Any one winning the cup three times becomes its permanent owner.

Should any of the winners of last year's district prizes win again this year, they will be awarded the bronze medal of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, and the $25 district prize will be awarded to the second best garden in that neighborhood.

Bond Issue Would Provide 600 Beds for Tuberculosis Patients at City Institution.

One Will Prepare Necessary Ordinance and Other Will Create Public Interest in It.

Plans to obtain a $2,000,000 bond issue to increase the bed capacity at the Robert Koch Hospital have been undertaken by the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis, it was announced today. It is the intention of the organization to obtain 600 beds at the hospital in addition to the 416, which is the present capacity.

Two committees, one to prepare the necessary ordinance for the bond issue and one to create public opinion in favor of the measure, have been formed. William S. Bodd, Charles P. Williams, John C. Tobin, John B. Edwards, Homer Hall, J. Sidney Salkey and Eugene Tritmann, all attorneys, comprise the legislative committee which will prepare the ordinance. Edwards, former chairman of the St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners, in addition, has been named chairman of the special bond issue committee.

Indorsements of the plan, according to an official announcement of the committee, already have been received from the Trudeau Club, which consists of 70 tuberculosis experts, from the St. Louis Medical Society and from the health department of the Community Council.

It is planned to make the Koch Hospital improvements part of a general bond issue if one is voted upon at the fall election, and to make it a special measure on the ballot if there is no general bond issue.

The necessity for the improvements according to Tobin, who is president of the society, is based upon facts brought out by Dr. Howard Bell, tuberculosis controller and by conclusions reached by the American Public Health Association as the result of a survey of conditions in St. Louis. The organization found that St. Louis' bed capacity is below the standard for adequate city work, and is below that of other large cities.

The tuberculosis death rate in St. Louis, Tobin pointed out, increased 8 per cent last year, because St. Louis has not met the problem of increased population.

While all of this has been particularly stimulating to the sale of high-grade shingles, the benefits have tended to react to the advantage of the poorer brands by keeping the shingle market alive.

"The reasonable conclusion to be drawn is that British Columbia edge-grain shingles have been an important influence in stopping the trend toward the use of substitute roofing materials. Prohibition of imports now would not turn the present United States market for British Columbia edge-grain shingles over to domestic producers, but over to substitute materials."

Tariff No Remedy.

The lumber dealers argued further, in opposition to the shingle tariff, that shingles from Canada, because of their superiority, do not undersell domestic shingles; that the cost of production is actually higher in Canada than the United States, that in the interest of timber conservation in the United States it is better to let Canadian shingles piece out our own production, and that a tariff on shingles would inevitably damage our trade relations with Canada.

"It is obvious," said the lumber dealers in their brief, "that the lesson that the American industry needs to learn is to concentrate on a higher standard of quality in its output and through organization and combined advertising and selling methods to place its product where it rightfully belongs. That the industry is ailing cannot be denied, but the ailment is internal and not from the outside.

"We cannot believe that Congress, under such circumstances, would use its legislative powers to try to cure an ailment, the remedy for which lies in the hands of the shingle operators of Oregon and Washington, nor be a party to legislation attempting to compel the American farmer to use a product which cannot give him satisfaction for his money."

But the lumber dealers, as the event shows, did not reckon with the pregnant fact that Chairman Hawley of the Ways and Means Committee lives in Oregon and Representative Hadley of the committee lives in Washington.

means. When Taffy starts explaining, his enthusiasm lets loose a torrent of words only rivaled when he speaks of the British jury system or the Constitution. For Taffy is a Canadian as well as a Welshman and a physicist.

The Map Maker at Work.

Larry Gould, his agitated hair, which he threatens to clip, tumbling in all directions, is in the scientific workroom making lines on paper which he calls elevations and contours. They are of the Rockefeller Mountains, and any one seeking trouble may find it by casually remarking, "Those the mountains in which you were lost, Larry?" Then his head resembles Medusa's and sparks fly. Lost, with a theodolite and stars and a sun to shoot at—what an aspersion on a geologist! When Larry is not making geologic or geographic maps he is working on lectures to be delivered before the student body of the Antarctic University, of which he is board of trustees, president, dean and professor.

A countenance surrounded and covered by black hair and beard, from which shine a pair of exceedingly bright eyes, now twinkling with mischievous humor, again gay with an elfish cynicism, rests on a rather rotund body leaning against a bunk end. One hand is waving in a Gallic gesture in the air. "You see, it is this way," begins Coman, preparing with deprecatory voice to go into a subject which has been forced upon him and of which the less educated among us scarcely recognize the vocabulary. There is a lot of wisdom, knowledge of men as well as of books, under the nonchalant manner of our medical man and zoologist, who will presently shrug his shoulders and dissapear into his room to breed a vaccine culture under difficulties.

The door opens and a small figure alive with a quick energy bustles in with an armful of things. "Here you are, Doc," he calls. Blackie is the supply man, and with his flashlight he burrows all morning long in tunnels and houses, bringing in food for the day, finding things for every department, laying down the law as to what one may or may not have. A tough job is G. Hamilton Black's. And at night he may be found in his element, eyes sparkling, talking like a Coney Island barber as he runs a blackjack game for tobacco, our most valuable commodity.

There is movement in an upper bunk and a head appears as McKinney rolls over to where he can look down on us and sleepily light a cigarette. He has been up all night in his darkroom developing pictures for aerial surveys. One hardly sees Mac since the darkroom has been finished. This quiet, smiling man, whose chief characteristic is a courteous charm of manner, never lacks volunteers to help him, for in some indescribable way he makes them feel that he is working with them rather than that they are working under his directions. He has had a few hours' sleep and presently will be back in his workshop to look again at his precious negatives.

One would never guess from his manner that he is a pilot of free balloons, airships and airplanes with several thousand hours in the air to his credit. But with all his gentleness, when Mac wants something done it is somehow always done and in his way.

Over a big board in the scientific room O'Brien is working with triangle and protractor on a map of the camp. Under the glare of the lamp his shaven head and long nose and jutting chin make him look like one of those Roman Emperors whose heads stick out of marble togas, but ideas one may have about him are dispelled when he utters some jibe at human frailty. Then he is unmistakably Irish. He applies himself diligently to his figures and lines.

He has frozen his fingers and the long nose and his toes also, working a transit at 40 below, and for every line on the map he had to thaw himself out.

The Aviator's Employment.

Balchen sits on the edge of his bunk forever working a slide rule and scribbling and drawing designs. "Just stresses on the landing gear," he will say, looking up with a grin, and forthwith forget you are there. The only books which seem to interest him are those on engineering, airplane design and tales of exploration in the polar regions.

Hanson is busy fixing up some new apparatus for radio experiments in connection with the aurora. He bustles about at odd hours and at midnight, when every one is abed, we are apt to hear him scurrying over the roof to look at wires he has run from the other house or coming in after working late in the radio shack.

Chris Braathen, in the snug little house which he and Walden built, is working on a model of a ship or making soles of seal hide to put on the bottom of canvas boots. The dog drivers are exercising their dogs or chopping up seals for food. Men on duty in the houses are sweeping, shoveling snow from the entrances and windows, bringing in coal and snow for water. Every one has something to do and the day goes quickly.

Through it all moves Commander Byrd, who is the focal point, the motive force, of all this activity, who gives it life and meaning. He follows everything which goes on, occasionally making suggestions and seldom giving orders. Yet he finds time to take a walk every day, a long one if there is little wind, and to spend long hours in reading philosophy—a favorite subject—or to write and think over plans for next year. And his catholicity of taste is such that when he is weary of philosophic speculation or scientific reading he will pick up a detective story and spend a long time between pages trying to guess who is the criminal.

It is dark when we go over for dinner at 4 o'clock. The stars are shining brighter than we ever saw before, the moon has swung around a little further, the last touch of sienna brown in the sky has vanished and it is night at the bottom of the world, although school has been out only an hour to the north of us. There is gayety in the mess hall. A loud-speaker is blaring forth music from home, the air is full of chatter and smoke, plates rattle and Freddie Crockett in his best French ushers us to our seats at the table.

The Scene at Dinner

The accomplishments of the mess are various. One has long arms and a passion for cleanliness, another makes lightning appear slow beside him, and now comes Freddie with a perfectly good French accent acquired at Cambridge trying to make us believe that "ragout cras de balene" is not whale stew. For we still have whale meat—lots of it—and it is very good, although it does not appear to improve with age. We are slowly coming to think that the popular conception of a whale as a fish may have some foundation in fact. Or we have seal flipper or roast pork or even chicken fricassee, as we did two Sundays ago. That was a day. And George's pies and cakes are so good that one forgets that he never wastes anything. The remains of scrambled eggs are liable to appear in the soup and be discovered only by accident and as the result of much inquiry and analysis.

The rest of the day is given up to anything we wish to do. In the mess hall a game of bridge starts in which Czegka is usually to be found peering over his glasses with his keen eyes. Garments are repaired and books hauled out and a brisk argument usually begins to die down and then start up again in another part of the room on other subjects. The topics discussed are as varied as the opinions, given with startling frankness.

The bridge game in which Commander Byrd so delights is on in the library with Harrison his partner, with McKinley and Joe Rucker against them. The victrola is playing, the librarian is checking up his books, answering as best as he may the question, which is the same here as anywhere else in the world: "What is a good book to read?" or writing at a table in the corner. Under a big reflector in the other room is a group of men reading and eating popcorn fresh from a frying pan held over the stove, or perhaps having a wild and woolly game of blackjack or hearts or poker for cigarettes. It is a happy and cheerful community.

Outside is the heart-numbing cold of the Antarctic, with its dismal suggestion of what it might do if it had the chance. But unless this part of the Barrier takes it into its head to leave home we are as snug as any group of men could be.

All games end at 9 o'clock and an hour later Larry calls "Lights out!" and we tumble into our sleeping bags. A monologue on some weighty and important topic is checked by a yell of "Good-night, Taffy," and all is silence.

A few candles blink in the darkness where books are being read until hands get too cold to hold them. Then one by one the candles go out and the night watchman is alone—alone to wander out into the shining night and look over a silent world in which he is the only moving thing.

Europe Must Abolish Tariff, Herriot Asserts

ists no fundamental difficulty. If Europe does not organize, customs barriers will not cease to rise, nothing will prevent dumping and the work of the League of Nations would be fruitless."

There is no reason, however, to renounce the work of political union despite the obstacles imposed by tradition. Under this reserve, Locheur sees clearly and speaks with justice. Friends of peace, men thoughtful of the future, must constantly repeat these counsels.

Would End Tariffs.

Europe, unite! How can you pretend to a stable equilibrium when so many ultra-protectionist interests are opposed and especially when Great Britain itself, according to President Mitchell of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, declares that tariffs could be advantageously reduced for all this community.

Europe, you must renounce the support of certain industries which install themselves here and there only under paradoxical conditions and which demand the heaviest protection to defend themselves against artificial labor conditions.

Europe, ask of your governments that instead of considering as annoying and indiscreet the propositions of the experts, that they examine a new method of diplomacy. The time has come when a study of the international distribution of coal could be more useful than one of these voluminous commentaries of diplomatic correspondence and all the implied vagaries of international gossip.

Calls for New Order.

Europe, take heed of your economic solidarity, the only durable foundation for political peace! Europe, study your resources and your agricultural products. Europe, put some order in your industrial production wherein we hear so much spoken on the subject of rationalization, which is merely a pedantic word for order.

Europe, help Russia to live and help Austria to breathe! How do you think that a state can remain politically honorable unless it can live by honorable labor? It is indispensable.

In what order can you commence? Locheur has defined an excellent method, that of the Cartel. That is, a collective entente on an increasing number of products. You can start with coal. Try this experiment; it will be decisive.

The conclusion of the deliberations of Geneva appears obvious. "Europeans, if you continue to devour each other, some day you will be all devoured together. "European order is the first step toward universal order.

HEAD OF U. S. MANUFACTURERS TO SPEAK HERE ON TARIFF LAW

J. E. Edgerton, at Meeting Tuesday, to Describe Changes Urged by Association.

John E. Edgerton, Lebanon, Tenn., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, which is advocating several revisions in the tariff law, will address a dinner meeting at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday at Hotel Jefferson, sponsored by the St. Louis branch of the association.

The meeting has been arranged through the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce, the Associated Industries, the Industrial Club and the Manufacturers and Merchants' Association.

Tariff revisions as proposed by the association include a consideration of differences in conditions of foreign and domestic competition. It suggests also the removal of the limitation upon the action of the President which now confines him to a limitation of 50 per cent in the range of change. The association further urges that the Tariff Commission be composed of an odd number of members to prevent deadlocks.

W2XAG to Be Call Letters Used — Permit Granted to General Electric for Experiments Between 11 P. M. and 5 A. M.

Permission has been granted to the General Electric Co., Schenectady, N.Y., to use 200,000 watts experimentally in broadcasting.

The experiments will be conducted between 11 p. m. and 5 a. m., St. Louis time. Five channels will be used for the experiments—550 kilocycles, 660 kilocycles, 790 kilocycles, 1150 kilocycles and 1500 kilocycles. The 550 kilocycle channel is that used by KSD.

The call letter of the experimental station which will do the broadcasting will be W2XAG. According to engineers representing the company, the experiments will be conducted immediately on a regular schedule basis.

The experiments are planned to determine:

First, to what extent 200,000 watts will increase the service range of a station.

Second, whether or not 10 kilocycles is adequate separation for stations of such power.

Third, whether a listener anywhere in the neighborhood of a 200,000-watt station can tune it out.

One member of the commission voted against permitting the experiment—Judge Ira E. Robinson of the Second Zone. Judge Robinson believes stations are already using too much power and shudders at the thought of 200,000 watts. The other four members of the commission voted in favor of the experiment, however, and it was authorized.

Operating tests of a 50,000-watt transmitter on a channel adjoining that being used by another station of similar power are being made with W2XN, experimental broadcaster of the Bell Telephone Laboratories at Whippany, N. J. This transmitter is exactly like that of WLW, Cincinnati, O. The experiments have been conducted on the 760 kilocycle channel used by WABC, key station at New York of the Columbia chain, after WABC has signed off. WABC's wave length is next to the 570 kc. channel used by WENR, the 50,000-watt Chicago station.

No advance notice of the tests was given generally, so only a few engineers and such listeners as happened to pick up the experimental broadcasts late at night tuned in W2XN. The radio editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer reports listening to the tests and hearing no interference between the two 50,000-watt stations. He did, however, find that KWKH, the 10,000-watt Henderson station at Shreveport, La., which was broadcasting at the time on the 850-kc. channel alongside W2XN, was "broad" and made considerable trouble. Both W2XN and WENR, as stated, seemed to be sharply

J. This transmitter is exactly like that of WLW, Cincinnati, O. The experiments have been conducted on the 500 kilocycle channel used by WABC, key station at New York of the Columbia chain, after WABC had signed off. WABC's wave length is next to the 870 kc. channel used by WENR, the 50,000-watt Chicago station.

No advance notice of the tests was given generally, so only a few engineers and such listeners as happened to pick up the experimental broadcasts late at night heard in W2XN. The radio editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer reports listening to the tests and hearing no interference between the two 50,000-watt stations. He did, however, find that KWKH, the 10,000-watt Henderson station at Shreveport, La., which was broadcasting at the time on the 850-kc. channel alongside W2XN, was "spread" and made considerable trouble. Both W2XN and WENR, it is stated, seemed to be sharply

San Isabel Forest, in Colorado, Delightful Objective for 2000-Mile Motor Tour

Good Camping Facilities and Modern Hotels

Two Routes Recommended for St. Louisans by Automobile Club, Both Good in All Weather—Pike's Peak Ascent a Side Trip—Forest Has 600,000 Acres, Including Wild, Rugged Country—Interesting Mountain Scenery.

By ROBERT L. BRADLEY,
Automobile Editor.

As vacation time nears, thoughts of St. Louis residents are turning to more extended automobile tours. The trip to Pueblo, Colo., 972 miles away, and the San Isabel National Forest, more than 600,000 acres of rugged mountains, shifting sand dunes and bottomless lakes and containing hundreds of miles of hard roads, is attractive.

Of the routes, two are popular—U. S. No. 40 South and the Santa Fe Trail.

The former branches southward at Manhattan, Kan., where U. S. 40 splits, and passes through Salina, Kan., to Limon, Colo., where, in turn, it diverges, the southern road going through Colorado Springs, from which Pueblo is only 40 miles south. The north branch of U. S. 40 South leads to Denver, a mile above sea level.

The touring department of the Automobile Club of Missouri reports that this route is in good condition. From Kansas City to Salina, U. S. 40 is half gravel, half concrete. From Salina to Pueblo the highway is mostly gravel, a hard surface in all kinds of weather. There are no bad dirt stretches along this route.

Route of the Santa Fe Trail, picturesque and historical, is as follows: U. S. 40 through Manhattan to Salina, Kan., where U. S. 81 cuts south to McPherson, Kan., on Kansas Highway No. 17 to Hutchinson, Kan., west on U. S. 50 south through Dodge City to Garden City, Kan., continuing on U. S. 50 through Syracuse, Kan., and La Junta, Colo., to Pueblo.

This series of roads is mostly gravel, with some pavement and dirt, according to the Automobile Club. The dirt sections are difficult of travel in wet weather.

If U. S. 40 South is taken, the motorist should plan to spend a day in Colorado Springs, which lies snug and clean in the shadow of Pike's Peak. Entertainment of visitors is the chief occupation of El Paso County, of which the Springs is the County seat.

Hotels and restaurants are excellent, though somewhat high-priced in the summer season. Suburban Manitou is the starting point for many drives. The one up Pike's Peak is thrilling, as many St. Louisans have learned.

Motor oil should be changed before and after making the Pike's Peak journey, to guard against ill effects from heat induced by down-hill compression driving. It should be borne in mind that second or low gear is compulsory in this climb, one of the most sustained in the West. If the ascent is attempted in high gear, radiator steam may ruin paint and polish or bearings will suffer.

Even veterans driving sightseeing buses or powerful passenger cars on schedule exercise the utmost caution. Conspicuous signs tell when to shift into second or low gear.

The Peak is only one of numerous trips from Colorado Springs. To get back to Pueblo, San Isabel Forest is about 25 miles west and a trifle south. Good roads lead through Wetmore, Beulah or Greenhorn, according to choice, and into the Greenhorn Mountains. Squirrel Creek, near Beulah, is a favorite picnic luncheon point, as is North Creek, also near Beulah. There is, however, no fishing in these two streams.

The Greenhorns, Spanish Peaks (two giant sentinels that rise abruptly 13,000 feet from the plains to the southward) and Sangre de Cristo Range, one of the most beautiful in the United States, afford remarkable scenery. The Spanish Peaks are visible from either Trinidad or Walsenburg, Colo.

It is said of the Greenhorns that their aspect changes from hour to hour, as the intensity of the light increases or diminishes. The name Sangre de Cristo, in English "the blood of Christ," came from the reddish glow of the snow-capped peaks at sundown, similar to Mount Ranier in the Pacific Northwest.

Mystical in their motion, the dunes of pure sand, 800 to 1000 feet in height, are constantly shifted into fantastic forms by the wind. They cover 60 square miles and are the largest inland shifting sand dunes in the United States, comparable to those of the Sahara.

Many of the highest mountains in Colorado are within the borders of San Isabel Forest, chief among them being Mount Blanca, elevation 14,363 feet. The range is 100 miles long and here, again, a superlative comes in: It is said to be the longest single line mountain range in the world.

The Forest is bounded on the north by the Royal Gorge of the Arkansas River and on the west by San Luis Valley, a stock-growing section east of the Continental Divide. Plains encroach on its eastern and southern boundaries. The entire region is rich in historical lore. It is related that some of De Soto's band of Spaniards, led by Moscosco de Alvarado, visited the Sangre de Cristos within 50 years of the discovery of America, long before the landing of the Pilgrims.

Near Westcliffe, which is tucked in the center of a mountain valley from which a splendid view may be had of the Sangre de Cristos, is Alpine Lodge. Near the lodge is the American Legion national camp ground.

In Marble Cave, which drops from the top of Milwaukee Peak to unknown and unsounded depths, early Spanish explorers hid their treasure, according to a legend. Forty crater lakes, containing trout of huge size, are located at timberline in the Forest. The Medano River meanders in fits and starts, disappearing in the sand just as it approaches the boundary of the Forest only to reappear five miles further in the form of an immense spring.

Varying in length from a few hundred feet to several miles, the stone walls of Cucharas are a landmark. Many are 100 feet high and have sides and ends as perpendicular and smooth as if laid by masons. According to legend, they were built as breast-works by defensive giants!

Fishermen find San Isabel trout streams a never-ending source of enjoyment. Camping grounds and other facilities are convenient; firewood is plentiful. The woods consist mostly of cone bearing evergreens, including lodgepole and bristle-cone pines, and Englemann spruce, mountain juniper and Douglas fir.

Characteristic birds are the water ouzel, long-crested jay (erroneously known as the blue-jay), camp-robber or Rocky Mountain jay, titlark (about the size of the canary and a wonderful singer), brown-capped rosy finch (highest ranging small bird in the country), and white-tailed ptarmigan.

San Isabel is in the heart of the Kit Carson region, where the famous Indian scout built forts and did battle with hostile Indians. Evidences of his adventures still remain. Many bloody battles and massacres characterized the early history of the region, when it was under Spanish domain, as well as later.

Lieut. Zebulon Pike spent much time there on his expedition to the peak that bears his name. It is related he raised the American flag in the forest for the first time, only to be lowered shortly afterward by a ranging party of Spaniards.

In whatever direction one motors in the forest he is bound to see scenery that can scarcely be equaled anywhere. The climate, due to the altitude, is pleasingly variable, cool in the shade on a hot day and at night.

Jerome, on Gasconade, In Heart of Scenic Area

St. Louisans May Motor Southwest on No. 66 Route Through Rolla, Branching Off Beyond Newburg — Outing Facilities Varied.

A few hours' drive—125 miles—from St. Louis, nestling aloof and tranquil at the juncture of the Gasconade River and Little Piney Creek, Jerome, Mo., offers almost every form of outdoor sport. It is only one of many resort towns close by, where bathing, boating, horseback riding, dancing and fishing (in season) may be enjoyed.

Driving out Manchester road—United States Highway No. 66—the motorist passes through Sullivan and on into Cuba, where the pavement ends, and, five miles further, a gravel detour continues most of the way to Rolla, where is located the Missouri School of Mines.

A mile or two beyond Newburg, six miles from Rolla, the Jerome road branches off to the right, along the Little Piney. A toll bridge over the Gasconade leads into Jerome. The view from this cool, shaded bridge is exceptional, coming after the hot, dusty motor trip.

Numerous resorts are at Jerome, those of the Andres family being conspicuous. Two brothers, William and Russell, have been in business there for two and 11 years, respectively, while J. Tilden, a cousin, has lived on the Gasconade since 1902 and knows every fishing hole, cave and point of interest for miles around.

Other resorts include Hellweg's Hotel, Bryant's cottages, "Kozy Kottage," Garey's Half-a-Hill, Bridgeview cottages, W. O. Adams' Findleys', Oak Grove cottages and McCarty's "Komfy Kottages." The proprietors are zealous in seeing to it that guests are comfortable. Mrs. Hellweg serves an excellent meal. The Andres resorts have accommodations for more than 500, J. Tilden Andres explained.

As in many parts of Missouri, caves are an important part of week-end enjoyment. As usual, they are fantastically named. Goat Bluff, Ash, Hickory Hollow, Mud, Bushwhacker, Onyx and Saltpeter are a few. It is related that the last-named was once productive of saltpeter. Bushwhacker Cave, according to a dark rumor, was at one time a moonshiners' rendezvous although, natives hasten to add, it is no longer so used.

The State plans to build a bridge over the Gasconade at Jerome to connect U. S. 66 with Missouri Highway No. 28, which, with U. S. 63, already provides one route to Jefferson City by way of historic Westphalia. The No. 28 road, however, strikes No. 66 down near Waynesville, 15 miles or so south of Newburg.

Such a bridge would be approached by a concrete road on either side of the Gasconade, according to present plans.

After lunching in Jerome, the motorist may cross the railroad

Two Features Added by KSD Monday Night

James G. McDonald's Talks on World Politics Are Scheduled.

Two NBC features will be added to its Monday schedule by KSD, beginning tomorrow evening. One will be "The World Today," under which title James G. McDonald delivers a weekly talk on world politics and trends. The other will be a recital by Frances Paperte, a mezzo-soprano of country-wide reputation.

McDonald, in his talk at 5:30 tomorrow evening, is to analyze the mandate system, one of the most interesting governmental experiments that grew out of the World War.

"At the end of the war," McDonald explains, "the Allies were unwilling to return the German colonies, and, owing to a strong public opinion against annexation, influenced largely by President Wilson, they decided to inaugurate the present system of trusteeships.

"It is too early to tell definitely how this experiment is going to work. However, it has already shown great possibilities for good. It may in time prove to be an invaluable means of solving some of the most difficult problems in the relations between the great Powers and the so-called backward peoples."

Miss Paperte is to sing four songs, begining at 5:45 tomorrow evening, one of them the "Elegie" of Massenet, which will be done with violin obligato.

Southern Station Joins NBC Chain

WPTF, at Relaigh, N. C., will become a permanent link in the National Broadcasting Co.'s coast-to-coast system tonight. It is announced by George F. McClelland, executive vice president and general manager of the NBC.

Latin-American Trade Flight Contemplated

A giant amphibian plane will take off from the Atlantic Seaboard in October for a tour of Central and South America in connection with one of the most ambitious trade extension programs ever developed by American business interests. The tour, under auspices of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, will carry its message to 34 Latin-American countries, according to R. F. Ham, field representative of the flight, who is in St. Louis to stimulate interest among local manufacturers.

To be known as the South American Trade Extension flight, the trip will be made in an American plane, carrying a crew of six, which, it is hoped, will cover 27,000 miles, penetrating into the interior at several points, although following in the main the general outline of the South American coast lines.

Taking off from Southern Florida, the plane will stop at Havana and then visit the principal key trade centers of the Southern Continent. After following the perimeter of South America, the campaign for good-will and increased trade will be carried through the Central American states and Mexico. In the latter country, backers of the flight hope, conditions will be found to be sufficiently settled for purposes of the visit.

Forty American civic and industrial organizations and firms will back the flight, discussing which Roy G. Owens, secretary of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, says: "Advertising resulting from the accomplishment of such an undertaking will create better understanding and a more intimate relationship between the nations of the Western Hemisphere."

Preceding arrival of the plane at its various itinerary points, Harry W. Pascoe, a Latin-American export trade authority, will act as an advancee agent, co-operating with municipal officials and local business groups.

A 9000-foot talking film depicting industries of the United States will be shown. To adapt the talking apparatus to the various languages, an invention will be used which makes possible a synchronized story of the picture to be printed on a roll that will be timed with the action on the screen.

Directorate of the export association includes members from leading corporations in every branch of American industry, many of which have already established agencies or branches in South America.

Lieut. Donald C. Beatty of the One Hundred and Sixth Aero Squadron will act as flight commander. Leslie A. Walker, who will be navigator and co-pilot, has been a flying instructor. Robb C. Oertel, one of the officers who accompanied Commander Byrd on his North Pole expedition in 1926, will also act as a co-pilot. Oron C. Welsh, for a number of years with the motion picture and educational department of the Ford Motor Co., and who made the Muscle Shoals educational films, will be the official photographer.

An advisory board for the flight also includes notable business men of the country.

The South American tour will last about five months, following which a tour will be made of principal American cities, with a showing of the pictures brought back, together with lectures on information obtained.

Jack and Patricia On Air at 8:15 P. M.

Until the close of the baseball season, the program featuring Jack and Patricia, a soloist and a string ensemble, which formerly was broadcast by KWK between 1 and 2 p. m. Sunday, goes on the air for 45 minutes, beginning at 8:15 p. m. each Sunday.

The only changes in this feature are the shift in time and the shortening of the period from an hour to 45 minutes.

Safety Month Designated by Gov. Caulfield

Proclamation Urges Use of Full Inspection Facilities.

In a determined effort to reduce automobile accidents and resulting loss of life in Missouri, Gov. Caulfield last week issued a proclamation declaring a State-wide "Save-a-Life" campaign June 1 to July 1. He calls on all municipal authorities, automobile organizations and civic and commercial bodies to co-operate in the movement

Behind the campaign are the Missouri Street and Highway Safety Association, the St. Louis Safety Council and the Safety Council of Kansas City, Mo.

Purpose of the movement is to establish a regular annual period of free mechanical inspection of all motor vehicles. New York, Massachusetts and nine other States have already conducted "Save a-Life" campaigns and several other States will do so.

Service stations and garages in every section of Missouri will be authorized by State authorities to give inspection during the month. Every driver is requested to have his car or truck examined regardless of its supposed condition. This inspection will be free of charge in every instance.

Official windshield stickers will be issued following the examination, or after needed repairs, are made, certifying that the vehicle is in good condition.

In a statement issued in connection with issuance of the proclamation, Gov. Caulfield said:

"The proposed 'Save-a-life' inspection of automobiles will be devoted chiefly to brakes, horns, lights, steering mechanism and mirrors. These are the parts most apt to get out of order, and statistics show they are the most frequent causes of accidents.

"We want no unsafe automobiles in this State and co-operation of every citizen in this movement will go a long way toward saving lives and preventing accidents."

Latest Durant Models Shown By St. Louis Co.

W. S. Cook Tells How Sales Were Lost in Proving Cars.

Two new Durant models, the "6-70" and "6-66," in production in the new Durant factory at Lansing, Mich., are already available to the public in St. Louis. Sedans of both models have been received by the Durant Motor Co. of St. Louis, 3205 Locust street.

According to W. S. Cook, district manager of Durant, the new units were not placed in immediate production at Lansing, at the cost of entire loss of sales of these models during the first three months, in order to put them through complete tests.

The "6-66" is a newcomer in the 1929 Durant line, yet it represents, as well as the "6-72," a further development and refinement of approved Durant designs. It is the first car to bring to the popular price field advantages of the silent third speed and four-speed transmission, Cook states. The "70" is a successor to the Durant "75," which is credited with having been the first machine to employ this type of box gear.

Specifications of the "66" are: Bore and stroke, 2⅞ and 3¾ inches, respectively, making a displacement of 185.1 cubic inches, with a compression ratio of 5.25. Bore and stroke of the "70" are 3.38 and 4⅝ inches, giving 248.3 cubic inches displacement and a compression ratio of 5.06.

Maximum protection against rust is assured by chromium plating over copper and nickel on all the exposed metal parts. Bodies of both "66" and "70" are low and roomy and finished in a selection of colors.

Cook states that other models of the new Durants will soon be received in St. Louis. He anticipates a steadily increasing public demand.

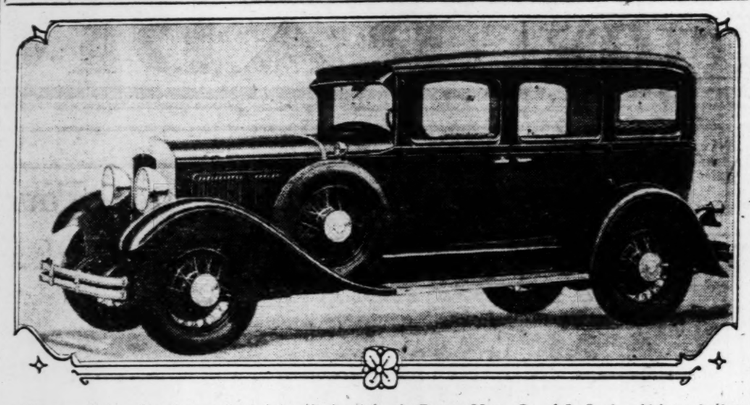
Part of Car Washing.

It may not do a great deal for appearance, but when the car is being washed, cooling efficiency is increased if the core of the radiator is cleaned. The proper way to do it, of course, is to put the hose behind the radiator and drive out the mud and other substances which prevent the flow of air through the cooling area.

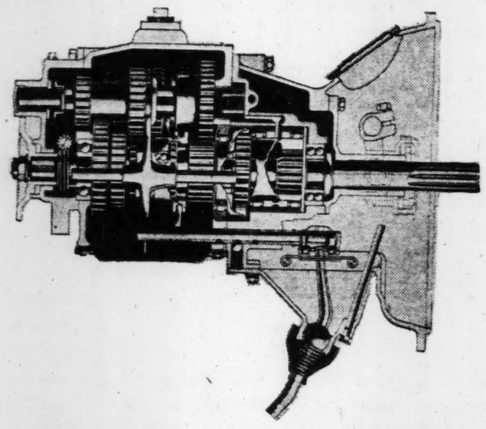
Low-Type Wheels

The De Soto Six is equipped with the low-type of Chrysler wheels which conform with the low-swung, smart and graceful lines of the rest of the car. A greater air-cushion contact is given by the larger balloon tire. This adds to and explains to a great extent the easy riding qualities of this car.

Durant "70" Sedan Shown by St. Louis Distributer



The new de luxe four-door model is being displayed by the Durant Motor Co. of St. Louis, which received, in addition, the first of the new "6-66" sedans last week.



The quadruple shift, as shown, permits gears to be shifted from "high to higher" at a road speed of more than 50 miles an hour.

Three St. Louis Flyers Enter Gardner Races

Three St. Louis flyers are entered in the Gradner Annual Trophy Races on May 28 and 30. There are 22 airplanes now entered in the race to St. Louis and to Indianapolis and return for a prize of $5000 and a silver trophy donated by Russell E. Gardner Jr. and Fred Gardner, president and vice president of the Gardner Motor Co.

As is known, the race will start in five cities—Buffalo, N. Y.; Denver, Colo.; San Antonio, Tex.; Jacksonville, Fla., and Fargo, N. D. The first and second plane to arrive here from each of these cities will compete in a race to Indianapolis and return to Parks Airport.

The local flyers in the race are Dale Jackson, stunt flyer, who holds the world's record for barrel rolls, with a total of 417; Gentry Shelton and Sydnor Hall. Jackson will fly a Curtiss Robin monoplane and will enter the race from Denver. Shelton wil fly a Travel-Air plane equipped with a whirlwind motor. He will compete from Jacksonville. Hall will also compete from Jacksonville and will fly a Travel-Air speedwing powered with a Wright J-5.

The list fo pilots includes two winners of national races last year. John Wood, winner of the Ford Reliability Tour, and Earl Rowland, winner of the New York-Los Angeles race.

Rowland refused to enter the race until he was assured that he would be given the entry number 99. He has raced under that number in each of his previous races and regards it as lucky. By accepting it he imposes a handicap upon himself, however, as he will be the last to leave the field in the preliminaries.

George Haldeman, who piloted Ruth Elder in her attempted trans-Atlantic flight, is another nationally known pilot. He will fly a Bellanca plane and will enter the race at Jacksonville. Charles W. "Speed" Holman, who held the world's record for consecutive loops for a number of years, is another entry. He will pilot a Laird plane powered with a Wright J-4-B and will enter the race from Fargo.

In the elimination contests, eight planes will fly from Buffalo, three from Fargo, three from San Antonio, three from Denver and five from Jacksonville, according to present plans. Three planes from the Curtiss-Robertson factory in St. Louis are entered in the race. One will be entered from Denver, another from Buffalo and the third from Jacksonville.

The 22 pilots and the planes they will fly follows: Tex Lagrone, Waco; W. Parker Runyon Jr., Travel-Air; Arthur J. Davis, Waco; John P. Wood, Waco Tapered Wing; Sydnor Hall, Travel-Air Speedwing; Neil R. McCray, Waco; D. C. Warren, Travel-Air; George E. Halsey, Ken-Royce; Stanley T. Stanton, Cessna D. C. 6; Earl Rowland, Cessna Model CM-1; A. B. McMullen, Travel-Air; Willard Van Beuren King, Travel-Air; Ed. Hedeen, Waco Taper Wing; Marvin T. O'Dell, Cessna; Robert S. LeRoy, Cessna Monoplane; Dale Jackson and two yet to be chosen to pilot three Robins; George Haldeman, Bellanca; Gentry Shelton, Travel-Air; Lloyd F. Lane, Laird LC-R; Chas. W. Holman, Laird.

Crossing Abolished.

A total of 390 railroad grade crossings were eliminated in the United States last year from the Federal and highway system. Of these, 107 were eliminated by the construction of underpasses or overpasses and 283 by relocation of highways. Since 1917, a total of 4291 crossings have been excluded from the Federal highways.

Worm gears are not always those in the rear end. That device that Hupmobile uses to raise its one-piece windshield is based upon a worm gear. It is quite trick, too, among the various mechanisms devoted to this task.

At St. Louis Air Fields

PILOTS on the St. Louis-Chicago passenger route have made several speedy trips recently. Last Saturday C. E. Steele, flying a single motored Hamilton, made the trip in an hour and 37 minutes. On Monday Ben Howard, in a tri-motored Fokker, flew the 250 miles in an hour and a half with the assistance of a 45-mile-an-hour tail wind. The best previous time made by a regular scheduled passenger plane was an hour and 40 minutes, Bobby Jewell piloting. Howard's time equals Capt. Frank Hawk's record for the St. Louis-Chicago hop.

Robertson Home from China.

Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., accompanied by Mrs. Robertson and her sister, Miss Lorraine Livingston, returned home yesterday following a three months' tour of China. Maj. Robertson conducted an aviation survey in China for the Curtiss Interests. Eyre Sloniger, former St. Louis mail pilot, who accompanied Maj. Robertson on the mission, remained in the Orient.

New Home for Students.

The formal opening of the new home for students at Parks Airport last week marked the completion of the first of the new units being added to the Parks' building group. Two other structures, a mechanics' school and an administration building, are under construction. The three structures cost $230,000.

The students' home has accommodations for 200 persons. It is of reinforced concrete and brick construction and is modern throughout. It contains a billiard room, bowling alleys, barber and tailor shops, hostess' quarters and a lounge. On the grounds surrounding the home are tennis courts.

Grocer, Dentist, Mechanic, Pilot, Buy Car for Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 18.—A grocer, a dental student, a mechanic and an unknown automobile race driver own one of the cars entered in the International 500-mile race to be held at the Indianapolis speedway May 30.

The car with the four-cornered ownership is one of the many formerly owned by Tommy Milton, only two-time winner of the race, now retired, and will be driven by Bill Lindau of Pittsburg, who for seven years has been training on dirt tricks awaiting his big chance.

Other owners are Fred Hufnagle, a grocer; Roy Painter, mechanic, and Jack Codori, a dental student, all of Pittsburg.

Since he was 19, Lindau has been building and driving racing cars with varying success. When his last car burned in a race at Pittsburg, his backers banded together and purchased the car he will drive here.

The car arrived in Pittsburg in a packing box, dismantled. But Lindau and Painter put it together and worked for months preparing it for the big race. They worked in a barricaded garage in the rear of Painter's home.

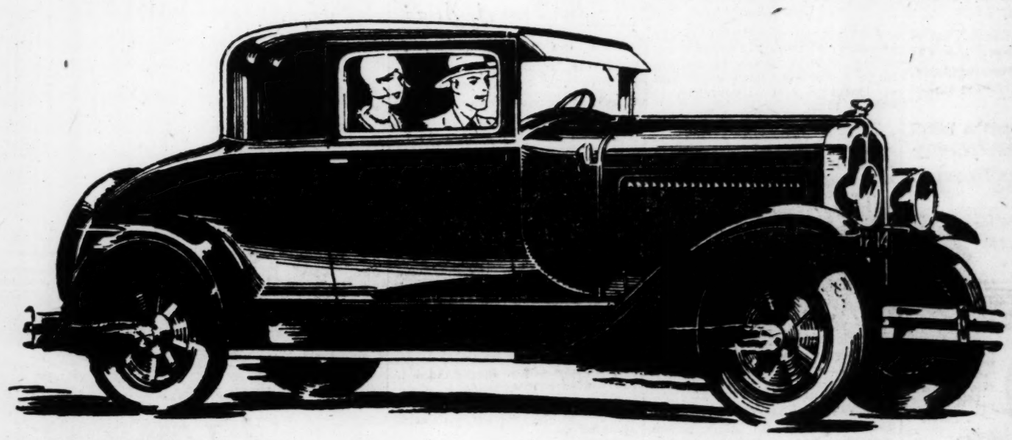
Let the NEW PONTIAC BIG SIX tell the world that you know automobile values



The Coupe, $745 • Body by Fisher
Product of General Motors

No one likes to have his choice of automobile questioned. We all like to feel that we know motor car values and that our selections are bound to be wise. But there is one sure way to avoid any question when you're buying a low-priced car. That way is to choose the New Pontiac Big Six.

The motoring public has been quick to learn of the unusual value provided by the New Pontiac Big Six—first of all because it looks like so much for its price. The big car style of its Fisher bodies has naturally led to further investigation. And investigation has disclosed performance and mechanical quality never equalled in such a low-priced automobile.

It is a remarkably smooth car because all of its rotating parts are dynamically balanced and because the Harmonic Balancer counteracts torsional vibration in the crankshaft. It is luxuriously silent because the G-M-R cylinder head practically eliminates engine knocking even when you are using ordinary gasoline. It is equipped with noiseless dirt-and-weather-proof internal four-wheel brakes of a type found on no other car with a list price of less than eleven hundred dollars. And it delivers the power, speed and pick-up developed in a 200-cubic-inch engine equipped with a 1¼-inch carburetor, which includes an accelerating pump, and with a gasoline pump instead of a vacuum tank.

We have arranged a special demonstration which shows the value of these features and which we will be glad to make for you. We will also explain to you many other Pontiac advantages such as the thermostatically-controlled cross-flow radiator which keeps the engine at correct operating temperature at all times.

Well-informed motorists know all these advantages of the New Pontiac Big Six. They know, too, that it was created to enable them to step up in motor car value without leaving the low-priced field. And so if you buy a New Pontiac Big Six your choice will never be questioned. It tells the world that you know automobiles.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing automobile values. . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing.

Prices $745 to $895, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Bumpers, spring covers and Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers regular equipment at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Late Spring Has Failed to Affect Sales, Cram Says

Declares Retail Business Has Not Suffered by Weather.

DETROIT, Mich., May 18. — In spite of the widespread discussion of the harm done to the automotive industry through adverse weather condition and a late spring season, the harmful effects have failed to materialize so far this year, according to figures compiled from a nation-wide survey of retail markets by Cram's Automotive Reports, Inc., of Detroit, authorities and analysts of the automotive industry.

In reality, there has been no spring this year, and that fact is continually brought forward as an indication that 1929 automobile sales are not up to the level which is expected of them.

In the face of actual sales achievements by the industry in the first four and one-half months of 1929, this attitude cannot carry much weight. As a matter of fact, the late or practically nonexistent spring weather may have a decidedly beneficial influence on the industry in 1929.

It must be remembered that in the past the industry has usually reached its peak in April or May with a steady downward trend in sales from that time to the end of the year. This year, sales ordinarily low in January and February, opened up in a good volume immediately after the first of the year, and while the peak may be reached in May, it is very doubtful if the upward swing to the peak will be as abrupt as it has been in the majority of other years.

This means that sales have been spread out over a period of five months instead of being concentrated in a 60-day period, as the industry has come to expect from past performances. And because there has been no rush of sales, but a more even and less fluctuating market, it is very probable that this market stability will be maintained for some time instead of showing a precipitous drop from the peak, which under normal circumstances might be expected at about the present time.

Vesper-Buick Officials Inspect New Marquette "6"

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FLINT, Mich., May 18.—The new Marquette Six, companion car to be built and distributed by Buick, is unusual in many respects, officials of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co. of St. Louis found, during a thorough inspection of the new machine at the General Motors proving grounds here this week.

Under every conceivable road condition, the Marquette performed exceptionally, in view of the fact it will sell in the $1000 class. Easy acceleration, fast getaway, quick-acting brakes, comfortable seats, wide vision through its spacious doors and windshield, no body rattles, no motor hum even at high speed—these are some of its characteristics.

As to speed, one St. Louis official "opened her up," achieving 76 miles an hour against the wind and 77 with it. The remarkable ease of motion, with little strain and no "dancing" is unusual at such a tremendous speed for a small car.

With a starting speed of five miles an hour, the car negotiated an 11.6 per cent hill for a total of 1600 feet, reaching the summit at 23 miles an hour.

Vesper-Buick executives were told that Buick will produce six models in the Marquette line—a four-door sedan, special coupe or cabriolet, business coupe, two-door sedan, roadster with rumble seat and a five-passenger touring car.

In a statement today, E. T. Strong, president of the Buick Motor Co., declared that "the American motoring public which desires an exceptional automobile in the $1000 price field will find all they want in the Marquette." Continuing, he said:

"It is our opinion that this car has no peer in its class. Produced by an outstanding organization after extensive research, it has been driven hundreds of thousands of miles. The public can expect in the Marquette the net experience that Buick has gleaned from 25 years of leadership in the industry."

The new Marquette is impressive, with lithe, graceful lines, concave windshield posts, liberal space, rich upholstering, aristocratic hardware and adjustable front seats.

A 114-inch wheelbase gives ample room. The engine will develop 67.5 horsepower. Radiator is of a new style grill design. An improved cooling system functions smoothly and efficiently.

Large, four-wheel internal brakes, both hand and foot, are operated on a three-bearing cross shaft, a safety innovation. Shock absorbers, oil pump, thermostat, air purifier and gasoline filter will be standard equipment. The chassis is exceptionally strong, the motor block resting on four points set in rubber. The gasoline consumption, at 35 miles an hour, will average 17 miles to the gallon, engineers have demonstrated.

Dealers in Metropolitan St. Louis who will handle the Marquette six are Vesper-Buick Auto Co., Schnure Motor Co., Kuhs-Buick, St. Louis County Automobile Co., Webster Groves Motor Co., East Side Buick Co. and E. A. Dodge Motor Co. of Granite City.

Mann Reports 54 Per Cent Increase In Marmon Sales

A 54 per cent increase in sales of Marmon "68" and "78" cars is reported by R. B. Mann of Archer-Mann Motor Co., local distributer of Marmons and Roosevelts, to date in 1929.

Mann attributes the gain to the widespread popularity of the two Marmon models and the new Roosevelt, the only eight-cylinder car priced under $1000.

With an 86-horsepower motor on a 120-inch wheelbase, the Marmon "78" is remarkably powerful, yet smooth in operation. Bore and stroke are 2 15-16 and 4 inches, respectively. A duplex down-draft manifold, engine modulator and five main bearings, 2⅜ inches in diameter, are features of the motor that make for quietness and speed.

Spark, throttle and light controls are located conveniently on the steering wheel. Self-energizing, Bendix four-wheel brakes operate mechanically.

Front axle and steering linkage are lubricated by Alemite-Zerk pressure gun. Rubber spring knuckles, in place of shackles, require no lubrication and reduce rattles.

Transmission of the "68" is of the selective, interlocking type. Gears are nickel steel forged and treated with heat. The steering system is the cam and lever, with an 18-inch flat spoke steering wheel. The steering apparatus is especially designed for four-wheel brakes and balloon tires and prevents "shimmying" of front wheels.

Both the "68" and "78" have many points in common. Bore and stroke of the smaller car is 2 15-16 and 4¼ inches, respectively.

A check up of the finishes used on passenger cars reveals that eight lacquer makers are splitting the industry's patronage. Not evenly, of course.

Motorists Find Data on Touring In Travel Atlas

With the touring season at hand, the Resort and Travel Bureau of the Post-Dispatch continues to receive many requests for the excellent 50-page auto trails atlas of the United States and Eastern Canada, containing keyed highway routes in every state and in each province of Eastern Canada.

Main and secondary roads are shown, together with the type of construction, whether concrete, gravel or dirt. Location or any town may be determined by consulting the indexed, alphabetical list on each individual map.

In addition, the atlas contains a complete table of distances, list of points of interest arranged alphabetically by states and the major street plans of the larger cities in the United States.

Price of the auto trails atlas is 50 cents at the Post-Dispatch or 60 cents by mail.

Hupmobile, it will be remembered, is going to discontinue the Chandler and use the plants for the manufacture of a six to sell around $1000.

Earnings of General Motors $61,910,987 In First 3 Months

Net earnings of General Motors Corporation in the three months ending March 31 totaled $61,910,987, as against $69,468,576 in the corresponding period in 1928, a statement sent to stockholders by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president, reveals.

After deducting dividends on preferred and debenture stocks amounting to $2,351,770, the equivalent of $1.37 a share on the common stock is left, compared with $1.54 a share for the first quarter in 1928.

Abnormal expense due to major year-end model changes in certain divisions had an important influence on earnings, according to Sloan, and although sales, both to dealers and users, exceeding those of the same period last year, they did not reflect the full demand, due to a shortage of cars, particularly of Chevrolets, Sloan states.

In the three months ending March 31, retail sales amounted to 448,176 cars, compared with 423,013 in the first three months a year ago, an increase of 5.9 per cent.

erry Motor Car Co. Presents 11 Models at Display.

An open display of 11 custom built Packards, on the 145-inch straight eight de luxe chassis, was opened Friday evening by the Berry Motor Car Co., St. Louis distributor, at its showrooms, 2201 Olive street. Each model has acquired individuality through skilled coachwork and coloring.

The cars are trimmed in rich materials, only the finest textiles and leathers having been used to cover the luxuriously cushioned fittings. The showing is the first complete exhibit of the various body types of the de luxe Packard. Equipment and accessories are the "last word" in motoring.

A convertible sedan by Dietrich wears a smart new color known as Wallabad gray and is equipped with wire wheels in Marifold yellow. It is the most conspicuous car on display.

Another Dietrich creation, the convertible victoria for five passengers, meets the demand for a style between the convertible coupe and sedan. Certain features of the Victoria are especially suited for touring, shopping or sport use. The rear seat cushions are divided into two sections and each may be folded up if more carrying space is desired. Front seats are of the bucket type, the driver's seat being adjustable.

This fine coach is finished in a deep, rich shade of Toga maroon, with wire wheel equipment in mountain ash scarlet, and is trimmed in eagle Ottawa colonial grain leather, giving a smart but conservative appearance.

A device for adjusting both the driver's seat and the front folding seat is used on the five-passenger coupe. The rear seat extends fully across the body, providing ample room for three persons. Merrimac beige, striped in gold bronze, is the color motif. Artillery wheels mounted on the fenders add a touch of smartness.

The sedan-limousine for seven persons illustrates how the grace of exterior appointments may be matched by the luxury of the interior in such details as the dainty French clock set into the vanity case and the tailored pockets below the rear seat arm rests. A striking color combination on the sedan is black with gold bronze striping. Black wire wheels carry out the color design, and, again, the spare wheels are mounted in the front fenders.

A Dietrich convertible coupe for two or four passengers is one of the most favored among Packard custom models. It is quickly adaptable from a snug, closed car to an open sport affair.

The club sedan for five, the phaeton for five, the all-weather Dietrich cabriolet and the seven-passenger touring car complete the display, each a notable achievement of the coachmaker's art.

Three Costly Practices.

Turning corners at high speeds which shifts the weight of the car to one side, suddenly stepping on the accelerator and spinning the wheels, and rushing up to corners and slamming on the brakes are three practices that take a great deal more life out of the tires than many car owners imagine. Further than that, they are a trinity of tricks that are none too good for other parts of the car.

Dayton War Games, Cleveland Meeting Attract Aviators

Air Leaders Desert Capital But Subordinates Carry On.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Every now and then something occurs that leaves no doubt as to the fact that Washington is aviation's headquarters, if not its production and operation center. The current week, with its war games in Dayton, its airport meeting in Cleveland, and various smaller specialized gatherings of aviation leaders, has lost to the National Capital many of its aviation notables.

It is the boast of those who depart from the Capital on missions of this character, however, that work does not stop during their absence. When, for instance, Assistant Secretary of Commerce William MacCracken and Clarence M. Young, Director of Aeronautics, take time out for an important out-of-town mission, well-trained assistants in the Department of Commerce carry on.

The same is true in the offices of the Army Air Corps or the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics. Aviation's esprit de corps, they say!

When one reads, as one did last week, of a record-breaking attempt in altitude, speed and endurance on the part of a military airman, it should be kept in mind that the pilot in question is a specialist in the particular sphere. For instance, Lieut. Zeus Soucek's record altitude flight above Washington last week.

Both the plane and the flyer are on the altitude assignment continually. It is their specialty—the pilot by temperament and training, the plane by design and equipment.

The plane, incidentally, is the same one used by Lieut. C. C. Champion when he set the previous record two years ago. Lieut. Champion is now on a different phase to altitude work at the Naval Aircraft Factory in Philadelphia.

There is a remarkable contrast between the two flights that is being commented on in Washington air circles. Lieut. Soucek fought the possibilty of frozen eyes and consequent loss o. his sight. Lieut. Champion battled free during his descent of nearly eight miles. But, by diving to "blow out" the fire on three different occasions, he brought himself, the plane and his valued instruments to earth safely.

Helium, the nonexplosive gas which the United States uses to inflate its lighter-than-air craft, is a light substance, indeed. In the two special tank cars that transport the gas from the point of its production to the airships in which it is used, the gas is carried at a pressure of 2000 per square inch. it was learned recently. Pressures of 2500 pounds are used in its production.

Those who wonder whether they could ever get up nerve to make a parachute jump have obviously never talked the matter over with William F. Scott, the midget chief machinist's mate who specializes in parachute jumping at the Naval Air Station in Washington. Scott, it seems, turns to parachute jumping for the sport of the thing.

This week he took three young proteges into the air and led them out the door of a cabin plane on their first jumps. The remarkable part of it, to many in Washington, was that it was the first time one of the jumpers had ever gone up in an airplane.

Jumping is common-place to Scott and all of Washington still remembers the time he landed on an apartment fire escape, ending an effort to set a new record.

8-Month Gain of 167 Per Cent In Nash Exports

KENOSHA, Wis., May 18.—Reports from the Nash Motors Co. on April shipments to Canada show the month was the largest in the history of the company. April climaxed an eight months' period of unprecedented gain in deliveries to the company's Canadian distributing organization.

Commenting on this record, C. H. Bliss, salesmanager, said: "During April our shipments to Canadian distributers reached a volume unequaled by any other single month's exports in our history. In addition, we can also report for the eight months' period closing April 30, an increase in shipments of 167 per cent over the same period a year ago.

Jordan Promises Stockholders a "Real Automobile"

The profit surplus of the Jordan Motor Car Co. was $160,921 as of April 30, according to an announcement by Edward S. Jordan, president. The net profit in April was $41,723.

In a terse statement to stockholders, Jordan added: "If the old Jordan stockholders expect Jordan to go after volume production, they will be disappointed, because that field is overcrowded, terribly competitive and is putting dealers out of business every day. If they will be satisfied to have us build a real automobile, make some money every month, keep our dealers from starving to death and be in business for many years to come, then we will all be happy."

1930 Road Congress.

The association is the only world-wide official organization of highway authorities. Its present membership comprises 45 countries, 458 collective bodies and 1370 members, of whom 515 are life members.

Lower Output Reported at Many Plants

Detroit Writer Declares "Big Four" Still Leading.

By a Special Correspondent of The Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, May 18.—Conditions in the automobile business in this city are excellent despite the fact there has been a slight tapering off in production at a number of the factories. This has been anticipated, and the manufacturers were prepared for practically any condition that might arise. They are more than pleased with business this spring and do not fail to take into consideration that weather conditions throughout the North were not all they should be, while the South suffered from floods and sales were set back to a considerable extent.

Ford, Hudson-Essex, Chevrolet and Chrysler continue to be the star performers. Ford, especially is forging ahead at a rapid rate, with output exceeding 8000 cars a day. Few if, any, of these cars are going into warehouses, as registration figures from all over the United States show his cars going out on the roads about as fast as he can make and his dealers can sell them.

During the past week there has been a great deal of talk about 12-cylinder motor cars for 1930. As would be expected, every manufacturer denies that he will make cars of this character, although several have been made by various plants for test purposes, and there is one straight 12 running about the streets of Detroit which was built for experimental purposes and which one of the executives of the factory purchased.

Despite anything that may be said, we can look for cars of more than eight cylinders in 1930. Perhaps only one company will make cars of this type, but announcements can be looked for by the end of the present year. These, of course, will be in the so-called higher priced class.

At the end of May, when production and registration figures are complete, it will undoubtedly be found that they are not as heavy as in April. Manufacturers, however, are optimistic, as stocks of cars on hand throughout the country are not large, the majority of the organizations not having more than a 60 days' supply on hand, and, in many cases, this is much lower.

Retail sales, on the other hand, are gaining and the stocks of used cars are not excessive. We are just reaching a period when cars of the 1923 period are beginning to go to the scrap pile. This, according to statisticians in the motor car business, means a large replacement market and a steady business the balance of the year.

H. J. Klinger, general sales manager, has been elected to a vice presidency, as has Marvin E. Coyle, who becomes vice president and general auditor.

McDarby Is Named Sales Director of Auburn Company

N. E. McDARBY.

AUBURN, Ind., May 18. — Appointment of N. E. McDarby as director of sales of the Auburn Automobile Co. is announced by Roy H. Faulkner, vice president.

At the same time, Faulkner made known the advancement of Harry L. Brink to the sales managership of the Auburn division of the company. He was formerly supervisor of district sales managers.

The position of sales director is a newly created one, and was necessitated by greatly increased business to date this year and broadening of the company's manufacturing activities.

McDarby has been with Auburn five years, and has had 15 years' experience in automobile merchandising. Brink joined the Auburn company last fall. He was formerly connected with Velie, Studebaker and Peerless. Both men are in their thirties. E. L. Cord, president, is the youngest chief executive in the industry.

Gasconade River Country Is Mecca For Sportsmen

tracks and hike along the river, 100 yards away, or, if he chooses, he may drive over to Missouri No. 28. If he doesn't choose to go as far as Dixon, six or seven miles from Jerome, he may swing to the left. The county roads are dirt and extremely rough, almost impassable in wet weather.

But the view of the Gasconade sweeping majestically past the rocky and picturesque bluffs is worth the jolting over the rough roads.

By leaving the automobile and walking down the hillside, covered with timber and rocks, to the river bank, a wild and almost impenetrable stretch may be reached. There are several good camping spots along the river at this point.

For fishermen the Gasconade and other streams in the neighborhood of Jerome offer thrilling sport. Bass and other game fish lurk cautiously in the Gasconade, ever alert against mechanical devices and blandishment.

Maries River lies to the north on No. 28, past Dixon. Frog hunting is available along this pretty stream.

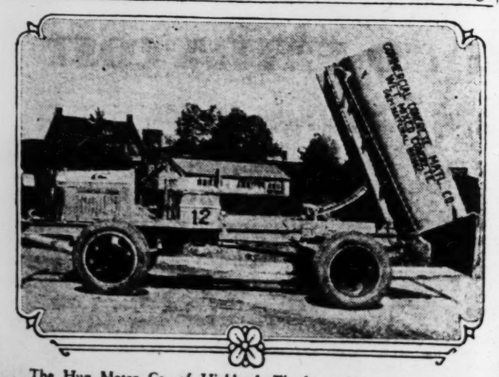
Eight miles from Jerome on No. 66, the Big Piney River is said to furnish the finest fishing in Missouri in the summer time, although the Gasconade, it is said, is better in the autumn.

Roubidoux Creek is 20 miles south of Jerome on No. 66. This is an unusual river, in that it flows underground for several miles. It is almost parallel by Missouri Highway No. 17, which may be left at many points to reach the river. Blue gill fishing is said to be exceptional in the Roubidoux, while trout fishing is good below the juncture with Roubidoux Spring near Waynesville.

Many St. Louisans motor to the Jerome section for the fishing alone, but the scenery and summer sports attract many more persons who wish merely to get out of doors and perhaps do a little hiking.

The highway between Cuba and Rolla was exceedingly bumpy a week or two ago, but some surfacing and dragging is being done to put the road in shape while the new concrete highway is being laid between these two points.

Ingenious Device for Road Building



The Hug Motor Co. of Highland, Ill., has sold a number of these trucks to the Commercial Material Co. of 5621 Natural Bridge avenue.

Willys Elected Head of Company At Annual Meet

TOLEDO, O., May 18.—John N. Willys was re-elected president of the Willys-Overland Co. this week at the annual meeting of the company. Other officers and directors will remain in office.

In a statement to stockholders, Willys said: "An important factor in 1929 profits will be the sales gain in the higher-priced six-cylinder lines of Willys-Knights and Whippets. Our sixes now comprise 50 per cent of our sales, the balance being the lower-priced Whippet four. Earlier in 1929 the ratio was 75 per cent Whippet fours and 25 per cent of the others."

Willys has been active head of the company for 21 years.

Marmon Produces 10,000 Roosevelts Since Introduction

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 18.—On Wednesday, the same day that G. M. Williams, president of the Marmon Motor Car Co., celebrated his fifth anniversary in that position, the factory shipped its ten thousandth Roosevelt car, it is announced here. This was the feature of one of the largest weeks of the spring season in point of total production and shipments of Marmon and Roosevelt machines.

The ten thousandth Roosevelt, a five-passenger sedan, was shipped to the Detroit retail branch.

Marmon is operating on capacity schedule in line with a record influx of orders from all parts of the country. Roosevelt production averages more than 250 cars a day and it is expected that May's output will exceed the record-breaking total of April.

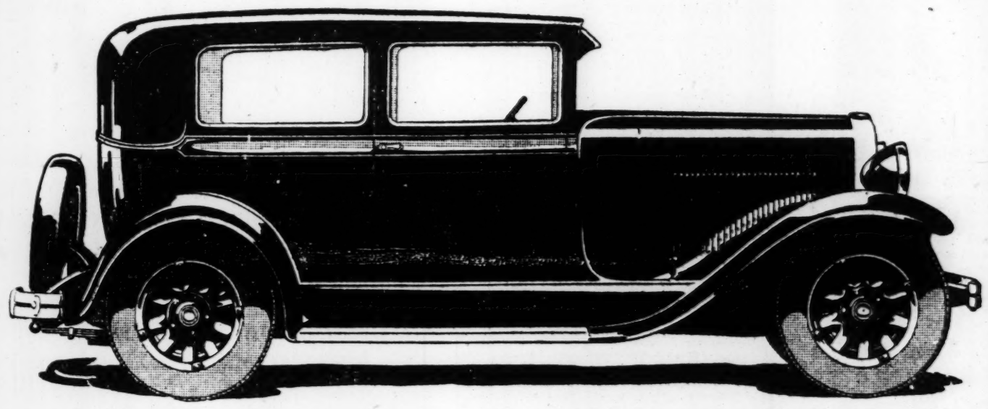
DESIGNED TO DO ALL THINGS WELL



It is a relatively simple engineering task to design an automobile which emphasizes only a few qualities at the sacrifice of others.

It is an engineering achievement, however, to combine all desirable qualities to an outstanding degree in a balanced whole. Yet that is exactly what Oldsmobile engineers have accomplished in the new 1929 Oldsmobile.

You have only to drive it to realize what brilliant speed—what mighty power—what thrilling getaway it provides. You have only to try it to know how smooth it is—how quiet—how easy to drive or to park. And when you examine its big 62 horsepower high-compression engine you will find such indications of its progressive engineering as pressure-lubricated piston pins, a feature formerly characteristic of high-priced cars.

In appearance, this finer Oldsmobile is as beautiful and as smart as any car on automobile row. Its grace of line—its perfection of detail—its harmony of color—all bespeak the artistry of Fisher craftsmanship.

The interiors of this finer Oldsmobile are luxuriously appointed and richly upholstered . . . they are roomy and comfortable as well. The seats are soft and deep-cushioned. Restful riding ease is assured by four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers. And the new Fisher adjustable front seat, combined with Oldsmobile's adjustable steering wheel, makes the driving position a matter of individual preference.

As the months and miles roll by, Oldsmobile delivers not only the advantages of this balanced design—but adds the satisfaction of dependability, economy of operation, and long life.

Come in today. Take a drive in the 1929 Oldsmobile. Enjoy the results of full development of all the qualities that contribute to motoring pleasure. Check its new lower prices. Then judge Oldsmobile's value for yourself.

Most Highways Reopened After Heavy Storms

Only Existing Detours Due to Paving Work.

Erratic May weather, including heavy rains that were general throughout the State, last week, caused a series of interruptions of through traffic on State highways, according to a review of highway conditions prepared by the Automobile Club of Missouri.

Highways numbered 40, 50, 61 North, 65, 66, 71 and 73, all were closed last Tuesday by high water, but reopened Wednesday. East of here, just as St. Louisans were preparing for trips to the Kentucky Derby, word was received from the Motor Club of Indianapolis that the road had been closed Wednesday a few miles east of Vincennes, Ind., by high water.

A check by telephone ultimately brought word that the highway was reopened and hundreds of motorists drove to Louisville as planned.

In Missouri, United States Highway No. 40 was closed at Davis Creek, west of Boonville, and also at the Blackwater River at Sweet Springs. The Blackwater River also closed No. 50 between Sedalia and Warrensburg, and a tributary backed over Highway No. 65 between Sedalia and its juncture with No. 40.

The Cuivre River closed No. 61 a short distance north of Troy, Mo. No. 66 was under water east of Carthage, Mo., from overflow by the Spring River, and No. 66 was closed at Miami, Ok., by the Neosho, which overflowed its banks. The Spring River also blocked No. 71 north of Carthage, and No. 73, the Joplin-to-Dallas route, was closed at Waggoner, Ok.

All Missouri highways were reported open to travel by the last of the week, with the exception of detours that have been established around construction work, and these detours are all reported to be passable.

The third detour below St. Louis on No. 61 was placed in operation between Libertyville and Mine Lamonte, just north of Fredericktown, during the week. It is seven miles long and was necessitated by new paving work just being started. The other detours are between Jackson and Cape Girardeau and just north of New Madrid.

Increasing Gasoline Tax.

Tax on gasoline is steadily raising in the United States. The tax now paid by the motorists average more than 25 per cent of the price of gasoline. This form of levy was introduced 19 years ago and a fee of one or two cents was paid for a gallon. Since the institution of the tax, it has yielded a billion dollars in revenue, and 90 per cent of this, a staggering $900,000,000, has been collected in the last four years. The tax yielded something like $300,000,000 last year. It is expected to take from motorists a total of $450,000,000 in 1929.

Automobile Deaths.

One person paid with his life for every 900 automobiles operated in the United States in 1928. Approximately 27,500 persons were killed by motor cars last year, an increase of 7 per cent over the 1927 total. On this basis 530 persons were fatally injured by cars each week, or 75 daily in 1928.

The Spring River also blocked No. 71 north of Carthage, and No. 73, the Joplin-to-Dallas route, was closed at Waggoner, Ok.

All Missouri highways were reported open to travel by the last of the week, with the exception of detours that have been established around construction work, and these detours are all reported to be passable.

The third detour below St. Louis on No. 61 was placed in operation between Libertyville and Mine Lamonte, just north of Fredericktown, during the week. It is seven miles long and was necessitated by new paving work just being started. The other detours are between Jackson and Cape Girardeau and just north of New Madrid.

Increasing Gasoline Tax.

Tax on gasoline is steadily raising in the United States. The tax now paid by the motorists average more than 25 per cent of the price of gasoline. This form of levy was introduced 10 years ago and a fee of one or two cents was paid for a gallon. Since the institution of the tax, it has yielded a billion dollars in revenue, and 90 per cent of this, a staggering $900,000,000, has been collected in the last four years. The tax yielded something like $300,000,000 last year. It is expected to take from motorists a total of $450,000,000 in 1929.

Automobile Deaths.

One person paid with his life for every 900 automobiles operated in the United States in 1928. Approximately 27,500 persons were killed by motor cars last year, an increase of 7 per cent over the 1927 total. On this basis 530 persons were fatally injured by cars each week, or 75 daily in 1928.

Leo, Metro-Goldwyn Lion, Passes Through City on 3-Year Tour

Beast Is Traveling in Specially Built Reo Truck.

Leo, whose filmed visage stares at motion picture fans at the start of every Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer movie, paid St. Louis a visit last week in a three-ton Reo heavy duty "speedwagon," which is equipped with an ornate body.

After calling at City Hall and being welcomed by city officials, the lion was taken for a tour of the streets, making frequent stops to the delight of small children.

In its 17,000-mile journey to date, the Reo fleet, consisting of an advanced type truck, and a one-ton panel truck in addition to Leo's equippage, has had no motor trouble, according to G. S. Clayton, president of the Reo Distributing Co., 2221 Locust street. No tire trouble occurred either, he said. The trucks are equipped with United States Royal cords.

The tour, which will cover the United States and parts of Canada and Mexico and take three years, started June 27, 1928, in Washington, D. C. Norman Pyle, no relation to "Cash and Carry" Pyle, is in charge of the six-man crew of the three trucks.

Nation of Speed.

Thirty-six states of the Union permitted cars to travel at speeds as great as 35 and 45 miles an hour in 1928, while three states placed no fixed limit on the speed of motor cars. In 1918 only three states allowed cars to travel 35 or 40 miles an hour on their highways. Twenty-five miles an hour was the usual maximum, while one state fixed 15 as the greatest permissible pace.

Many Notables To Attend Air Exhibit Here

With the purpose of acquainting St. Louis residents with the advantages of travel by air and with the tremendous advances that have been made in aviation in the last few years, the St. Louis Aircraft Show, to be held next week in the Coliseum, is designed to foster air-mindedness.

Although St. Louis has been the center of much activity in the development of modern aircraft and was made famous in this regard by Lindbergh's flight, the public is relatively in the dark as to progress that has been made in aeronautics, backers of the exhibit point out.

Among the celebrities who have accepted invitations to visit the local show are Capt. Edward Rickenbacker, World War ace; Capt. Jack Bursey, Royal Flying Corps, who took part in the battle in which Immelman, great German flyer, was brought down; Lieut. "Casey" Jones of the Curtis Flying Service; Edward S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee, world flyers; Lady Mary Heath, British pilot; Edward Hedeen, stunt flyer and former holder of the barrel roll record, and George W. Haldeman, Ruth Elder's pilot, who recently flew from Canada to Cuba, without stopping.

Others who are expected to come here include Ensign Richard Hardin, U. S. Navy; Art Goebel, Dole Race flyer; Clarence "Red" Terhune, Graf stowaway; Eddie Stinson, former holder of American endurance record; Parker D. Cramer, who with Burt Hassell, attempted the United States to Sweden flight but was forced down in the Arctic wastes; William J. Scripps, outstanding glider enthusiast of the country; Lieut. Lawrence W. Roberts, who was America's youngest naval aviator during the World War; George M. Williams, former head of Dayton-Wright Airplane Co., and now president of Marmon Motor Car Co.; "Bud" Gurney, general manager, traffic division, Universal Aviation Corporation; Commander Gillespie, manager of operations and school, Universal Aviation Corporation; Darek White, president, Guardian Air College, and one of first men in United States to fly a heavier-than-air machine; Lieut. A. A. Yotz, one of the few men who hold pilot's licenses for airplanes, dirigibles and balloons, and Lieut. Pat Murphy, Transcontinental Air Transport official.

Word has been received at the show headquarters that Maj. H. H. Houghland, Air Corps, Seventh Corps Area, and Dr. J. A. Tamisea, Flight Surgeon for the Army, Boeing Air Service and Department of Commerce, will fly here from Omaha to attend the show. Delegations will come from many towns in the middle west including Norfolk, Neb.; Jefferson City and Boonville, Mo.

The Motorist Pays.

Motorists now pay gasoline taxes in each of the 48 states of the Union. Fifteen states and the District of Columbia charge a rate of 2 cents per gallon, 14 states charge 3 cents, 12 states 4 cents, six states 5 cents and one state 6 cents. Since the first gasoline tax was imposed in Oregon 10 years ago motorists have paid more than $1,000,000,000 in gasoline taxes.

Fuel from Sugar Cane.

An oil company in Queensland, Australia, is now manufacturing motor fuel from sugar cane. The alcoholic product is a component of a new "anti-knock" motor fuel. The experiments with sugar cane waste resulted in the production of a 99 per cent pure alcohol said to be capable of mixing with gasoline in any proportion.

Shell Monoplane Leaves St. Louis On Trade Journey

The "Gold Shell," a Fokker trimotored monoplane of the Shell Aviation Corporation, left Lambert Field Wednesday morning on the first leg of a tour to Illinois, Indiana and Ohio cities.

Aboard the ship, piloted by Milton Girton, were two Shell officials, E. L. Miller, newly appointed vice president and directors of sales of the Shell Petroleum Corporation, and J. A. Strong, distribution manager of the corporation. The flight was made for the purpose of acquainting the new vice president and director of sales with the distribution facilities of the company in the three states, and in keeping with the progressive Shell policy of making every possible use of this ultra-modern method of transportation.

White Roll Call

Ninety-one more firms have joined the "10 or more" roll of the White Co., according to the nineteenth issue of the White Co's annual roll call, issued last week. Owners who use fleets of 10 or more White Trucks have invested more than $171,000,000 in White trucks and busses, it is estimated.

De Soto Conducts Survey on What Car Owners Want

"What must the automobile of today offer the modern, discriminating buyer?"

The answer is "performance and style," according to L. G. Peed, general sales manager of the De Soto Motor Corporation, a division of Chrysler Motors. This was the consensus ascertained in a recent, nation-wide survey by De Soto sales engineers and it tells the story of the remarkable success of this car since its introduction to the public last August, Peed said.

"This survey was important because it gave us a definite picture of the popular car of today compared with the car of a few years ago," he continued. "While the prestige and reputation of the manufacturer are of prime importance now, the buyer, particularly in the field of the popular priced six, places perfomance only second to style. The De Soto six offers both."

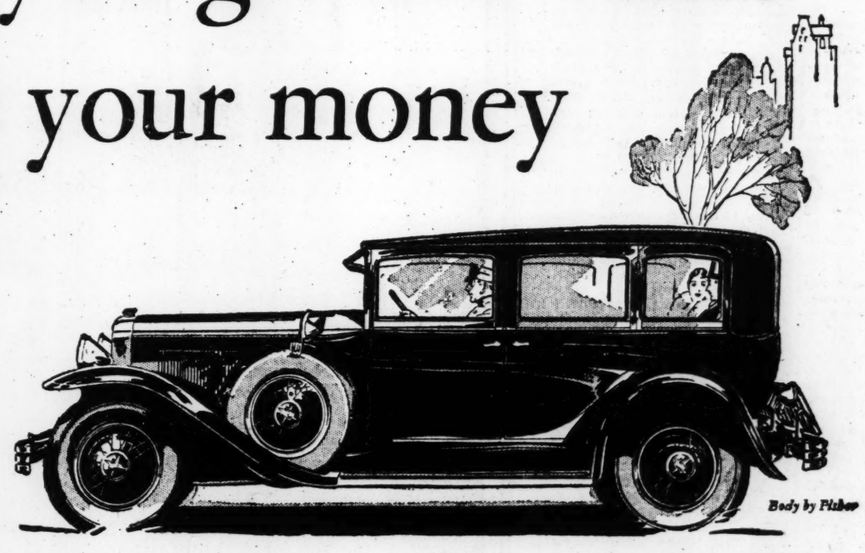
You pay no premium when you buy a Buick . . . you get full value for your money



Body by Fisher

There is no "extra magic," no special or mystic ingredient, in any motor car—Buick included . . . nothing but the basic qualities of performance, appearance, stamina and riding comfort put into the car by the manufacturer.

The reason you get finer performance, finer appearance, finer comfort and longer life in Buick is the very practical fact that the world buys more than twice as many Buicks as any other automobile listing above $1200; and thus makes it possible for Buick to give greater value than other, less favored manufacturers.

You pay no premium when you buy a Buick . . . you get full value for your money—the greater value reflected in Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher—in the sturdy Buick double-drop frame with Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers, front and rear—and particularly in the matchless new elements of getaway, swiftness, smoothness and stamina provided by the Buick sealed chassis and triple-sealed Valve-in-Head engine—the most powerful automobile engine of its size in the world.

Test Buick in direct comparison with other cars. Prove its superior abilities to your own satisfaction. Then take advantage of this greater value made possible by the overwhelming demand of the motoring public itself . . . Drive a Buick.

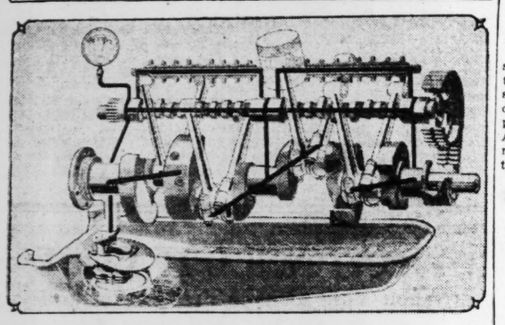
Viking Full-Pressure Lubrication



Oil is pumped through passages in the drilled crankshaft to connecting rod and main bearings, as shown in the chart.

Pressure System Of Lubrication Is Feature of Viking

The vital necessity of the oil system functioning properly at all times was recognized by the designers of the new Viking, the 90-degree, V-type eight-cylinder companion car to the Oldsmobile six. As a result they incorporated the most advanced and proven practices in the new engine.

The Viking lubrication system is full pressure, sending oil under pressure from the pump to all principal parts. The pump, or heart, is located in the rear of the oil pan and draws the oil through a mesh screen and sends it under pressure through passage in the drilled crankshaft and to the connecting rod and main bearings.

Openings in the connecting rod bearings form connections through which the oil is forced up through the length of the rifle-drilled connecting rods to the piston pins. Other oil leads run from the first main crankshaft bearing to the camshaft and rocker arm shaft, both of which are drilled for oil to pass through their entire length to lubricate all bearing surfaces. Valves and the lower portions of the cylinder walls are bathed in a continuous oil spray.

After passing through the arterial lines the oil returns to the crankcase at the front end. Then it passes through a new type precipitating cleaner which traps injurious foreign particles which might find their way into the lubricant. These traps are composed of raised cross ribs in the oil pan and, beside forming sediment traps, they give added rigidity to the aluminum oil pan and, with lateral exterior ribs, assist in cooling the oil to the proper temperature for the most efficient use.

Excessive dilution of the lubricating oil is prevented by a system of crankcase ventilation. This system draws a steady stream of air through the crankcase which carries off gasoline or water vapors which form in all internal combustion engines and might find their way into the oiling system.

Fan blades often are easily bent; sometimes in such a way as to interfere with proper cooling.

Tariff Revision Affects Auto Owners in Many Ways

By a Special Correspondent of The Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Tariff revision which, along with farm relief is the big topic in Washington these days, is a subject that affects the motorist's pocketbook more than he suspects. To the car owner, it may be a complicated, academic subject or else one that is of prime interest to the politician or the big manufacturer. Yet it is the man who ultimately buys the product that pays the bill. And in this instance it is the motorist.

This is a compelling reason why motorists should give close attention to discussions on the tariff. For it is an imposing list of products that enter into the manufacturer of the automobile and the building and maintenance of roads over which they are driven.

When one considers the materials that go to make an automobile or contribute to its operation, he thinks of mind steel, rubber, lumber, leather, plate glass, petroleum and similar materials. But the motorist little suspects that molasses, for example, would have anything to do with the automobile. Yet it does. From it is extracted alcohol for anti-freeze, of which some 40,000,000 gallons were used in 1928. When it is proposed to raise the tariff on molasses from one-sixth .36 of a cent per gallon, or more than one-third of a cent per pound of total sugars, the motorist cannot disclaim interest.

Closely allied to the lacquer industry is pyroxlin which is having its uses broadened constantly. One of the latest developments is its use in the production of non-shatterable glass. The tariff bill provides an increase of 5 cents a pound for this product if shipped in certain forms.

Cement, another material for which the taxpaying motorist pays heavily, is made dutiable by the bill. For some years nearly all of the Roman, Portland and other hydraulic cement entered duty free. A duty of 8 cents per 100 pounds would be imposed upon it by the bill.

J. Walter Drake, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, was in Washington during the last week renewing friendships made during his stay in the national capital, from President Hoover on down.

Drake is a member of the Executive Committee of the Pan-American Confederation for Highway Education, and, in commenting on the development of the proposed Inter-American Highway, declared it has shown "astonishing progress." He pointed out that it is the purpose of the Confederation to be of assistance to other countries in obtaining information which the United States had expended millions of dollars to acquire.

"This information is in concrete form," said Drake, "and our friends in the South have made fine use of it. A great deal of their progress, I believe, may be credited to our work."

The South American Republics, he stated, are making gratifying progress in transportation, developing their railroads and engaging in building a system of highway feeders.

Drake, who left Government service for an executive position in the automobile industry, expressed the opinion that the industry is on a sound basis. He predicted it would be only a few years before the United States ships a couple of million cars abroad each year.

The Highway Education Board has just made its selection of prize winners in the 1927-1928 nation-wide safety lesson contest. In it were entered 125,000 teachers and 3,000,000 school children from all parts of the country.

First prize of $500 and a trip to Washington with all expenses paid was won by Miss Amy M. Striley, teacher of Beverly Farms, Mass. Second prize of $300 went to Miss Cleota Thorpe of Huron, S. D. Third prize of $200 was awarded Miss Buella A. Anderson of Clear Lake, Minn. The judges in the teachers' contest were Dr. A. T. Allen, State Superintendent of Public Instruction of North Carolina; Dr. Uel W. Lankin, president of the National Education Association, and Frank T. Sheets, Highway Engineer of Illinois.

First prize in the companion contest for school children was won by Brendan A. Finn, 11, of Somerville, Mass. He will receive a gold watch and a trip to Washington. Jack Glover of Portland, Ore., was second prize winner of a gold watch. Third prize, also a watch, was awarded Robert W. Tufts of Sherill, N. Y. Judges were Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of the Secretary of Labor; Dr. Ernest W. Butterfield, New Hampshire Commissioner of Education, and the late Haley Fisk, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

The essay contest is an annual one to focus attention of teachers and their students on the need for safety on highways. The topic of Miss Striley's paper was "Objectives and Methods of Education in Street and Highway Safety." The first prize winner of the children's division wrote on "Why We Have and Practice Rules for Safety."

The Bureau of Public Roads shortly will begin an important test of concrete road construction across the Potomac River from Washington. A nine-mile test road will be built beside the Arlington National Cemetery. It will not be subjected to the stresses of travel and unlike any other road will be torn up as soon as it has been completed.

After 28 days, the period of "curing," this stretch will be deliberately cut into pieces. The slabs will be put into the bureau's testing machines to find out the various proportions of stone, gravel and slag, the quartz aggregate, in other words, that may be present in concrete without reducing its strength. At the conclusion of this test the bureau will be in position to advise road builders throughout the country.

Circus methods won't solve the vexing question of how to dispose of used cars.

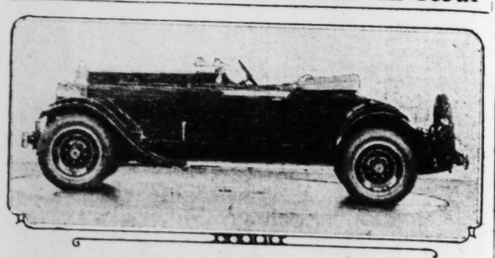
This was the pronouncement of C. A. Vane, general manager of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, who was a Washington visitor last week. According to Vane, who should know whereof he speaks, through years of traveling across the country analyzing dealers' problems, the dealer can do much to help himself by keeping his stock within bounds and holding to a firm, sound price schedule, insisting upon reasonable turnover.

"There is no substitute for sound business methods," is Vane's warning to dealers.

Uniform Signals.

The American Engineering Council, with headquarters in New York City, is making an effort to regulate traffic on streets in cities of the United States so that it may be both safe and more convenient. A survey has been made on street traffic signs, signals and markings, covering 35 states and returns were analyzed in more than 100 cities having a population of more than 33,000.

Packard Will Do 100 Miles an Hour



The Berry Motor Car Co., St. Louis distributer, will soon receive the new Packard speedster (as shown above) and phaeton, stock cars designed for high speed. As may be seen, the speedster is even more stream-lined than other models, with low head resistance. The motor is of the high compression type, with a high-lift camshaft and a gasoline vacuum pump somewhat similar to a supercharger. The body is by Dietrich.

NEVER BEFORE SUCH BIG CAR COMFORT at such a low price!

Longer wheelbase and larger bodies give the new Superior Whippet—Fours and Sixes—the roominess and comfort of higher priced cars.

The form-fitting seats are broader and heavily upholstered, enabling passengers to enjoy restful, relaxed positions at all times. Exceptionally wide doors afford easy entrance and exit.

Outstanding beauty of line, color and finish makes the new Superior Whippet unquestionably the style authority in its class. Important artistic improvements include longer lines, chromium plate, higher radiator and hood, larger hub caps, heavier running boards and sweeping one-piece full crown fenders.

In spite of its remarkably low price, the new Superior Whippet offers many engineering advantages usually found only on costly cars.

No other low-priced car has all these advantages: Full force-feed lubrication, silent timing chain, "Finger-Tip Control," oversize balloon tires, invar-strut pistons, extra big four-wheel brakes, higher compression engine giving more speed, pick-up and power—and, in the Six, a heavy seven-bearing crankshaft.

A Whippet demonstration will prove the worth of these features in performance, safety and comfort; long service will prove their value in dependability and operating economy.

Strong Plymouth Axles Give Smooth Riding Qualities

"Hidden away beneath metal housings are to be found many points of construction and details ... design responsible for the smoothness of operation, the quietness and satisfactory performance ... a motor vehicle," says P. C. Sauerbrey, operating manager of the Plymouth Motor Corporation. "The Plymouth rear axle is an example," he states. "The rear shafts are forgings of exceptional size and strength. Outer ends of these shafts rest in double thrust-absorbing roller bearings. By placing two bearings at these points rather than one, the bearing area is doubled and the owner of a Plymouth car is assured of longer life and smoother operation.

"These bearings serve the purpose not only of supporting the rear axle shafts but also of absorbing lateral shocks to the rear wheels. When only one bearing is used at the outer end of each shaft, a shock to either of the rear wheels will be transmitted along the shaft through the differential and will be absorbed in the bearing in the opposite wheel. Double bearings eliminate this by absorbing the entire shock to either wheel in the bearings located at that wheel and thus preventing any of the shock being transmitted through the differential. It is evident that such a design aids materially in prolonging the life of the entire rear axle."

Plymouth engineers working in conjunction with those of the Chrysler organization are always alert in their determination to keep the Plymouth in the deserving position it now enjoys in its price class, according to Sauerbrey, who adds: "Everywhere in the Plymouth car we have maintained the unique Chrysler policy of standardized quality. A careful inspection of each detail of construction in the Plymouth will disclose the fact that the Plymouth is a quality product throughout."

Light Patterns.

The pattern of the light ahead of the car, its shape in other words, is a vital factor in illumination. Dirt on the lenses is ruinous to the pattern. That is one reason why they should be kept clean.

Quiet elegance, comfort and a touch of raciness are embodied in the graceful, sweeping lines of the new five-passenger sedan announced by the Lincoln Motor Co. The adjustable driver's seat is an outstanding feature. A slight downward movement of a lever conveniently located within easy reach of the right hand, permits the seat to be moved forward or backward four inches. The adjustment can be made without risk while the car is in motion. An upward pull on the same lever locks the seat into position at 1-inch intervals. A flap made of the Detroit meeting, Chevro- executives conferred with a p of dealers selected from the nt who make up the domestic ler organization of the com- . Every branch of advertising, e huge newspaper campaigns to ffic, billboard, direct mail, mag- e and trade journal, was dis- sed, James stated.

Rush James, sident of Allen-James Motor 2160 Olive street, Chevrolet r here, who returned last week m an advertising conference in t, Mich. The campaign in- ves use of space in more than newspapers in the United es, he declared.

"The newspaper medium was de- ded as the most important in ch to transmit our message to e consumer," James said on his rn. "Millions of persons read e papers and, naturally, learn of e advantages of the 'bigger and tter Chevrolet.'

"Dealers were invited to the nference in order that the home ffice might be thoroughly in- rmed as to field conditions, gain- g the viewpoint of men who come o daily contact with the buying blic, people who read Chevrolet dvertising. Our criticism was re- quested and our recommendations will be incorporated in future advertisements."

Ten other dealers besides James, each representing a different section of the country, attended the conference. They were met by W. S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Motor Co., who discussed performance and operation of Chevrolet cars in their territories.

"Knudsen stressed the building of good will with our customers by giving them efficient service and courteous treatment," James continued.

"R. H. Grant, vice president in charge of sales, presented an encouraging outlook for 1929, stating that more than 2,250,000 cars will be brought into the low price field this year."

The conference lasted two days, the first being given over to advertising and selling methods. The second day was spent at the General Motors proving grounds, where 1245 acres of hilly country have been converted into a gigantic outdoor laboratory on which General Motors cars are thoroughly tested before they are put on the market.

"I had never fully appreciated the importance of the advertising phase of manufacturing before," James remarked. "I believe that advertising has been the greatest single factor in bringing Chevrolet the widespread popularity it now enjoys."

250 Chevrolet Dealers Visit Local Plant

Southwestern Agents Pass Through St. Louis on Way to Detroit.

Two trainloads of Chevrolet dealers, 250 strong, arrived in St. Louis Wednesday noon from Southwestern States, including Arizona, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, New Mexico, Louisiana, and Mississippi, en route to Flint, Mich., where they will inspect the main Chevrolet factories, and during their six-hour stay were taken through the St. Louis plant at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue.

O. E. Nonn, zone manager of St. Louis, met the party and was their host at luncheon at Hotel Statler. In the afternoon, the dealers, headed by Felix Doran, Jr., Southwestern regional manager, and J. C. McNeely, regional distributer, went through the Chevrolet assembly and the Fisher Body plants.

They watched a car grow from a few beams of steel to the completed unit. First, axles were added, the motor was dropped into place by an overhead hoist, then followed in rapid succession running boards, fenders, wheels, body, radiator, hood and incidental parts.

The two-section train left here at 6 p. m. for Flint, where the party will be taken through the entire plant, consisting of motor division, foundry, and Gray Iron Works.

At Milford, Mich., they will inspect the testing laboratory and the General Motors proving ground. Finally, in Detroit, the dealers will attend a banquet given by the Chevrolet Motor Co.

Hard on Clutch.

Riding the clutch is not the only bad practice in connection with its use in which the motorist may indulge. Letting it engage with a jolt when the car is moving fairly rapidly is another that is quite as harmful.

Strong Plymouth Axles Give Smooth Riding Qualities

"Hidden away beneath metal housings are to be found many points of construction and details of design responsible for the smoothness of operation, the quietness and satisfactory performance of a motor vehicle," says P. C. Sauerbrey, operating manager of the Plymouth Motor Corporation. "The Plymouth rear axle is an example," he states. "The rear shafts are forgings of exceptional size and strength. Outer ends of these shafts rest in double thrust-absorbing roller bearings. By placing bearings at these points rather than one, the bearing area is doubled and the owner of a Plymouth car is assured of longer life and smoother operation.

"These bearings serve the purpose not only of supporting the rear axle shafts but also of absorbing lateral shocks to the rear wheels. When only one bearing is used at the outer end of each shaft, a shock to either of the rear wheels will be transmitted along the shaft through the differential and will be absorbed in the bearing in the opposite wheel. Double bearings eliminate this by absorbing the entire shock to either wheel in the bearings located at that wheel and thus preventing any of the shock being transmitted through the differential. It is evident that such a design aids materially in prolonging the life of the entire rear axle."

Plymouth engineers working in conjunction with those of the Chrysler organization are always alert in their determination to keep the Plymouth in the deserving position it now enjoys in its price class, according to Sauerbrey, who adds: "Everywhere in the Plymouth car we have maintained the unique Chrysler policy of standardized quality. A careful inspection of each detail of construction in the Plymouth will disclose the fact that the Plymouth is a quality product throughout."

Light Patterns.

The pattern of the light ahead of the car, its shape in other words, is a vital factor in illumination. Dirt on the lenses is ruinous to the pattern. That is one reason why they should be kept clean.

Firestone Named Referee for Annual Indianapolis Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 18.—Harvey S. Firestone, tire builder and patron of automobile racing, has been named referee of the International 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Firestone for years has been an ardent indorser of racing as a laboratory for the development of automobile tire shoes.

Other prominent men who have refereed the historic Indianapolis speed classic include Henry Ford, Arthur Brisbane, Charles M. Schwab and Lawrence P. Fisher.

The referee in an automobile race is the final court of appeal. He decides all disputes and is the ultimate official for all decisions during the contest. Because of his long association with the sport and because of the unusual importance of the coming contest, Firestone's choice is regarded in racing circles as an apt one.

Incidentally, tires have become one of the deciding factors in automobile racing. With no less than 20 cars of equal speed, and as many drivers qualified to flip them around the Indianapolis track at their fastest pace, the margin of difference very frequently rests with the tires and the quick action in tire changes in the pits.

One driver may have the knack of driving the turns with a minimum of skidding, thus saving rubber that a less skillful pilot would "file off" in his side slides through the turns.

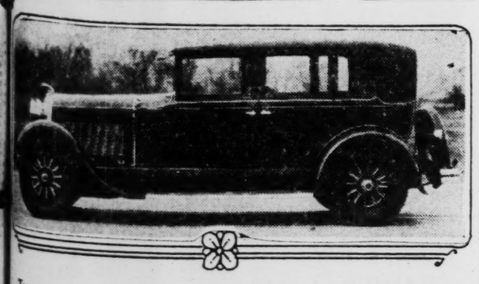
So gruelling is the pace in an Indianapolis race and so fierce the competition, only one winning car has ever finished without changing a tire. That was in 1920, when the late Gaston Chevrolet used the same set of rubber throughout his winning 500-mile drive.

In 1925, when Peter de Paolo established the existing record of 101.13 miles an hour, he made but one tire change, and that was a precautionary change made while refueling.

Many Anti-Rattles.

For every rattle in the door of the closed car there is an anti-rattle device on the shelf of the accessory store.

New Five-Passenger Lincoln Sedan



Two types of window construction are provided in this machine.

Quiet elegance, comfort and a touch of raciness are embodied in the graceful, sweeping lines of the new five-passenger sedan announced by the Lincoln Motor Co. The adjustable driver's seat is an outstanding feature. A slight forward movement of a lever conveniently located within easy reach of the right hand, permits the seat to be moved forward or backward four inches. The adjustment can be made without risk while the car is in motion. An upward pull on the same lever locks the seat into position at such intervals. A flap made of seat upholstery material conceals the opening between the sliding seat and the back rail when forward adjustments are made.

Two types of window construction are provided in this attractive sedan body. One has the two conventional broad windows. The three-window type is particularly adapted to the convenience of persons of advanced age. The extra window is cut deeply into the upper rear quarter, and is operated semi-automatically.

The height of the car has been decreased to give a lower, racier appearance, although ample head room has been preserved.

Take our competitors' word for it!

You have four sources of information regarding automobile values—

(1) the manufacturer,
(2) the dealer,
(3) the owner—and
(4) those who sell competitive cars.

Dodge Brothers say that the new Dodge Brothers Six, at $945 to $1065, is the best car they have ever presented; Dodge Brothers dealers say that it is the best car they have ever sold; owners say that it is the greatest value they have ever purchased.

And, fair-minded competitors will tell you that it is the most formidable rival they have ever known.

This consensus certainly makes the new Dodge Brothers Six too good a car for you to overlook. Your dealer will tell you all the facts regarding this remarkable automobile. Then, you check them up with a demonstration. And remember that your present car and a very small monthly payment will put a new Dodge Brothers Six in your hands.

First Half of 700-Mile Cuban Highway Opened

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAVANA, Cuba, May 18.—The first completed link of the new 700-mile Cuban Central Highway, between Havana and Matanzas, will be formally opened by President Gerardo Machado a week from tomorrow. When finished, this highway, also known as Carretera Central, will extend from Pinar del Rio, a city in Western Cuba, to Santiago de Cuba, at the eastern end of the island.

St. Louisans who choose to motor here will find good roads all the way. The favorite route, according to the automobile clubs, is via Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn., Atlanta, Ga., and Jacksonville, Fla., to Miami, Fla.

From Miami, the new Overseas Highway, completed except for a space of 12 miles, through which a ferry still plies, crosses the water to Key West, a total distance of about 125 miles over one of America's favorite fishing sections.

At Key West, the St. Louis motorist takes the ferry again for a six-hour trip to Havana, 90 miles away. All American automobiles may enter Cuba duty free through a special decree of the Cuban Treasury.

Already about half completed, the new highway winds around mountains, cuts through valleys or hits straight across the sun-swept sand for mile after mile, giving delightful views of stately palms and tropical shrubbery.

Original cost of the Cuban Central Highway was set at $75,000,000 but extensions since the project was started have brought the total outlay to about $100,000,000. All six of the Cuba provinces are traversed. More than 11,000 men are working on the highway, which is expected to be completed in 1930.

To date, extraordinary difficulties have been encountered in construction. One river, along which the concrete stretches in Eastern Cuba has been known to rise 30 feet in five hours. Summer rains come down in torrents. Fills along the roadbed are often allowed to settle for a year before the subgrading is done and the concrete foundations put in.

Grades do not exceed five feet in 100 feet and curves are less than 4 per cent, according to engineers. There is no grade crossing, even though the road intersects railroad tracks at 32 points.

The highway is 20.66 feet wide for the most part, with five-foot shoulders on either side, and is 26 feet wide in the towns.

Cuba's road program is associated with a program of erecting of many new schools throughout the island, with irrigation and drainage systems in the country and sewage projects in the cities. Cost of secondary highways joining the Cuban Central will bring the total road-building program to $300,000,000, E. S. Escarza, assistant supervisor of roads and bridges, states.

700-Mile Cuban Highway Will Be Opened Next Week

Transitone Opens Branch in Detroit

Opening of an installation plant in Detroit is announced by the Automobile Radio Corporation, manufacturers of the new "Transitone" automobile radio.

After three years of experimenting, transitones have been perfected to a point where they may easily be installed on many makes of cars. It is claimed that reception is as clear as that obtainable with expensive sets in the home, even at high automobile speed.

Fargo "Freighter," Built by Chrysler, Is Displayed Here

The Fargo Freighter, first of a line of Chrysler-built trucks planned by the Fargo Motor Corporation, is now in production. For some time Fargo has been building and selling commercial cars of half and three-quarter ton capacity, and the high character of these models has created keen interest in the forthcoming Freighter.

The commercial cars were adaptations of passenger car chasses. The designing of the one-ton truck, however, required original research of an exhaustive nature in order to produce a truck which in its field would be comparable with what the name Chrysler has meant in the passenger car field.

The Freighter is now on display in St. Louis and is attracting considerable attention among truck owners.

R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., distributer of Hudson and Essex cars in the St. Louis territory, announces a Hudson national used car sales which is being inaugurated this week. Window displays and colored pennants are being used by local dealers to advertise the displays.

The Frampton company's elaborate used car quarters at 4521-39 Delmar boulevard will be a center of activity, with its convertible front, completely opening the display rooms in good weather, a feature. W. H. Bryant will be in charge of this branch, while Harry Kraleman will supervise sales at the main establishment at 3303 Locust street.

The company's branch at 4822 Easton avenue will complete the Hudson displays during the next week or two. More than 100 selected cars, specially priced for the sale, are being shown at this branch.

W. G. Astridge, sales manager of the Western Automobile Co., Pierce-Arrow distributer, has been informed by the Pierce-Arrow factory that Mary Garden, opera star, is taking her sixth Pierce-Arrow, the new 125-horsepower straight eight on the 143-inch wheelbase, with her on a European tour. The car is finished in a solid expanse of "Garden yellow" and "Mary blue."

Stearns-Knight sales in the first four months of the year doubled those of the same period in 1928, local officials of the company have been apprised. They report increased demand here for the Stearns, which is the only eight-cylinder, Knight sleeve-valved motor made in this country.

Systematic preventive service benefits the purchaser as well as the company which handles AC spark plugs, according to St. Louis dealer. Some automobile dealers are using a special form to check the car when it is sold, after 500 and 1500 miles of running.

The new Chrysler Imperial roadster is attracting wide attention due to several innovations, including a windshield which protects occupants of the rumble compartment and a door opening on the curb side of the rumble seat which enables passengers in the tonneau to enter without climbing over the fender, according to officials of the Midwest Motors, Inc., local distributer.

A thrift campaign is now in progress at the Oakland factories, Pontiac, Mich., E. A. Hatfield of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., distributer, reports. The campaign is designed to eliminate waste of time and materials in building Oaklands and Pontiacs. The company has offered $1200 in prizes for the best suggestion of workmen.

Faced with an ever increasing surplus of orders over production, A. vanDerZee, general sales manager of the Plymouth Motor Car Corporation, has been harassing the Plymouth factory for more cars, local Plymouth dealers, who also need more units have been informed.

As a result, 1002 Plymouths were produced on April 30 alone. This is of some importance, in view of the comparative recent introduction of the Plymouth by Chrysler.

Regular polishing saves depreciation, in the judgment of F. G. Quinn, 3325 Lindell boulevard, distributor of 999 polish. Quinn supports his statement with information from hundreds of owners who use his polish.

Unprecedented cold weather during January and February materially retarded sales of passenger cars and motorcycles in England, according to a Department of Commerce report issued by T. L. Gaukel, St. Louis representative. The decline, however, was offset by quick advances in sales during the three weeks preceding Easter. It is estimated that foreign orders make up 20 per cent of British consumption.

Of greater interest to St. Louis automobile men is Gaukel's statement that registration of new passenger cars in Mexico in the first quarter showed a slight increase over 1928.

Word is received by Hudson dealers in St. Louis of the appointment of H. Dale Rue as manager of the used car department of the Hudson Motor Car Co. Rue has been in the business for 20 years, dividing his time between sales and distribution.

C. W. Burst, president of the Moon Motor Corporation, anticipates that 30,000 cotton-picking machines will be made by his company in 1930. The machine, indorsed by the American Cotton Growers' Association, according to Burst, weighs 300 pounds and is mounted on wheels, being operated by two men who roll its between the rows of plants.

The Western Auto Supply Co., which has three branch stores in Greater St. Louis, now has 84 locations over the country, it is stated. By Oct. 1, the company expects to have 100 stores operating.

Brakes are the most important factor in preventing automobile accidents, in the opinion of William Chaudet, head of the General Brake Service Corporation, said to be the largest company of its kind in the United States. The company operates four stations in and near St. Louis. Chaudet has equipped his shops with almost every known device to test and service brakes of every description.

A high degree of filtration may be obtained by using the Cuno oil filter, according to F. S. Wiemeyer, 2625 Locust street, distributer. The Cuno filter eliminates necessity of replacing cartridges. It is being used successfully on aircraft, automobile and other internal combustion motors, Wiemeyer states.

The motor gauge, a new invention which permits precision synchronization of valves and ignition, has been found exceptionally serviceable, according to Cramer Bros., Inc., 2616 North Thirteenth street. In this day of high compression engines, a one-thousandth of an inch difference in timing means a sacrifice of several miles in speed, Cramer Bros. declare.

C. E. "Buzz" Graves, Inc., has been organized by Graves, former member of Lambert-Graves Motor Co., Oldsmobile and Viking distributer. Graves reports that he expects to obtain a franchise to handle a popular make of automobile within a short time and anticipates establishing a service station where complete service will be given on all kinds of cars.

A. P. Woehrle, local independent tire dealer, has been made a director of the Automobile Tire Dealers' League of America, Inc., organized recently at Chicago "to foster trade and commerce and promote the interests of the tire industry."

Prices of the Windsor White Prince 8-82 have been reduced $50, it is announced, with exception of the seven-pasenger sedan. It is also stated that deliveries will start next week of the new Windsor 6-69 which sells at about $1100.

Time Is Money

Time being money, it is surprising that so many car owners still have the "five gallons of gas" habit. That means twice as many stops at the filling station and ch takes time.

London "Cabbies" Up in Arms Over Air Taxi Invasion

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 18.—That the taxicab of today is already sensing the rivalry of the air taxi of tomorrow was evidenced here this week at a semi-private meeting of taxi owners.

American visitors since the war have noticed change for the better in the appearance of cabs whose rickety and ramshackle qualities have been made famous by romancers.

Although there are still many of these, they are being supplanted in the public favor by more smart vehicles, colored in sky blue, green, mauve and lemon, and even decked with flowers and bright curtains as a lure to feminine patronage.

However, cab owners forget their own war during a discussion of the feat of a noted aviator in flying from Hendon up the Thames River and landing at the foot of the Savoy's water gate. He carried a taxi passenger in his plane.

Point was added by the fact a friend of the pilot's left Hendon at the same time in a motor taxi, arriving at the Savoy where they had a luncheon engagement, just 40 minutes later.

Use of Force Harmful.

Don't use the hammer on a balky bushing. Place a piece of wood against it and drive it out that way.

"Slow Traps" Catch Cash.

A unique method of benefiting home trade is applied in towns and villages in Germany to catch the cash of passing motorists. "Slow traps" are employed by keeping streets rough and crooked in order to slow down the fast automobiles and so prevent injuries to geese, pigs and chickens and possibly to induce motorists to stop in the hamlet for a meal, a change of tires, or the purchase of some small article.

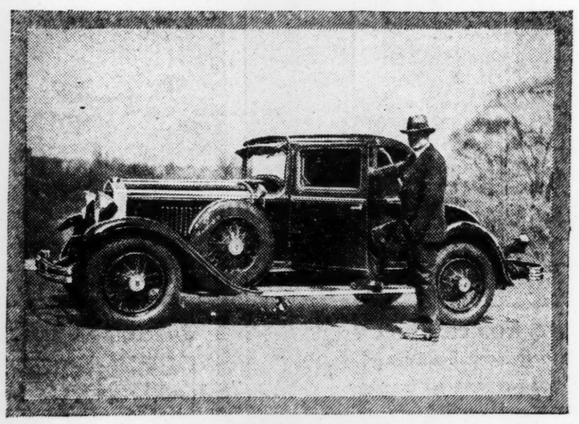
LIEUT. REGINALD D. THOMAS . . . Aviator U. S. N. R. Winner of the Schiff trophy for the greatest number of flying hours without accident. Instructor of aeronautics, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.



LIEUT. THOMAS stepping into his new HUPMOBILE cabriolet. Chosen because "materials used in HUPMOBILE compare more closely with those used in the best aeronautical engines, than with any other moderately priced car ever brought to my attention."

Here's a paid testimonial

PAID FOR IN CASH SAVINGS

(and the same savings are open to you)

HUPMOBILE'S new program has cut all prices . . . reductions up to $260

When HUPMOBILE announced its radical price reductions on all models, Lieut. Reginald D. Thomas, aviator of the United States Naval Reserve, was one of the very first purchasers. He snapped up the opportunity. He drove away with a smart new HUPMOBILE cabriolet and a fat cash saving in his pocket.

And he volunteered this statement:

"Specifications of materials used in the HUPMOBILE compare more closely to those used in the best aeronautical engines, than to those of any other moderately priced car that has ever been brought to my attention."

Lieutenant Thomas knows motors . . . and motor cars. For 12 years he's trusted his life to motors—in the air. Anything mechanical is an open book to him. He won the Schiff trophy for the greatest number of flying hours without accident, and the latest ex-President of the United States presented it to him. He teaches aeronautics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He chose a HUPMOBILE not alone on its magnificent reputation, its obvious style and beauty, its speed and power, or even its new price allure, but on the quality his expert eyes could see at a glance!

ANNUAL TRAINING CAMP FOR SCOUT LEADERS

Nearly 250 Persons Will Attend Eighth Annual Gathering at Irondale.

Practical training in camping, from camp routine to special games and outdoor craft projects, will be given to nearly 250 scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, and troop committeemen belonging to the local Boy Scout organization at the Irondale Reservation, the summer camp of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, during the eighth annual Scout Leaders' Training Camp. The camp is held each spring as a climax to various boy leadership courses conducted during the winter by the Council.

Although intended primarily for members of th etraining courses, the camp is open to any adult officer in the local organization, a special section having been set aside for those not members of the courses. In addition, any camper may join one of a number of specialization groups in scouting subjects that will be conducted at the camp.

Particular attention is planned for nature study, swimming and handicraft, according to Educational Director William Puffer of the Council, who will be in general supervision of the training. Each group will be in charge of an expert on that subject, selected in most cases from members of the headquarters staff, practically all of whom will be present at the camp.

"This camp is a training camp in the full sense of the word," Puffer said. "It should not be confused by those wishing to attend with the regular scoutmasters' camp held every fall. At this latter recreation is the primary object, and the leaders are invited to bring their families. But the training camp has a definite goal of accomplishment."

The regular scoutmasters' camp will be held Aug. 31 to Sept. 2.

EXECUTIVES OF GIRL SCOUTS TO ADDRESS TWO MEETINGS

Miss Louise Price, National Secretary of Camp Committee, to Be in St. Louis This Week.

Two talks on campaigning will be given to the Girl Scouts of St. Louis Tuesday and Wednesday of this week by Miss Louise Price, national secretary of the Camp Committee of the Girl Scouts of America. Miss Price will spend the two days in St. Louis while on her way back to New York City from Dallas, Tex., where she has been attending a regional conference of the organization.

The first talk will be given for the troops of South St. Louis, at the Grand Avenue Methodist Church at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. North and West St. Louis troops will hear Miss Price at St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church Wednesday, at the same hour.

In addition to her talks to the girls, Miss Price will meet with the St. Louis Girl Scout Camp Committee Tuesday noon, and will attend a banquet given for her by the local leaders' organization Wednesday evening.

Troop Notes

North District.

A celebration in honor of the troop's twelfth anniversary was held by Troop 3 of the Grace Holy Cross Church last Tuesday evening, with more than 100 scouts, parents of south and friends of the troop in attendance Troop 206, with its drum and bugle corps, assisted in the celebration. Troop 3 was organized May 17, 1927, at the Webster School, and during its entire existence has had but two scoutmasters, Peter Joyce, who led the troop about six months, and J. P. Simons, who had been assistant scoutmaster under Joyce. From the start Simons was one of the most active scoutmasters of the city, and in recognition of this fact he was, about three years ago, appointed deputy commissioner of the North District.

As a tribute to his services, a scout statuette was presented to Simons by three charter members of the troop. Troop Committeeman Hunt, Scoutmaster Herzog of Troop 206, the Rev. Taylor from the church, and several others made short talks. The troop passed a resolution that special effort would be made to prepare candidates for the Eagle Scout rank, as only one scout from the troop so far has attained this degree. At the conclusion of the program each patrol put on a stunt.

Two patrols were selected by elimination and entered in the Camparall by Troop 88, of the Salem Evangelical Church. The troop drum and bugle corps is practicing to play before the Spanish War veterans.

The Reptile patrol, under Patrol Leader George Rohing, won first place in an inter-patrol contest held by Troop 92 of the Samuel Cupples School. Prizes were awarded to the patrol members at a Parents' Night held at the school. The patrol entered by this troop in the Camparall is composed of John Stigler, patrol leader, George Rohing, Ralph Grimsby, Howard Cory, Barney Alexander, Jack Mullen, Will Rugh, Willis Wylie, Sam Amato and Pat McGuire.

West District.

Ten scouts of Troop 26, of the Delmar Baptist Church, have signed for camp this summer. They are Thayer Damon, Donald Hanson, Robert Licklider, Tom McConnell, Truett McSpadden, Harry Svatek, George Tooley, Bob Tyzzer, Nelson Webster, and Lewis Weiss. Scout Tyzzer recently advanced to second class rank.

Compass study and drilling were held by 27 scouts of Troop 49 at a recent meeting at the First Presbyterian Church.

Five scouts passed second class tests and two others passed Tenderfoot test, at the last meeting of Troop 93, of the Church of the Redeemer. Scout Andy Bachy completed his first class requirements, and turned in his second class card preliminary to filing application for promotion to the new rank. The troop is planning a visit to the State Capitol at Jefferson City.

Thirty-three scouts re-registered for the third year of scouting for Troop 94, of the St. Barbara's Church. Three assistant scoutmasters wer ealso registered: Harry Wehmeyer, Celestine Wehmeyer and Ernest Jones.

A Tenderfood investiture ceremony for candidates, Elmer Bramon, Marshall Pollard, Albert Simpson, and Richard Higginbotham was conducted by Troop 102 at a meeting at the Flynn Park School. The Moose patrol, with 154 points, is leading in an inter-patrol contest conducted by the troop. The Flaming Arrows, with 146, are second, followed by the Rams, 110, and the Wolves, 84.

South District.

A new troop is being organized at the Zion Methodist Church, Virginia and Koeln avenues, under Scoutmaster Arthur Rettig. Twelve boys were present at the first meeting. The troop will meet at 7:30 o'clock every Friday evening.

Anthony Brenner has been appointed scribe of Troop 105 of the Church of the Assumption, and Steve Stasiak bugler. The Hawk patrol won a knife-and-ax contest held by the troop at the last meeting. The Flying Eagle patrol is working on a large knot board to donate to the troop.

A musical comedy and entertainment was given by Troop 161 at the South Side Odd Fellows' Hall Friday evening, to raise money for a troop clubhouse.

Suburban District.

Six Suburban District troops sent their Camparall patrols to the Patrol Leaders' Training Camp at Irondale last week-end, as a final preparation for the Camparall this week-end. They are Troops Webster Groves 1, 7, and 15, Kirkwood 2, Overland 1, and Glendale 1. Fourteen other troops fro mthis this district are entered in the Camparall: Webster Groves 3, 5, 8 ,10, 12 and 14; Home Heights 1, Overland 2, St. Charles 3 and 4, Kirkwood 1, Kirkwood 3, Maplewood 3, and Troop 85.

CHRYSLER "75" ROYAL SEDAN

$1535 f.o.b. factory

THE Chrysler "75" Royal Sedan is a well-groomed car. The moment you look at it you get the impression of personality, refinement and capability.

The very first mile you drive it or ride in it confirms the impression that its appearance gives. You find its performance all that the name Chrysler implies in flexible power, eager speed and easy control.

You find its riding qualities well beyond any previous experience or expectation.

And, the low price—$1535 f. o. b. factory—is the climax of all the surprises that this remarkable car has in store. It is infinitely lower than is suggested by the Royal Sedan's appearance and behavior.

Scientific manufacturing methods, thoroughly modern plant equipment and precision craftsmanship explain why the Chrysler price is so much less than you would have to pay elsewhere for similar beauty and luxury.

And a demonstration will convince you that Chrysler performance cannot be had in any other car at any price.

OAK FOREST, PLANTED TO GIVE BRITAIN SUPER-NAVY, DYING

Malady Puzzles Experts; Trees Have Been Used in Making Wagons.

By the Associated Press.

BRISTOL, England, May 18.—What might have been a great British navy is dying north of here of a mysterious malady. It is the famous Forest of Dean, planted shortly after the Napoleonic wars to provide oak for a greater fleet than the England of Nelson's time had seen. Now thousands of the great trees are shriveling, their trunks covered with moss and fungi.

The planting seemed a clever bit of foresight but by the time the oaks were grown the armored fighting ship was beginning to crowd the frigate off the seas. The oaks of Dean have been transformed instead into wagon scantlings. As they matured they were cut down about 300 acres a year and more of them planted to make more wagons.

Experts admit they are ignorant of the exact nature of the ailment; but they have advanced several theories. One is that the conversion of parts of the forest into coal and iron mining districts has caused atmospheric pollution harmful to the trees. Another is that a hitherto unclassified fungus causes the mischief.

DISTRICT COURTS OF HONOR TO AWARD BADGES THIS WEEK

Star and Life Scout Honors to Be Given by Subsidiary Bodies for First Time.

District Courts of Honor, to award Star and Life Scout honors, merit badges, and class badges to local Boy Scouth applicants, will be held in each of the four districts of the city and county this week, says William Puffer, educational director of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council. Each court will be held on a different evening, beginning tomorrow.

The West District Court, for candidates in the West District, will be held at the Ben Blewett Junior High School tomorrow; South District, at the Missouri School for the Blind, Tuesday; North District, Yeatman High School, Wednesday, and Suburban District, Webster Groves Baptist Church, Thursday. All will convene at 7:30 o'clock.

These will be the first district courts to award the Star and Life Scout honors, these badges heretofore having been presented only at the twice-a-year City Court of Honor. The change in practice was made because too many applications for these awards were being turned in for the City Court to handle. The District Courts meet every two months except in the summer vacation period.

SCOTTISH RITE BODIES EXPECT TO INITIATE 1000 THIS WEEK

St. Louis Lodgemen's Annual Reunion to Open Tuesday for Four Days.

The sixty-seventh reunion of the Scottish Rite bodies in St. Louis will begin next Tuesday morning for four days. Four of the groups expect to initiate classes of about 250 each.

It was announced that the Moolah delegation to Los Angeles for the annual meeting of the Imperial Council will depart by special train May 31. More than 500 Shriners and their families are expected to make the trip.

CATHOLIC NURSERY CAMPAIGN

Women's League Seeks $15,000 to Enlarge Project.

The day nursery and lunchroom maintained by the Catholic Women's League at 1023 Selby place, will be enlarged at the conclusion of a $15,000 letter campaign to raise funds for the project. More than $4000 has been received to date.

The enlargement of the children's lunchroom to meet the demands of increased attendance and the establishment of a pre-school age kindergarten to be opened in September will be the first results of the expansion. The nursery is conducted to care for small children whose mothers are employed by day, and the lunchroom serves meals to under-nourished children of the neighborhood at a nominal price.

GARDEN TOUR IN FLORISSANT

Horticultural Society's Trip Today; Contest Being Held.

The society is conducting its annual contest to determine the best garden in St. Louis. The city has been divided into 25 districts and a cash prize will be awarded the winner in each district with additional prizes for the two best gardens in the entire city. The entry list will close June 1.

LAWYERS BALK AT GARLIC

Oppose Irish Free State Bill to Force Them to Use That Tongue.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, May 18. — The legal profession in the Free State is indignant at the decision of the Government to make future lawyers speak the Irish language.

The measure has aroused much opposition, and many members of the Government party are refusing to support it.

The opponents of the proposal contend that there is at present no legal text book in Irish, that technical law terms are lacking in that language, and that litigants will suffer increased expense in paying for interpreters.

Report KYW Is to Build A Station of Record Power

Flexible Design to Permit Eventual Development of Half Million Watts Said to Be Contemplated — WOWO Asks for 50,000 Watts.

Erection of a transmitter for KYW that will establish new standards for power and efficiency is contemplated according to report in Chicago. It is said that the new transmitter will develop 50,000 watts power, but will be so designed that addition of equipment will make possible as high as half a million watts, or that it will be built in the first place for power far beyond that of any present station and then will be throttled down to 25,000 or 50,000 watts until such time as the Federal Radio Commission changes its policy and gives the better type stations free reign in the use of power.

KYW is owned and operated by the Westinghouse Co., but is leased full time by the Chicago Herald-Examiner, which supplies all programs transmitted by the station. KYW formerly was on the channel just below KSD, the station of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, then was shifted down one channel, and finally, in the reallocation of Nov. 11, last, was dropped to 1020 kilocycles (294 meters).

On the higher channels KYW was heard over a wide territory. Today, even though it is using 10,000 watts power, it suffers from absorption, due, possibly, to its location on the roof of a hotel on Michigan boulevard, Chicago. As a result, there are several districts in Chicago where the station is heard only faintly, while in this part of the country KYW is rather difficult to tune in. It is probable that when KYW applies for a super power construction permit it also will request an assignment to a better broadcasting wave length.

KYW has been experimenting with a low-powered companion station, KYWA, on much the same principle on which WBZ, Springfield, Mass., and WBZA, Boston, work. KYWA is at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, about eight miles from the antenna of KYW, and has been using about 250 watts. It is understood that the auxiliary transmitter has not proved successful.

WOWO, Fort Wayne, Ind., has asked for a construction permit to build a 50,000 watt transmitter and for full time on the 1160 kilocycle channel instead of sharing it with WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va. WOWO has a 10,000 watt construction permit.

A 22-acre site for a 50,000-watt transmitter for KMOX, St. Louis, has been purchased. It is on the east side of Clarkson road, about 600 feet from Clayton road, in St. Louis County, and is about 25 miles from this city. Estimates on erecting a 50,000-watt station have been asked for.

As has been told, KWK has applied for an increase in power to 5000 watts and for permission to move its transmitter, and a more favorable wave length, while WIL has asked for an increase to 1000 watts and plans to move its transmitter out of the city.

WEAF, New York; KDKA, Pittsburg, Pa.; WLW, Cincinnati; WENR, Chicago; WGY, Schenectady, N. Y., and WJZ, New York, are the 50,000-watt stations actually operating with that power. KFI, Los Angeles; KMOX, St. Louis; WBAP, Fort Worth, Tex.; WOAI, San Antonio, Tex., and WTAM, Cleveland, have construction permits for 50,000-watt stations. WTIC, Hartford, Conn., has a 50,000-watt station nearing completion with prospects that it may go on the air next month.

It is understood in Washington that the Federal Radio Commission will again consider station power limitation for all that it has authorized construction of so many 50,000-watt transmitters and despite the 200,000-watt experimental license to the General Electric Co.

The situation is complicated by the decision of the District of Columbia Court, which specifically ruled that WGY, Schenectady, N. Y., might use 50,000 watts operating full time on its wavelength.

This specifying the amount of power a station may use will be attacked by counsel for the commission as a usurpation of the radio Board's administrative powers when the WGY case is fought out in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Many regional stations are applying for increases in power. To prevent intereference on wavelengths which are shared by several stations, the commission limited the power on most regional channels to 1000 watts and on local channels to 100 watts for night time operation.

The attitude of at least one member of the Radio Commission toward super-powered stations was indicated at a hearing on the application of the Pacific Western Broadcasting Corporation for a 150,000-watt construction permit to erect a transmitter for relay work.

"One hundred and fifty thousand watts" exclaimed Judge Robinson, chairman of the commission, "why the thought of it frightens me! What do you wish to do, communicate with Mars?"

Then the applicants said they desired to amend their petition and make it for only 15,000 watts. The Federation already has a construction permit for a 50,000-watt station, granted on presentation of a pretentious plan for country-wide broadcasting of educational programs. Thus far it has not erected this transmitter. The 15,000 watt transmitter would be used on short waves so that programs could be picked up by other stations and be rebroadcast. The general idea of the scheme is the same as that involved in applications by WENR and WOFL, Chicago, for short wave licenses.

J. E. Davidson and C. A. Ross of Albany, Mo., have applied to the Radio Commission for a license for a new station using unlimited time with 100 watts on the 1190 kc. channel.

Another Chain Being Organized On Pacific Coast

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 18.—A new radio chain is being formed on the Pacific Coast by H. H. King, former newspaper man and NBC official in San Francisco, and several associates. The company, to be known as Evergreen Network, Inc., will maintain headquarters in Seattle with KOL as key station.

The network will include six stations with limited broadcasting areas. The object is to improve radio reception in a number of communities through the new interlocking of stations. The districts to be served are those which experience difficulty in receiving programs of present chains and individual stations.

King is president and general manager.

New KMOX Team

Kelly, Miles and Conrad, the "Broadway Playboys" who were featured in the New York and Boston companies of "Good News," have joined the KMOX staff as a regular daily feature, and will broadcast every forenoon and every evening.

Twice across the continent Free!

Thousands of miles of De Soto Six motoring at no cost

Why pay more for a car than it costs to get just what you want?

Paying $1000 for a car typical of that price field will not give you any more in prestige, in beauty, in performance, in comfort, in riding ease, in dependability and in economy than De Soto Six gives for $845—over $150 less. In fact, all comparisons are in favor of De Soto.

Make these contrasts yourself. Drive a De Soto Six. Then try out a car in the $1000 class. If you are like the other thousands and thousands of motorists who have made this study of values, you will write a check for considerably less than you had expected to pay, and will get considerably more than you had expected to get. You'll lose no time adding your name to the rapidly increasing list of De Soto owners.

The money you thus save, you can use in running your new De Soto Six. At the average price of gas and oil, De Soto's saving of about $150 will be a gift to you of mileage equivalent to a luxurious trip twice across the continent, free of charge, in one of the smartest and most zestful sixes built today.

De Soto Six is Chrysler-built—a fashionable, beautiful car you will be proud to own in any company. Then why pay more than De Soto's moderate cost? 'Phone us for a trial without obligation.

Little Likelihood Of Radio Talks With Mars Seen

Scientist Tells Engineers Difficulties Appear to Be Insurmountable.

(Copyright, 1929, by Science Service.)

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Whether long or short waves be used, there is little hope that people on the earth will ever be able to communicate with the inhabitants of Mars, if there are any, by radio. At least so the Institute of Radio Engineers and the American section of the International Scientific Radio Union were told here by Dr. E. O. Hulburt of the United States Naval Research Laboratory.

Assuming that the atmosphere of Mars is approximately the same in composition as that of the earth, its four-fifths oxygen and four-fifths nitrogen and other gases, Dr. Hulburt calculated the composition at great heights above the Martian surface. This is possible through the physicist's knowledge of gas diffusion and the intensity of gravity on Mars. This has also enabled him to figure the number of electrons and their height above the planet's surface, and to tell the height of that planet's reflecting, or Kennely-Heaviside, layer. It is this layer on the earth that causes radio waves to be reflected down to earth again, as well as "skip distance" effects. With short waves, a receiver near a transmitter may not be able to get a signal, but a set many times further away may get it perfectly.

"On a summer day on Mars," said Dr. Hulburt, the skip distances for 100, 80, 60 and 50 meter waves are 0, 730, 3410 and 2240 kilometers, and the shortest wave for reliable long distance wireless communication is about 47 meters. Winter and night values of these quantities are greater. Because of the skip distances for waves below 100 meters, it would seem that conditions on Mars are not advantageous for short wave communication. Waves longer than about 100 meters will not pierce the atmosphere of the earth. These calculations, apart from other considerations, support the conclusion that only a very optimistic experimenter would look for successful wireless communication between the earth and Mars."

The property of the Kennely-Heaviside layer of reflecting radio waves back to the earth has been used to find its height. Dr. L. R. Hafstad and Dr. M. A. Tuve of the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, have performed this experiment. The average height of the layer is about 60 miles, but varies considerably. For instance, on Oct. 17, 1928, there was a severe magnetic storm, and at the time the height of the layer above the earth increased considerably.

The method that they have used is to send out radio signals from a station at the Naval Research Laboratory. The experimenters receive these signals and the echoes of the same signals when they come back to earth. As the speed of the waves is known, it is possible to calculate how far they have traveled.

Following a symposium on television, most of the engineers at the meeting are of the opinion that the time is rapidly coming nearer when television broadcasting will rank with sound broadcasting in popularity. This meeting is the first time that a representative group of engineers has taken steps toward general adoption of standards for television to enable all receivers to tune in all transmitters within their range.

Broadcasting of pictures in colors has been accomplished, the engineers were told by Capt. R. H. Ranger of the Radio Corporation of America.

The transmitter makes use of the varying reflection from a picture, wrapped around a revolving drum, to a photoelectric cell. In his newest transmitter, Capt. Ranger uses five prisms, which split the light into five parts, each of which goes to its respective cell.

The receiver records on waxed paper, instead of photographic paper, as in other methods. The incoming signal regulates a jet of hot air, which is squirted at the paper as it moves in step with the original picture. The wax is waterproof, but the hot air melts it in spots. These spots are no longer waterproof, and when a dye is applied the color is absorbed where the hot air struck. Dyes of any color may be used and by sending three separate pictures, of the red, blue and green of the original, each may be printed in the proper color. In the finished picture, all are combined to produce a color print.

BROADCAST TESTS USING 200,000 WATTS BEGIN SOON

tuned and held to the wave lengths they were using.

A telegram to the Bell Laboratories brought the information that the next 50,000-watt test with WXN would be held in about two weeks and that a definite schedule for the experiments probably would be arranged.

Significance of the tests, of course, is in the bearing that success or failure in obtaining good reception from both W3XN and WABC, when these 50,000 watters are operating so close together, will have on the Federal Radio Commission and its attitude toward power and wave length assignments. Engineers have seen no reason why two superpower stations should not be operated on adjoining channels if held to their wave lengths. But there is a widespread belief among listeners and some of the Radio Commissioners and members of Congress, that such operation would result in serious interference and "blanketing" of thousands of receivers.

Development of 1,000,000-watt stations to overcome man-made interference was predicted by Edgar H. Felix, radio consultant to the National Electrical Manufacturers' Association, in an address the past week before the Institute of Radio Engineers at Washington.

"Although there has been a tendency toward increased power in broadcasting, we have hardly reached the threshold of development in this direction," said Felix. "It is quite within the scope of the engineer's imagination to visualize a broadcasting system ultimately comprising transmitters of a million watt power. Compared with other systems in daily use this is by no means a large unit; the power bill for such a station might run from $50 to $100 an hour.

"If transmitters of this order of power were used the design of radio sets would have to be somewhat altered, employing less sensitive receivers and an adjustable means of pick-up instead of exposed antennas. These million-watt stations would have a high-grade service range of about 500 miles and the allocation of wavelengths would therefore be greatly simplified. Ninety such stations spread geographically over the country would give 10 or 12 program choices at any point, as compared with present conditions when perhaps less than 40 per cent of the area of the country is within the high-grade service range of any broadcasting station."

Felix pointed out that the radio listening public would be enormously increased due to the lessened initial and maintenance cost of radio receivers and improved quality of reproduction. This in turn, he said, would have a healthy effect on the economic position of the broadcasters.

"If this system were developed to include 90 stations, the present annual maintenance expense of approximately $35,000,000 would have to be raised." Felix estimated, "to $150,000,000 or $200,000,000, but service to the listener would be enormously increased."

Airplane Flight To Be Broadcast

Radio listeners will have another first-hand story of aerial maneuvers when an army bombing plane leaves Dayton about noon Tuesday on an attempted round-trip, nonstop flight to New York City. The story will be broadcast through the NBC System.

The plan is to have the bomber release several parachute flares over New York harbor, the flares to symbolize bombs that might be dropped into the heart of Manhattan. After flying over New York for about 15 minutes, during which time Hanson, aboard the bomber, will describe what is taking place aboard, the "attacking" plane will head back for Dayton.

Four Projects To Give Europe U. S. Programs

Four organizations in this country are now planning use of short waves with the idea of facilitating rebroadcasting abroad of programs originating in the United States.

The National Broadcasting Co., with the aid of the Radio Corporation of America and allied interests, is preparing for an elaborate interchange of programs with England and later with France and Germany. The Columbia System's plans of much the same general import were revealed through application by WCAU, Philadelphia's link in its chain, for short waves for relay broadcasting. The Pacific Western Broadcasting Corporation, Pasadena, Cal., and Aviation Radio Station, Inc., New York, also are seeking short wave licenses for broadcasting and rebroadcasting.

Application in behalf of WCAU was made by the Universal Broadcasting Co., which operates that station. Dr. Leon Levy, president of the Universal Co. and secretary-treasurer of the Columbia Broadcasting System, told the commission that arrangements had been made for exchanging programs with stations in Berlin and Paris. He said the company planned to establish a station near Philadelphia to rebroadcast the programs of WCAU for European listeners.

The commission has granted the Pacific federation permission to construct a 50,000 watt station for operation on 1490 kilocycles in the regular broadcast band. G. W. Alexander, manager of the federation, says it is planned to build a short wave station for broadcasting the programs to countries in all parts of the world. Arrangements have been made, he said, with organizations in Germany, Great Britain, Norway, Turkey, Italy, Spain and Japan.

The plan of Aviation Station, Inc., which operates WRNY, New York, in the interest of aeronautics, is to relay "American spoken will" programs to the world on W2XAL, a short wave station.

Louis Arbetter on Air Monday.

Louis Arbetter basso cantante, former St. Louisan, who has sung in concert and light opera, will sing over KMOX from 9:15 to 9:30 o'clock, tomorrow night, and at intervals the remainder of the month.

Melodrama of 1867 Will Be Revived In Eveready Hour

"Under the Gaslight," a melodramatic thriller of Civil War days, will be revived in the Eveready Hour over KSD Tuesday evening.

It was first played Aug. 12, 1867, in New York, and, according to one of the original programs, was received with "excessive signals of delight." Augustin Daly, the author, also produced "Leah, the Forsaken" and "Taming a Butterfly." The great success of "Under the Gaslight" showed that audiences of those days wanted their sentiment thrown on with a shovel.

Frederic Forrester, star of "White Cargo" and "Cobra," will be before the microphone as the mustached villain of Daly's play and a large company of Eveready Hour players will support him in the revival.

One of the great scenes of "Under the Gaslight" is where Laura, the delicate heroine, breaks out of a warehouse with an axe just in time to drag a boy friend from under the wheels of an express train. This hair raiser and all other action of the play will be reproduced as in the original.

The musical numbers, including "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" and "The Baggage Coach Ahead," which were in the original play, will be played by Nathaniel Shilkret and the Eveready Hour orchestra.

Melodrama of 1867 Will Be Revived In Eveready Hour

"Under the Gaslight," a melodramatic thriller of Civil War days, will be revived in the Eveready Hour over KSD Tuesday evening.

It was first played Aug. 12, 1867, in New York, and, according to one of the original programs, was received with "excessive demals of delight." Augustin Daly the author, also produced "Leah the Forsaken" and "Taming a Butterfly." The great success of "Under the Gaslight" proved that audiences of those days wanted their sentiment thrown on with a shovel.

Frederic Forrester, star of "White Cargo" and "Cobra," will be before the miscrophone as the unattached villain of Daly's play and a large company of Eveready Hour players will support him in the revival.

One of the great scenes of "Under the Gaslight" is where Laura, the delicate heroine, breaks out of a warehouse with an axe just in time to drag a boy friend from under the wheels of an express train. This hair raiser and all other action of the play will be reproduced as in the original.

The musical numbers, including "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" and "The Baggage Coach Ahead," which were in the original play, will be played by Nathaniel Shilkret and the Eveready Hour orchestra.

Radio Trade Notes

The Electric Lamp and Supply Co., 1122 Pine street, has been appointed exclusive distributer of the new Silver-Marshall AC screen grid receivers in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. Within a few days the new sets will be shown in St. Louis.

Four of the AC screen grid tubes are used in three RF stages and a power detector in the Silver-Marshall receiver, with a 227 tube in the first audio stage and two of the 45 type super power tubes in a final push-pull audio stage. There are lowboy and highboy models, each with a built-in Silver-Marshall matched inductance dynamic speaker.

The sets have band selector tuning for 10 kilocycle selectivity without cutting quality.

The lowboy is in semi-Sheraton design, while the highboy cabinet is in striped and diamond grain walnut.

It is said to be unnecessary to use aerial or ground with these sets, even for distant reception, as each receiver has its own built-in wire mesh screen antenna. Each model has phonograph pickup. Selectivity is the same all along the dials without necessity for adjustments.

An interesting detail is the coupling of the AC screen grid power detector to the first audio tube with resistance coupling.

Set, audio amplifier and speaker have been designed to give straight line amplification from 50 to 5000 cycles, fully covering the musical range.

The Artophone Corporation of Missouri, 1622-24 Pine street, has been appointed exclusive distributer of the new Earl radio receivers for the entire Mississippi Valley. This company has been in the musical business for 12 years and also is a manufacturer of talking machines. It has just bought a new plant for manufacturing purposes at Geraldine and Brown avenue, St. Louis.

The corporation has branches at Memphis, Tenn.; New Orleans, La.; Dallas, Tex., and Kansas City, Mo. It does a country-wide business and has an export office in New York City. Officers are: Edwin S. Schiele, president; Herbert Schiele, vice president; Ray C. Layer, vice president and sales manager, and C. W. Layer, treasurer.

M. C. Schoenly, Kansas City branch manager for the Chas. Freshman Co., Inc., maker of Earl sets, represents the factory in this territory.

There are four prinicpal AC models of Earl receivers, all using the Neutrodyne circuit. One model with eight tubes has four tuned stages, push-pull amplification with 171A tubes and the new inductor type dynamic speaker, its cabinet being in walnut finish. Another model also with eight tubes, has much the same chassis, inductor dynamic speaker, open type cabinet in walnut and phonograph pickup. Another eight tube Earl set has the new 45 type of super power tubes in push-pull amplification, phonograph pickup, full electric dynamic speaker and walnut cabinet with contrasting panels.

A fourth Earl model is a nine-tube set, with five tuned stages, super power push-pull amplification, phonograph pickup and full dynamic speaker and walnut cabinet of unusual design.

One model has three 126-type tubes and two of the 27 type heater tubes in addition to power valves and rectifier. The other three models use 27 heater tubes and super power tubes.

Unusual selectivity and "reach" for distant stations tuning are claimed for all these models.

Plans are announced for a Fada salon broadcast over the Columbia chain at 9 o'clock Tuesday nights. The sponsor will the F. A. D. Andrea, Inc., maker of Fada receivers.

Representatives of Geller, Ward & Hasner Hardware Co., Crosley distributer in this territory, returning from a convention of distributers at the Crosley factory in Cincinnati, O., report that the new sets should be coming through within the next week or 10 days.

According to R. J. Lickiss, sales manager and manager of the radio division of Geller, Ward & Hasner, there will be a complete line of console and table models. An interesting new model will be one that can be used either as a table type or with legs and a built-in speaker.

It is understood that there will be AC screen grid tube models, a new dynacone speaker and a "dynacoil" speaker, as well as AC tube sets of advanced design and also battery operated receivers for the districts where electric current is not available. There will also be a line of Findlay metal cabinets for Crosley sets.

A new line of low-priced receivers to be known as the Brandes is being brought out by the Kolster Radio Corporation as a companion to its new Kolster line. The Straus Co. will distribute both Brandes and Kolster sets.

A new feature of these Brandes sets, which are scheduled to be shown in St. Louis later this week, is selector tuning. This enables a listener to set his receiver so that a number of stations can always be tuned in at the peak for clearness and quality reproduction.

The Brandes sets have special power speakers, and are designed for unusual selectivity. They are four-condenser receivers with eight tubes, including five of the 27 type tubes in R F detector and first audio stages and two of the 45 type super power tubes in audio push pull. With a slight change in wiring, the 171A tube may be used in place of the 45 type, if desired.

Two console models have built-in dynamic speakers. A table model is designed for dynamic or magnetic speaker with a special power unit. A dynamic speaker or a floor lamp can be operated by the same switch that turns on the receiver.

The Cee-Bee Supply Co., 2726 Locust boulevard, has been appointed exclusive distributer of the new Freed receivers in this territory. All the Freed models, for which selectivity of a very high order is claimed, were shown to the dealers Wednesday at a luncheon meeting at Hotel Chase, at which the distributing firm was host. The Freed sets and merchandising plans were discussed by N. Patti, factory representative for the Freed-Eisemann company, makers of the receivers; Paul F. Hittinger, sales promotion manager, and George Greenwood of the Freed-Eisemann engineering department.

An eight-tube Freed model, the NR-55, in a walnut veneered console, has a built-in inductor dynamic speaker. It has three 226 tubes, two 227s and push pull audio with 171a tubes in the final stage and a 380 rectifier tube.

An NR-78 model also has an inductor type built-in speaker, with five 227 tubes and two of the new 45 type super tubes in audio push pull. This receiver is said to be exceptionally selective. An NR-79 highboy model also has the 45 type tubes in push pull. In this tall cabinet model rare woods are used for decorative effects. A full dynamic speaker is built in.

A nine-tube neutroydyne model, built on a de luxe reception and appearance basis, has six 227 tubes and two of the super power audio tubes as well as rectifier. This set has a new input circuit and, with its four R. F. stages ahead of detector, is said to be the last word in selectivity.

All Freed models, of course, are for AC operation. All have been tested for months in all parts of the country, an especial effort having been made to find places where reception conditions were the worst.

The new Bremer-Tully receivers will be introduced to dealers at a convention at the Coronado Hotel next Tuesday at 2 p. m. for which the Van Ashe Radio Co., B-T distributer, will be host. R. E. Smiley, vice president of the Bremer-Tully Manufacturing Co., Chicago; Gilman Anderson, assistant sales manager, and W. S. Hoyt, in charge of B.-T. advertising, are to address the convention.

Following presentation of the new B.-T. sets, there will be a banquet and entertainment.

Remote control of a receiver from any place in a home is a feature of one of the new Kolster sets, which will be displayed to dealers at the radio trades show in Chicago the week of June 3. This Kolster model, the K-45, has no knobs or dials on the front panel. Instead, the dial may be seen through a glass window. On the side are automatic tuning buttons in addition to the usual knob for hand tuning. A cable from the set can be led to any part of a house. It ends in a small box, which can be set on the arm of a chair or on a bedside table. On the box are six buttons, marked for as many selected stations, a volume control and an off-and-on switch.

When the set is turned on at the remote control point, a red light glows on the small box. When a station button is pressed, the red light disappears and a green light comes on to show that the set is not ready to play until a small motor automatically completes the tuning. Then the red light again appears to show the set is tuned to the desired station. The colored lights show the set is working perfectly. If no program is heard after the tuning is completed, it indicates that the station is not broadcasting.

While the automatic tuner is turning the dial, the reproducer is short-circuited automatically, so that no intervening stations are heard.

This model has a three-stage audio amplifier, with double push pull, the last stage using two of the 250 super power valves.

Two other new Kolster models have the Kolster master dynamic speaker and 245 power tubes in push pull. Both sets use the new AC screen grid tunes in R F stages, and are said to be very selective and powerful.

Quantity production of the new AC shield grid tube is under way in the Arcturus plant at Newark, N. J. The factory has been making several thousand of these new tubes daily, and this production is being stepped up as a result of contracts with manufacturers to equip their receivers with Arcturus tubes. This tube used with other Arcturus tubes enables a set to bring in a program within seven seconds after being turned on.

PART SEVEN. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 19, 1929. PAGES 1—1A

Opera Cast to Start Work

Principals of Municipal Company Arriving Today and Will Begin Rehearsals Tomorrow —Garden Theater to Present "Spring Is Here" During the Summer, and Announces That Leon Errol, Stella Mayhew and Lulu McConnell Will Be Visiting Stars During the Season.

MUNICIPAL OPERA'S production of "The Love Call" which will have its first presentation in St. Louis when it opens the 1929 season in Forest Park, Monday, June 3, goes into intensive rehearsal tomorrow. Members of the cast are due to reach St. Louis today and will at once go to work under General Stage Director Fred A. Bishop and Musical Director Vittorio Verse. The first rehearsals are to be held in Rubicam Hall, Grand and Potomac, but in the course of the week the company will be transferred to the Dorr & Zeller Building, Waterman and De Baliviere, where the second floor will provide a large rehearsal hall which is to be used throughout the summer.

And while the Municipal Opera Company is getting under way the recently formed Theater Society of St. Louis, an organization similar to the New York Theater Guild, which will present 10 Broadway musical comedy successes at the Garden Theater during the summer, beginning Saturday evening, June 22, and closing on Monday evening, Sept. 2, has just announced that "Spring Is Here," a current New York musical show, has been included in the repertory.

"We have been particularly fortunate in securing "Spring Is Here," said Peter Greig, president of the society, last night "and in offering it to St. Louis theatergoers we are doing just what we said we would do—bring new music and dancing shows to St. Louis for their first presentations outside of New York."

"Spring Is Here" opened on March 11, with Glenn Hunter, "shy boy" of the stage, in the leading role. The book is by Owen Davis, and the music and lyrics were produced by the nimble witted Richard Rogers and Lorenz Hart.

"THE LOVE CALL" was chosen to open the season at the Municipal Opera for the sake of doing honor to Augustus Thomas, native St. Louisan and distinguished dramatist of the American theater. It is based upon Thomas' play "Arizona." From that stirring drama Edward Locke wrote the book of the opera to which Harry B. Smith furnished the lyrics and Sigmund Romberg, among the foremost of American light opera producers, provided the score. Romberg was composer of "Blossom Time" and "The Student Prince" among other successes of recent years.

"The Love Call" differs from many of the operatic works of today in that its characters are real, living people. Thomas found types in Arizona, whither he had gone seeking for local color for his play, and wrote those types into his drama with sure insight and skill—insight and skill as an observer which he had acquired, incidentally, while a reporter for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch 50 years ago.

BEFORE the days when cowboys were movie heroes, and while the Apache Indians were occasionally still occupying the newspaper headlines of the country, Thomas journeyed down into Arizona, armed with a letter from Gen. Nelson A. Miles, then commander-in-chief of the American army, to study the life down there at first hand. Before going to Arizona he stopped to visit his family here in St. Louis and at Jefferson Barracks the army officers schooled him in the ways of frontier posts on the "great American desert," as the Arizona country was then called.

Most of the characters in his play were inspired by individuals whom Thomas met while out in Arizona. Tony, the lazy and love-lorn Mexican who furnishes so much of the humor in the opera, was a servant at one of the ranches at which he was entertained. Bonita, the heroine, was inspired by the daughter of his host when Thomas visited a cow-outfit on the Gila river. Even the scenes are almost authentic reproductions of one of the ranch houses at which he stayed. The plot of the drama was, of course, invented, but many incidents of his visit down there furnished twists in its development.

"Arizona," was one of the most successful dramas of its time and had its production exactly 30 years ago this summer in Chicago. In 1927 the musical version was produced by the Shuberts in conjunction with L. Lawrence Weber at the Majestic Theater in New York. It was one of the distinguished successes of that season, but the massive character of the production rendered it impossible to show it except in cities where long runs were possible. Thus it did not reach St. Louis and the presentation in Forest Park will be the first this city has seen.

The Municipal Theater Association has invited Mr. Thomas to be its guest at the opening performances here.

AUGUSTUS THOMAS' place in the theater of America is unique. As the author of a succession of dramas characteristic of American life he won his way to rank as the foremost dramatist of his time. At the same time his position as a sane thinker and a conservative man won him the respect of the producers to such an extent that when a man was sought for a position in the American theater similar to that of Judge Landis in baseball, Augustus Thomas was chosen and occupied the place with great success until his health forced him to retire.

He came by his love for the theater honestly. In the days of the Civil War, Augustus Thomas' father, with Tom Davey, who was the father of Minnie Maddern Fiske, and Ben DeBar, famous St. Louis actor and manager, organized a dramatic company here and ran the Confederate blockade of the Mississippi River, to open the St. Charles Theater in New Orleans, which was then in the hands of the Northern troops.

Thomas wrote his first full length play for the Marion Place Dramatic Club, an ambitious organization of young North St. Louisans, who produced it. It was called "Alone." The same organization produced the first of Alfred G. Robyn's comic operas. Later Thomas was associated with the old McCullough Club, and finally through years of association with the St. Louis theaters—in the course of which he was continually writing plays—was active in the Dickinson Sketch Club, which launched Della Fox on her way to stardom. Through that organization he made his way into the the-

Highlands Pool Opens Saturday.

Forest Park Highlands looks forward to a week of better amusement park weather than has been granted the city's oldest amusement park these last six weeks, and with due appreciation of the promise will have various vaudeville presentations in the Tokio Gate pagoda and new dance orchestra numbers in the open-air pavilion. Every department of the Highlands is now in full working order, including the new carousel with its modernistic decorations and color schemes. The opening of the out-of-doors swimming pool is now tentatively fixed for next Saturday.

Shubert Again Opens Its Doors For Mae West in "Diamond Lil"

AFTER announcing the end of the season several times the Shubert is coming to life again tonight and will present Mae West in the melodrama of her own writing, "Diamond Lil." This is the first of Miss West's contributions to the drama to be seen in St. Louis. Another opus from her pen, "Sex," was produced in New York in 1927, but a police raid put an end to its activities and Miss West was arrested and sentenced to 10 days in prison for presenting an obscene play. She served her time in the workhouse and paid a fine of $500. Despite her unsavory reputation in connection with "Sex"—or perhaps on account of it—Miss West's "Diamond Lil" proved successful in New York and Chicago. It is said to be within the law.

The story of "Diamond Lil" is of the "woman" of a saloonkeeper, who runs a typical place in the Bowery. Incidentally he finds white slavery profitable. A shrewd member of the police force is assigned to get the legal evidence, and he takes on the role of a Salvation Army captain. And the blonde Lil sets to trap him.

There is a murder, some saloon entertaining, a lot of aroused jealousy, visits from slumming parties and dope fiends, and altogether it is made homelike for the old timers. Lil is the center of interest, either as an entertainer or as a mistress of all she surveys. But the handsome Salvation Army fellow, acted by Curtis Cooksey, comes in the last act in his true colors, those of the New York Police Department, captures the saloonkeeper and his henchmen. And of course the handsome policeman falls for "Diamond Lil."

To Produce Barrie Play.

Philip Barrie's play, "You and I," directed by Donald Scott Blanchard, managing director of the County Theater Guild, will be seen at the Guild Theater in Kirkwood, next Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

The action of the play takes place in Westchester County, New York, at the country estate of Maitland White, a successful business man, who early in life gave up an artistic career to get married. His son, Roderick, is, at the beginning of the play, confronted with the same problem, as he desires to study architecture and to marry Veronica Duane.

At The Play

By Alison Smith

NEW YORK, May 18.

THIS is the time of year when an all but exhausted season pauses to measure up its triumphs and disasters. On looking back, the stretch from October to May seems strewn with more casualties than usual. Moreover, the thin red line of survivors seems thinner than ever, although there have been a few eleventh-hour successes to lengthen it. The bargain basement of Mr. Leblang's clamorous cut rate ticket market had thirty of the current offerings on sale last week and at least a third of that number are preparing to fold their tents and call it a season. Meanwhile, there are the unqualified best-sellers—that rare company which can honestly justify its claim to "standing-room-only." At the moment they number 10; a curiously unrelated score, which, in their violently contrasting qualities, represent a fairly universal appeal to all sorts and conditions of play-goers. A guide to these established favorites would read something like this:

"Journey's End:" R. C. Sherriff's inexpressibly moving study of suspense in the British trenches, compounded of gallantry and heartbreak.

"Street Scene:" The compassionate picture of sordid, pitiful humanity swarming over brownstone steps on a dusty, sweltering street, through which Elmer Rice won the Pulitzer prize.

"Bird in Hand:" John Drinkwater's engaging, leisurely little comedy, which, by attracting its crowds of steadily growing audiences, has proved that bustling Broadway can enjoy the ambling genre drama as well as the less restless Londoner.

"The Perfect Alibi": The only really successful mystery play of the season, whose stirring melodrama was by no means handicapped by its literary presentation by A. A. Milne.

"Let Us Be Gay:" Rachael Crothers' idea of a happy solution to marital problems, staged in a suave and mannerly house party and made entertaining, if not important, by the deft acting of Francine Larrimore.

"Whoopee:" The good old reliable Ziegfeld mixture of glittering girls and familiar comics; the chief comedian in this case being Eddie Cantor, which helps us to understand its popularity.

"The New Moon": old-fashioned melting operetta, redecked with several haunting and romantic melodies and supplied with voices excellent enough to do them justice.

"Follow Thru" and "Hold Everything": two diverting examples of the legs and lyrics school, which will never be remembered after the season closes, but which show every indication of going straight through this one.

And finally and most recently, the newly arrived "Little Show," which, without benefit of the elaborate trappings in the usual revue, has been selling out to the cheering tune of $25,000 a week—a tempo which shows every sign of continuing through the summer.

IT is interesting to note that the two most successful offerings in the group vaguely called "legitimate" are both stark and unrelieved tragedies, "Journey's End" and "Street Scene" have, for this season at least, disposed of the theory that an unhappy ending spells ruin to the box-office.

On the other hand, the leadership of five jovial musicals indicates a strong following on the part of those patrons who believe that "there is enough unhappiness in life without going to the theater to find it."

ABOVE the lobby of the Playhouse there now flutters a banner with the triumphant if laconic legend, "Street Scene—Pulitzer Prize Play." As usual, the announcement of this annual award has brought about a sudden onrush of new patrons, who, in this case, represent coals to Newcastle. There is something pathetic in the hurt surprise of these earnest souls who out of childlike innocence concerning things theatrical read of the award in the morning papers, decide that they will pick up the play that night and are told by an unfeeling box-office clerk that, with any luck, they may secure seats four weeks from the coming Tuesday.

For this grim study by Elmer Rice was what Broadway calls a smash hit from its first tumultuous curtain on the opening night. Something in its combination of swift melodrama and compassionate insight concerning the human comedy mark it as a popular success in spite of its obvious handicaps from the standpoint of the tired business man. Apart from a few unconverted critics, the verdict was unanimous, and overtones from this feeling were carried into discussion of the possible prize winner long before the Pulitzer announcement was made.

IN our memory of these awards, "Street Scene" is the first prize winning play which has not been disputed violently over dinner tables and in dramatic offices with one or more candidates in active competition from the conflicting sides. "Street Scene," as far as we have heard, had no runner-up, and even the champion of the cozy little comedy of uplifting home life seemed to be silenced by its indisputable superiority.

For those who surround such prizes with a strong local feeling, its triumph must be doubly gratifying. With the single exception of "Beyond the Horizon," it, of all these prize winners, comes closest to expression of our native motifs. As the O'Neill play followed the growth of the New England soil, so this study gives the sense and sound and smells of a grimy corner of Manhattan, so like thousands of other corners, that its presentation may be regarded as a keynote to city life. And while the figures in its action are all human and believable, they are, nevertheless, not the dominating factor. In the last analysis, it is the Street's play and it was through the author's uncanny recapture of its midsummer panorama that it finally triumphed.

Cinema Audiences to Get New Form of Screen Entertainment in Large Doses With "The Desert Song," First Show of Its Type, Already Here—Reaction of Film Fans a Question But the Talkies Suffer From Introduction of Names New to Old Audiences — George Arliss to Do Shakspeare.

By NIE.

JUST how the movie public will react to "The Desert Song," the first complete light operetta to be made for the talking screens and on display now at the Grand Central Theater, we shall not attempt to predict. It is an entirely new form of motion picture entertainment which the fans may or may not care for. Certainly, however, the cash customers are going to get many more of the same sort, for music writers have been transported to Hollywood by the trainload and every producing company is hard at work on some sort of musical comedy picture.

It is quite likely that a large part of the patrons of the cinema palaces do not pay $3 or $4 for a seat in the legitimate theaters, so-called, and have not seen "The Desert Song" and the other big musical plays which are now being translated into celluloid. To these persons the necessary artificiality of the musical comedy stage will appear more pronounced. The ordinary run of movie fan takes his entertainment straight. He, or more generally, she, believes very firmly that what is going on on the screen is actually happening and it is only with considerable restraint that the audience refrains from hissing the villainous heavy and cheering the moon-eyed young hero.

Now no one is ever called upon to imagine for a moment that actual life is being paraded in a musical comedy. It is entertainment, purely and simply—or if not always purely, surely simply. If the young hero suddenly needs a sword or a machine gun to fight his way out of a tough spot he may, with considerable rhyme and no reason, reach up into thin air and get one and its all right with musical comedy audiences, so long as they are entertained.

BUT the movie fans, fed for years upon dramatic, if not always consistent, realism, are still to be educated up or down according to how you view it, to the artificial situations of musical shows. This is specially true of "The Desert Song." As a stage offering, set among artificial surroundings it was easy to realize that one was in a theater and seeing things which were never meant to be real. In "The Desert Song," as seen on the screen, the make believe plot is put down amid natural surroundings. There are real deserts and real trees. Everything is real except the story and, as a perfectly natural result, the story suffers. It will be the same with the other screen musical comedies which are to come so that whether or not the picture audiences will take to this new form of amusement remains to be seen.

One very serious matter which the theaters have to consider in the transported musical plays and in all of the talkies in fact, is the introduction of new stars. Players from the dramatic stage, with voices trained in the dramatic art, have become very necessary to the mechanical success of the talkies. Stars who have enjoyed a tremendous reputation in the old theater mean absolutely nothing to the flappers whose ideas of dramatic art are bounded by the over sexed films. They still want their favorites on the screen and the few good talking pictures which have been made, have suffered financially because there was no name in the cast to attract the usual customers. The box offices fall behind—and when business is not going on as usual the theater managers feel that the show game is going to the dogs.

REFERENCE was made above to the fact that movie fans had a hard time withholding their applause and their disapproval during the course of a picture. As a matter of fact when motion picture producers made their films talk they also put a stop to audience silence. Applause is coming back to the picture theater.

For several years, ever since the last of those blood-and-thunder serials was shown, hand-clapping has been conspicuously absent in the film temples the country over. Now the talking films are causing audiences to express their appreciation with their hands.

When Pearl White was running away from "The Clutching Hand," movie-idolizing youngsters used to clap, shriek, howl and whistle. "The Adventures of Kathlyn," "The Exploits of Elaine," "The Yellow Peril," "The Million Dollar Mystery," and Helen Holmes' railroad thrillers used to have the same effect. Then came more logical and sophisticated love stories that appealed to the heart and hand-clapping ended.

The increased realism of the talking film is the reason for the return of audience applause, according to B. P. Schulberg, general manager of West Coast production for Paramount, himself a veteran of early motion picture days.

"In attending previews of some of our recent pictures, we have noticed that the audible productions bring generous audience response. When we showed 'Close Harmony' recently, we found the audience applauding Nancy Carroll's swinging and marking time to the music of the synchronized orchestras.

"It is simply that in talking dramas the audience seems to feel that the players are actually with them; the actors are live beings instead of shadows. Applause is also a personal tribute of an audience for its idol. It has never died out on the stage because the actors are there to hear it. The reality of life has been added to the screen by its audibility."

SHAKSPEARE is getting his innings in the talkies, with Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks preparing to do "The Taming of the Shrew" and John Barrymore seriously considering "Hamlet."

And now a dean of the American and English stage declares he sees in the Avon bard's plays not only great talkie possibilities, but regards them as "an absolute necessity."

George Arliss, who with 300 performances as Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice" approached the record for this role, is in Hollywood again and talking for the screen for the first time in "The Green Goddess," which in 1923 he made as a silent picture.

"As soon as we put dialog into films, we enter the realm of literature," Arliss says, "and once we enter the literature of the stage, we are bound to include Shakspeare. Otherwise we shall have an

I attended a big league baseball game the other day and spent most of the time wondering how it was possible that 20 years ago I threw away $3 hats, knew every player's batting average and followed Mike Donlin and Hans Wagner in open-mouthed adoration along public highways. Baseball went out with me when Joe Jackson "did it for the wife and kiddies." It may be as honest as ever, but every time I go I see the boxes dotted with famous crooked gamblers, and they rarely are interested in anything on the level except eating.

Playhouse Club Had Busy Season

THE Playhouse Club of St. Louis University has just finished one of the busiest and most successful years in the history of the organization. Milton McGovern, director of the organization, is going East in June and will bring back several plays for production next year in the University Auditorium. During the season just closed, four plays were given full stage production: "Trifles," a one-act play by Susan Glaspell; "The Rising of the Moon," a one act play by Lady Augusta Gregory; "The Whole Town's Talking," a three-act farce by John Emerson and Anita Loos, and "The Guest Unheard," a one-act play by Milton McGovern. The last named play received high praise when produced in the intercollegiate dramatic contest conducted at Northwestern University. Eight plays were given public readings. Robert Browning's "Pippa Passes" and "In a Balcony," James M. Barrie's "Rosalind," Shakspeare's "Romeo and Juliet," Oscar Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan," Richard Brinsley Sheridan's "The School for Scandal," Thornton Wilder's "The Angel That Troubled the Waters," and Henry Arthur Jones' "Mrs. Dane's Defense."

The officers of the organization are: The Rev. Bakewell Morrison, S. J., faculty adviser and moderator; Milton McGovern, director; Sylvester Kuntz, president; William Gauvin, vice president; Frieda Marchand, secretary; Eugene Cafferata, treasurer; Ilda Mueller, chairman of entertainment.

The following students took part in one or more of the above listed plays: Catherine Becherer, Florence Betz, Lucinne Deschodt, Florence Ryan, Betty Kasper, Virginia Fuehlen, Audrey Ann Koesterer, Frieda Marchand, Margaret Boland, Mary Joan McDonough, Marie Kennedy, Josephine Mulvihill; Frank Markos, Joseph Orlick, Christian Peper, Joseph Hummert, Laurence Neville, Delbert Morrissey, Sylvester Kuntz, Henry Hughes, George Fague, James McClellan, Cecil Sharp, Donald Gunn, Nicholas Fillo, Robert McCoole, Edward Kramp, Ralph McNamara, Cecil Sharp, Robert Boylan, John Lally and Forrest Murphy.

incomplete repertoire of plays. We must include the classics."

THE only question, he believes, is how long to wait until it is felt that the great audience associated with the motion picture is prepared to accept Shakspearean drama on the screen.

"But in the old days, before my time," he points out, "when theatrical companies went into the small villages and hamlets, Shakspeare was always a strong drawing card and this shows that his plays do have great popular appeal.

"Some of the greatest students of Shakspeare are from what we call, for lack of a better word, the middle classes. When a Shakspearean play is presented in a theater it is always the cheaper seats that are sold out first, showing that the wealthy who patronize the dress circle have no monopoly on appreciation of the classics."

Shakspearean talkies will serve to interest the people in beautiful dialog, Arliss believes. Nor must the movies compromise with the diction of his plays in an attempt to "modernize" the language: "We can transpose, and cut, but we cannot alter Shakspeare," he maintains.

Arliss himself expresses a desire to do Shylock for the talkies, and also to play Iago of "Othello." But his immediate program is to make "Disraeli" and "The Devil," both phenomenal stage successes of his.

Finely preserved and groomed as ever, in spite of his advancing age, Arliss has perhaps the most unusual working hours in Hollywood, where night shifts and sometimes day-into-night hours are in vogue. A strict provision of his contract is that he shall work only from 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.—and no Sunday labors.

Civic Music League Announces 3 Stars For Coming Season

DUSOLINI GIANNINI, dramatic soprano and one of the leading figures of the concert world, and Kreutzberg and Giorgi, dancers, are announced for inclusion in the course of five attractions which the Civic Music League will sponsor at the Odeon next season. Giannini has been to St. Louis several times in the five years of her public life, having been introduced under the auspices of the Morning Choral Club, followed by several concert appearances.

Kreutzberg and Giorgi were introduced to America during the past season in a single dance recital in New York, followed by appearances in Chicago. Kreutzberg and Giorgi express German modernism in their dancing.

Three other major attractions are under consideration, announcement of which will be made as soon as contracts are signed.

FLORENZ AMES, principal comedian of last season and of this, has already reached St. Louis and the other members of the 1929 cast are all to be here tomorrow. They are: Eva Clark, prima donna; Alice MacKenzie, ingenue soprano; Grace Yeager, contralto; Sybylla Bowhan, soubrette; Roy Cropper, tenor; Pierre White, baritone; William Gordon, basso; William J. McCarthy, comedian; Truman Stanley, juvenile.

Immediately after rehearsals for "The Love Call" the cast and chorus will enter upon their work for the succeeding operas of the eleventh season. In the Chorus school's sessions the dances and stage ensembles, together with the choral part of the musical scores have been prepared, while the members of the cast have had their scripts for several weeks preparing their roles. The rehearsals, once a routine is established this week, consist largely in fitting together the various parts already learned so that the operas will move rapidly and smoothly.

Following "The Love Call" in the repertory is "The Student Prince," June 10, one of the Municipal Opera's greatest successes, and after that in turn: "Wildflower," June 17, (first time in the Municipal Theater) "Castles in the Air," June 24 (first time in St. Louis); "The Chocolate Soldier," July 1; "The Bohemian Girl," July 8; "Rose Marie," July 15; "The Prince of Pilsen," July 22; "The Enchantress," July 29, (first time in the Municipal Theater); "The Vagabond King," Aug. 5; "Babes in Toyland," Aug. 12; and "The Golden Dawn," Aug. 19.

IN connection with the Garden Theater plans Greig said last night, following a telephone conversation with Eugene Ford, who will direct the productions at the Garden this summer, and who is now in New York, that "Spring Is Here," would be offered during the week beginning Sunday evening, July 21.

Other productions, most of them new to St. Louis, scheduled for presentation at the Garden during the season are: "Funny Face," "Sally," "Hit the Deck," "Oh Kay," "Peggy Ann," "The Five O'Clock Girl."

Leon Errol will play the leads in "Funny Face," and "Sally," and Stella Mayhew is to appear in her original role in "Hit the Deck." Lulu McConnell will appear in her original role in "Peggy-Ann," and Mary Eaton, best known for her work in "Kid Boots," and "The Five O'Clock Girl," is a possibility for the latter play, if her motion picture contracts are completed in time for her to get away.

Wedding Bells Being Tuned As Summer Brings Fresh Hollywood Romances

BEHIND THE SCREENS

By Helen Hurd

HOLLYWOOD, May 18.

NO longer can the Hollywood maidens be said to be beautiful but dumb. Of course, most of them are beautiful, and some few are still dumb, but the girls who get the plums off of the casting tree have to have something more in their movie make-up than pulchritude. Witness one ex-stenog who won her way to stardom by appearing in as few clothes as possible—and that was at a time when it was an accomplishment to get by with only a dress on. She may have the bluest eyes and the blondest hair and be the life of every party, but somehow or other, when the laurels are handed out today she is not invited, and always misses by just a little, getting into the picture, even though she displays the latest in whoopee accessories and what is not being worn by the protegees of the illuminated strip.

The folks who can really deliver the goods in a substantial way get farthest in the long run. They must be people who can stand publicity, who know what it means to be discouragingly out as well as affluently in, and it is a funny thing to note the many who can bear up nobly while they are getting all the uneven breaks, but flop miserably when things begin to chisel out for them successfully. These are the people, who, although they may have a few box office apples polished to their credit, will never go down in history as pioneers in the field of talking pictures.

All of which is apropos of nothing in particular, except maybe what was running through my head when it dawned on me that I was witnessing the start of a young lady who is very likely to knock the West Coast for a loop and probably the whole country. She is Armida, a little Spanish girl who did a dance in MGM's specialty, "Mexicana." Now there were a dozen or so good-looking girls in the revue, and any one of them, as far as beauty goes, could qualify in any kind of a test, but Armida had something that elicited the unqualified approval of an audience to whom the struggle to locate in the movies was an old story—personality that did not have to resort to physical or mental gyrations, but individualized itself the minute this young lady stepped into the scene. On all sides, people were murmuring, "That kid's got it" and "watch out for her." Which mean that the Spanish Armida is on her way, and unless something happens, which it won't if Armida remains beautiful and not dumb, you will hear a lot of her.

SOMEONE has compiled some figures that tell us that 22 and a half million dollars are spent yearly in salaries to stars and feature players. This is a lot of money, and we wonder what is done with it all. Right here, let it be said that the stars are not so dumb when it comes to salting down for a rainy day. Marion Davies is said to head the list with a little over five million to her credit. A bit below her come the fortunes of Mary and Doug, separately and not collectively, and Chaplin who is a wizard at investments. In the three million class are Norman Talmadge, Ruth Roland and Tom Mix. Colleen Moore and Bebe Daniels have doubled a million by their histrenic accomplishments, and the million class is too crowded to bear enumeration. These movie folks don't as a rule throw their money around in a wild orgy of spending. True, they have homes and cars and clothes, but that is part of their business. Can you imagine a movie star living on a thousand a month? Why the public would think he had gone crazy, and there would be rumors of broken contracts and general hard luck, and he would find himself in the light of public speculation as to his success as an actor.

SPEAKING of business ventures, Lois Moran has opened a pajama shop in Beverly Hills which her mother manages. We remember Lois and the growing girl in "Stella Dallas," but three years have wrought their customary changes, and Lois is a young lady, and a charming and beautiful young lady with a delightful sense of humor. Lois is wealthy, and the pajama shop must be an aside to keep mamma busy, for there are scores of young men who want to bring their ukuleles and sit on Lois' front porch.

TWO years ago, Sue Carol came to Los Angeles to visit a friend whom she had known in school at National Park. She had a grand time going around to all the fraternity dances, and lunching at the Montmarte, dancing at Cocoanut Grove and doing all the things that one does around Hollywood. On the last day of her visit—she had already bought her ticket back to Chicago—a young assistant director at Fox's met her and immediately started going without his meals and writing his name on the telephone scratch-pad with a Mrs. before it to see how it looked. He tried to get Sue to have a test made for pictures, and Sue wouldn't do it, wondering what the folks back in Chicago would think. But then she thought of how much fun it would be to show the girl friends her movie test, and she yielded to his persistent begging. Sue now is a contract player at Fox, and so is the boy—Nick Stuart, and they have just finished their first picture together. Both have had many pictures, but never had they been given the rare fun of making love on the screen. Not that they hadn't done a lot of it off the screen, for they are two of love's stand-bys out here. And love is in the air, what with the spring crop of romances blossoming forth all over the place. Somebody has commented on the fact that the number of spring divorces is comparatively few. Time was when one's marital standby was found to be among those missing in a sort of spring housecleaning affair, but the number of real love matches would indicate that housecleaning is becoming an obsolete fashion, except in cases where one's press agent decides that things need stirring up a little.

Of course, John Gilbert and Ina Claire's sudden marriage was the shock of the town, and no one has been able to figure it out yet—except that the two were in love, and why not get married? Joan Crawford and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. have kept everyone up in the air for a year or more, wondering if so when, and if not, why not? Joan is having a time deciding whether or not to give up her career for a place at the Fairbank's fireside, but she has set all speculative rumors at rest by announcing the date of October 23 when wedding bells will ring. Joan is a former Missouri girl, having left Stephens College in Columbia to go on the New York stage, under the name of Lucille LaSeur. She worked her way through school, and her position at least wasn't an envied one, but she has made good in Hollywood, and those early days have receded into the dim background and charged up to experience.

What will happen to Lupe Velez and Gary Cooper's romance is still to be seen, but indications are that the fiery Lupe will not let anything interrupt her career unless she can figure it to advantage. Then there's Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, and Virginia Valli and Charlie Farrell—all about to take the fatal step into matrimony.

STILL another romance was brought to light when Charles "Buddy" Rogers' father announced the betrothal of his son to June Collyer. The occasion of the engagement was a beautifully appointed party given in the home of Rogers' parents. Seventy-five guests gathered at the supper-dance. Music and games were part of the entertainment. But it wasn't really on the level, this engagement. The party was for a scene of Rogers' all-dialogue vehicle, an adaptation of Booth Tarkington's "Magnolia," which is to be called "A Man Must Fight."

Rogers has the starring role of Tom Rumford, the handsome Southern boy, who becomes engaged to Elvira Jeffrud, played by June Collyer. Henry Walthall is Gen. Rumford, Rogers' father, who surprises the large party at his home with the announcement of the betrothal.

Mary Brian has the feminine lead opposite the star. She is Lucy Jeffrud, Miss Collyer's sister, who finally marries Rogers.

WILL the films of 1949 be billing Gloria Valdez as the "It" girl? They will if Gloria has her way about it. For having seen her famed red-haired cousin, Clara Bow, 3-year-old Gloria has decided that an "It" girl is quite the nicest thing possible.

Gloria is here with her mother, Mrs. Gladys Valdez, from Brooklyn, N. Y., Miss Bow's original home town. They are visiting the Paramount star at her home, in Beverly Hills. Mrs. Valdez is the film star's first cousin. Another of her cousins, William Bow, recently came to Hollywood to break into pictures.

The evening after she arrived here, little Gloria had the greatest treat of her young life when she was allowed to visit the set where Miss Bow is making "Dangerous Curves," her second talking picture. To add to the visitor's delight, scenes were being taken in a huge circus tent, where there were clowns, ponies and even popcorn and lemonade.

MEMORIES of Wallace Reid and his carefree days of stardom on the screen have been recalled to Hollywood by the man who inspired one of Reid's most successful pictures, "The Dancin' Fool."

Hal Skelly, musical comedy and drama favorite, is the man in whom Henry Payson Dowst found inspiration for his story from which the Reid picture was made.

Skelly is now in Hollywood under contract to Paramount, playing his original role in the talking picture version of "Burlesque."

It was while Skelly was appearing in the New York musical show, "Night Boat," that Dowst, author of "The Dancin' Fool," approached him for an interview.

Skelly's story so interested Dowst that the fictional writing resulted. This was the incident in Skelly's life that inspired it.

Skelly, a youngster in Davenport, Ia., lived a happy, carefree life. He loved to dance, he liked to sing, he was interested only in "playing show." His antics were frowned upon at home. His jubilant spirits were permitted to soar to their highest only when he was in the studio owned by his aged grandfather, Davenport's pioneer "society" photographer.

There, amid the accumulated dust and litter of years (his grandfather was resentful of efforts to "clean up the place") the young Skelly danced as hard and sang as loud as he wished.

There in that neglected studio Skelly developed the steps that make him one of the ablest eccentric dancers of the stage today.

The picture of the dancing youth, the careless and world-weary old man, intrigued Dowst. He wrote his story and Paramount later made it into a picture. Bebe Daniels and Tully Marshall had important roles in support of Reid.

Today Wally Reid is gone. But "the dancin' fool," as he was and is, dances on in the person of Skelly.

SIZE OF U. S. MONEY ALARMS POLES

Feared Currency Sent Them From America Would Become Worthless.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, May 18.—News that the United States would soon put out a new issue of paper money has caused worry to thousands of Poles.

It is estimated that more than $400,000 in United States currency is hoarded in this country, most of it being in dollar bills which are sent by thousands in letters from Polish immigrants in America to relatives here. Most of this money is kept in chests, wall niches or similar hiding places. The report spread here was that the old bills would have to be presented to Federal Reserve banks for exchange into new currency and that if the old arrived at the bank "too late" the money would be worthless. American representatives have been kept busy reassuring the money hoarders that Uncle Sam does not repudiate his obligations.

Acts to Stop Hasty Remarriages.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, May 18.—So many Roman Catholics changed their religion for the evident purpose of obtaining a divorce from the Protestant church that the latter body here has introduced a system providing a preliminary separation period of six years. This has shut off at least the cases in which a remarriage was the motive of the divorce suit.

MISSOURI EMPLOYMENT SITUATION IMPROVED

Credited to Resumption of Farm Operations in April.

Resumption of farm operations, curtailed early in the month because of heavy rains, was a contributing factor in improving the industrial employment situation throughout Missouri in April, according to the monthly report of the district office of the Employment Service of the United States Department of Labor.

During the early part of the month there was a perceptible surplus of general labor but now the usual influx of transients is being gradually absorbed by demands for labor on farms, railroad construction, highway, public improvement and other spring projects. Lead and zinc mining registered slight gains, while it is expected several thousand people will find temporary employment harvesting the strawberry crop.

Expected gains were recorded in major industries, including railroads, automobile assembly plants, wholesale houses and mail order concerns, while normal employment for the season prevailed in meat-packing houses, the report says.

Summary by Cities.

A summary of employment conditions in and around the large cities of the state during April follows:

St. Louis—Resumption of the spring building program, with many large public and private projects under way, furnished employment for many building trades and semiskilled workers. Heavy rains in the locality during the first part of April impaired farm operations greatly, but the present need for experienced farm help is active. River work, county and State road work all are drawing heavily on farm labor. Gains in employment were noted in automobile assembly plants, railroad shops and in drug, lumber, boot and shoe, printing, confectionery, iron and steel, and rubber tire plants. Male and female clerical help was in better demand than during the previous three months.

KANSAS CITY.—With the resumption of spring activities in the vicinity, skilled and unskilled labor was much better employed than during the previous months of the year. Many of the usual influx of migratory workers found employment on farm, railroad construction and maintenance, highway and municipal improvement work. North Kansas City industrial district reports normal forces for the season employed. Slight increases in employment are noted in automobile assembly plants, railroads, mail order houses, farm machinery plants and wholesale establishments. There are plenty of building trade men, and a surplus of clerical and factory workers continues.

HANNIBAL.—Normal employment schedules obtain in shoe manufacturing plants, button factories, railroads and other major items and lines. Fair demand for experienced farm labor exists.

In Western Missouri.

ST. JOSEPH.—Labor situation showed material improvement, with unskilled workers in much better demand. Slight gains noted in cereal plants, railroads and other loading lines. Building operations are not engaging all resident craftsmen. Surplus of male and female clerical workers exists.

SPRINGFIELD.—Normal labor conditions prevail here, with an active season for building trades men anticipated. Bonds to the value of $1,500,000 have been voted for the construction and remodeling of public schools. Slight gains noted in the railroad industry. A good call for farm labor.

JOPLIN.—Employment in lead and zinc mines somewhat better than during the previous three months. Industries in Carthage operating at normal.

TWO APARTMENTS ON SKINKER TO COST $2,500,000

OTHER PROMOTIONS IN DE MUN PARK

Concordia Seminary Sold 30 Acres in 1923 for $150,000 — One Acre Now Worth $300,000.

By Berry Moore.

Negotiations are under way with plans for two large apartment buildings for Skinker road sites in De Mun Park, opposite Forest Park, to have an estimated cost of $2,500,000.

The larger is projected for the half block on the west side of Skinker, extending from Rosebury to Northwood avenues. The other is proposed for the southwest corner of Southwood and Skinker. Both are to be 16 stories in height, with roof garden features.

The promoters, whose identities are withheld, are said to be in Chicago in behalf of a loan for the projects. The De Mun Park Realty Co., which owns the ground, will not be interested in the buildings. The ground is held at $1000 a front foot on Skinker road.

The sites are the only ones fronting on Skinker road in De Mun Park not improved with pretentious structures of this type. Excavation has just been begun for a 16-story apartment for the northeast corner of Skinker and Northwood, to be erected by a syndicate represented by the Wilson Realty Co., Inc. The new 10-story Versailles apartment occupies the southwest corner of Skinker and Rosebury. Adjoining on Skinker is the Wiltshire, the first apartment built on Skinker in De Mun Park.

"Is St. Louis real estate profitable? We purchased this tract in 1923 for $5000 an acre. (The tract contains 30 acres, now known as De Mun Park). This one acre is now appraised at more than $300,000." Better Built Homes and Mortgage Co." This is the wording on a sign just placed on the block on the west side of Skinker between Rosebury and Northwood avenues.

College Sold for $5000 An Acre.

De Mun Park, comprising 30 acres, extends from Skinker road on the east to De Mun avenue on the west, and from Southwood avenue on the south to Northwood avenue on the north. It was purchased from the Concordia Seminary in 1923 by the DeMun Park Co. for $5000 an acre, or $150,000, through the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. The grounds of the Concordia Seminary form the west boundary of the property. The tract is now lined with handsome apartment buildings, the Skinker road sites being the only ones remaining unsold on this thoroughfare.

Operations involving apartment buildings in De Mun Park have been features of the real estate market. De Mun Park adjoins on the north, Hi Pointe, which was laid out by the same group. Both overlook Forest Park, which forms the attractive feature of this part of the city.

Plans for Spanish Market.

Plans were recently announced for a large market of the Spanish type of architecture, for a tract on the south side of Clayton road, beginning 50 feet west of Skinker road extending through to the Market street car line. It is projected by the Frank W. Schramm Real Estate Co., which owns the site.

A lofty apartment structure is projected for a site in Clayton by a syndicate headed by L. E. Powell, a real estate agent, who has been a big factor in real estate operations in this section. Mr. Powell declined to disclose the location of the proposed building, which he stated would not be disclosed until financial arrangements had been completed for the erection of the building.

THREE SALES DURING WEEK TOTAL $450,000

These Were Twenty-Third and Olive, Ewing and Locust and Laclede and Euclid Avenue.

Negotiations were concluded during the week for the southeast corner of Twenty-third and Olive streets, the southwest corner of Ewing avenue and Locust street and the southwest corner of Laclede and Euclid avenues, involving a total of about $45,000, as reported by Eugene J. Altheimer, of the firm of Altheimer, Williams & Calmer, Inc., Mercantile Trust Co. and Henry R. Weisels, Inc.

Walter Weinstock yesterday purchased the southeast corner of Twenty-third and Olive streets for a consideration of $215,000. Negotiations were handled by Altheimer, along with Jack Dubinsky. The site has 156 feet on Olive, with a depth on Twenty-third to the east and west alley of this block. It was recently improved with a modern three-story fireproof building, which was included in the purchase. The upper floors of the building comprise 100 hotel rooms, under lease of M. Corn and M. Rothchild. Seven stores occupy the first floor.

Value Increases.

John Keegan, politician and bondsman, erected the building and was the grantor in the transaction. The corner was one of several prominent Olive street sites purchased by him prior to the widening of the thoroughfare. While exact figures are not available, the sale of the Twenty-third street corner has yielded him a profit on his investment. It is noteworthy in that it involved the first large building erected on this thoroughfare since the street was widened.

The handsome new building of the Allen James Chevrolet Co. occupies the southwest corner of Twenty-third and Olive streets. The northwest corner is owned by Mrs. Nellie Trumper who purchased it several years ago as a speculation, before prices on Olive began to soar. It is understood several attractive offers have been declined for this corner.

Washington University building, former dental clinic building, at the southwest corner of Ewing avenue and Locust street, has been purchased by Thomas Dunn for a home for needy boys, as was told exclusively in Friday's Post-Dispatch. Negotiations were handled

COCHRAN ASSAILS PROPOSED LEVY ON SHOES AND HIDES

Quotes St. Louis Manufacturers in Answer to Eastern Claims That Such a Tariff Is Necessary.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Statements of St. Louis shoe manufacturers against a tariff on hides and shoes were filed today by Representative John J. Cochran (Dem.), St. Louis, with the House Ways and Means Committee, the Republican members of which are still holding closed sessions to determine their attitude toward numerous proposed changes in the pending tariff bill. Hides and shoes were left on the free list in the bill as reported to the House.

The St. Louis Congressman took this action as a result of a renewed demand by members from some of the Western states for a duty on hides, on the theory that this would be a measure of farm relief and by Eastern shoe interests for a 25 per cent duty on shoes.

Cochran told the committee he had received numerous communications from shoe manufacturers and from companies engaged in the leather business, and that with very few exceptions all had favored keeping the raw material as well as the finished product on the free list.

$65,000,000 a Year Loss to Farmer.

In one of the letters placed before the committee, J. C. Boyd, president of the Boyd-Welsh Shoe Co., wrote with respect to the proposed duty on hides:

"It would not be fair to expect the farmers and the people at large to pay 50 cents to $2 more per pair for their shoes and at the same time disrupt the entire shoe industry of the country, when only a small percentage of the raw stock is available in the United States. Figures show that we are compelled to import 70 per cent of the kid and goatskins and 40 per cent of the raw calf skins.

"On the basis of the recommended tariff on hides, the farmer would benefit $25,000,000 a year. However, he would be burdened to the extent of $90,000,000 by the added cost of shoes and other leather articles."

Cochran Quotes Authorities.

In his accompanying statement to the committee, Cochran declared that as a representative of the greatest shoe manufacturing center in the world, he was entitled to be heard in opposition to the Massachusetts congressional delegation and the others who have argued for hide and shoe tariffs.

"We are told," he said, "that the committee is now considering a 25 per cent duty on shoes and a duty of 5 cents a pound on hides. If this change is made, a reasonable estimate of the additional cost to the people of the country in the shoe bill is $250,000,000.

"According to reports at hand, the shoe industry, when properly managed, has experienced great prosperity. Last March 10 in a special article the St. Louis Post-Dispatch showed that 38 officers and heirs of officers of the International Shoe Co. had become millionaires since the merger that formed the company 17 years ago. The officials of this company have not asked for a tariff.

"Only two shoe manufacturers in St. Louis have urged me to support a duty on shoes, and one of these, the Rice-O'Neill Shoe Co., while asking for a duty on shoes, seeks to keep the raw material on the free list. The other, the St. Louis Shoe Manufacturing Co., asks for a duty on shoes, but does not express itself on hides and leather. All other concerns seem to be satisfied with existing conditions.

Opposition to Shoe Tariff.

"The Massachusetts delegation has argued that the women's shoe industry is suffering. It stated to the committee that St. Louis manufactured men's shoes, leaving the impression that no women's shoes were made there.

"The statistics of the Department of Commerce alone answer this argument, but to make sure conditions had not changed I wired John A. Bush, president of the Brown Shoe Co., for information, and he has replied that Missouri and Illinois, comprising the St. Louis shoe district, make more women's than men's shoes.

"Leather and belting men and retail shoe dealers almost unanimously write me in opposition to a tariff on hides and shoes.

"Those favoring the tariff on shoes argue that Czecho-Slovakia is sending to this country women's shoes manufactured by cheap labor. The Tariff Commission's statistics show 344,350,724 pairs of boots and shoes were manufactured in this country in 1928. The imports were: Men's and boys, 390,816 pairs; women's and misses', 2,033,125 pairs; children's, 202,912 pairs.

"Massachusetts' manufacturers maintain the first quarter of the present year shows a decided increase in imports. What if it does? Even if 1,000,000 or 2,000,000 pairs a month were received, it would be but a small per cent of the 344,350,724 pairs manufactured in the United States.

"I am yet to be convinced it would be advisable either for the protection of the manufacturer or labor to place a duty on shoes, hides or leather, and will continue to oppose such a duty.

Billion Dollar Increase.

"If the present tariff bill becomes a law, as reported to the House, it will increase the toll to the American public by over one billion dollars. It is indefensible.

A tariff on lumber and shingles is levied, the sugar increase amounts to over $200,000,000 while provisions are made to add to the profits of the chemical and steel trusts. The tariff on surgical instruments has been raised and an additional cost is placed on chemicals, acids, etc., which go into the making of prescriptions. The tariff on building material will raise the cost not only of home construction but also the making of roads.

"The President suggested limited changes to benefit the farmer. The framers of the bill have given the farmer 10 per cent and industrial interests 90 per cent of the increases. For every dollar's worth of benefit the farmer gets, it will cost him about $5 for necessaries he will be required to buy in the protected market.

"The pending bill will either be rewritten in the Senate or the American public will be so aroused that, in my opinion, it will never be approved by President Hoover."

HAWES ASSAILS U. S. FLOOD CONTROL PLAN IN MISSOURI

"Bureaucracy Running Wild" in Project, He Asserts—Best Possible Program, Jadwin Says.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—An acrimonious controversy over an important phase of the $325,000,000 Mississippi River flood control project was brought into the open today by a statement from Senator Harry B. Hawes (Dem.) of Missouri and a reply which the Post-Dispatch obtained from Major General Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers, in charge of the project.

The difficulty has been brought to the attention of President Hoover in a letter signed by all the members of the Missouri delegation in Congress asking him to delay the letting of contracts for the construction of the Birds Point-New Madrid set-back levee, for which bids will be opened next Wednesday.

In his statement, Hawes charged that in the administration of the 1928 flood control act, bureaucracy was "running wild."

"Both common justice and humane considerations," he declared, "are to be put aside to gratify the pride of personal opinion."

Best Program, Jadwin Says.

Jadwin, in reply, said that the "Federal program will give Southeast Missouri by far the greatest protection it has ever had and far greater protection than any other plan that has at this time been suggested." This was a slap at Hawes' apparent espousal of the Mississippi River Commission's proposal that higher levees be built in Southeast Missouri. The so-called Jadwin plan calls for the flooding of parts of Mississippi and New Madrid Counties whenever the Mississippi waters rise as high as 55 feet at Cairo.

The controversy rages over the flowage rights in the two Southeastern Missouri counties. Hawes insists that under Jadwin's administration of the flood contro act, the rights of landowners in this section are being disregarded. Jadwin retorts that "under the adopted project, the United States bears all the expense of flood control, including just compensation for any right in lands from which protection is to be removed."

Predicts Court Action.

"I have been reliably informed," Hawes said, "that when the chief of engineers proceeds with his plan of awarding contracts for the construction of the setback levee from Bird's Point to New Madrid, residents of that area, unable to protect themselves otherwise, will very properly resort to court injunction, thus at the outset throwing the whole plan for the entire alluvial valley into litigation.

"A small principality is involved —200 square miles of the State of Missouri, embracing 135,000 acres of land, containing 175 miles of highways, 97 miles of drainage canals, 2500 persons in their homes, many miles of railroads and schools and churches.

"The fair value of the property has been estimated at between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000.

"In the report of the Board of Review to the president, it is estimated that the Government would have to pay approximately $2,350,000 for the flowage rights after the setback levee has been built and the engineers were ready to cut the main levee.

Says U. S. Offer Is Low.

"Such an amount is less than the total which the people in this area have already spent for their own protection, and less than one-half of the assessed valuation for taxes.

"This gives a fair idea of what the Government, under the engineers' plan, proposes to do.

"The very fact that the Government has placed these 135,000 acres in what will unquestionably be flooded territory has made it impossible for property owners to borrow money on these properties even from the Federal Land Bank. They can thus neither protect their equities nor finance their crops, and they cannot expect to improve their homes or plant their crops with this sword of the army hanging over them.

Ready to Let Contracts.

"Despite the clear intent of Congress, the chief of army engineers, designated to carry out the flood control program, has sent his engineers to Missouri to ask what the residents of this vast area to be flooded would accept for flowage rights.

"Without proceeding either to purchase such properties or to condemn them, the chief army engineers and the head of the Mississippi River Commission have advertised for bids, and on May 22, propose to let contracts for the building of a set-back levee, the only conceivable purpose of which is to permit the flooding of 200 square miles of Missouri territory.

"What Missouri citizens are interested in is that the time honored constitutional principle of taking private property for public use is being grossly violated against the plain intent of Congress and the dictates of law."

Jadwin Says U. S. Will Pay.

To this statement Jadwin replied that the Federal Government was not seeking to acquire rights over land without payment. He pointed out that the law specifically provided that wherever easements, flowage rights or rights-of-way were acquired, the property owners were to be compensated.

The issue between Hawes and Jadwin actually is whether the Federal Government shall acquire flowage rights through Southeast Missouri before or after the setback levee is constructed. Hawes believes the rights should be acquired before construction. Jadwin, by calling for bids on the levee, indicated that such rights might be acquired afterward. The law definitely provides that the Secretary of War may acquire the rights over the land by normal purchase if the prices asked are reasonable. If in the judgment of the Secretary, the prices are unreasonable, he is directed by the flood control act to institute condemnation proceedings in the Federal courts.

To Protect All But Small Strip.

"Under the adopted flood control project," Jadwin said, "protection against flood waters of the Mississippi River for all time is to be constructed for the lands in southeast Missouri, with the exception of a small strip of land, over half already subject to back water. For this strip of land, the United States is to pay damages.

"During the last great flood, a crevasse overflowed the greater part of this strip as well as other lands adjacent to it, and the local people had to bear their losses. Without the adopted plan or with any other proposed, Southeast Missouri would be left in jeopardy, and under the necessity of bearing all flood losses. Under the adopted project, the United States bears all expenses of flood control, including just compensation for any rights in land from which, protection is to be removed.

"The United States in its generosity has by the adopted project assumed all the construction costs of repairing and rehabilitating the protection works along the Little River drainage canal, as well as all the cost of strengthening the main river levees south of Cape Girardeau. The Federal program will give Southeast Missouri the greatest protection that it has ever had and far gre

MURRAY'S STAGE DANCING.
We have reduced the price on commete training for the summer. Now $80 off. Last week Rose and Murray, Granada Theater, taught by Murray. Visit our studio every Wednesday night and see our public dance. A select company assembles and we prove it. If you see dancing done in any other St. Louis dancing school as good as ours, it, then we'll teach you free. That's fair enough? When we finish a pupil they are dancers because they have a property dancing and we put them in the theaters where they get real money for dancing. It's proven in the fact that acts and couples playing the Fox Grand Opera House and Missouri Theaters for the last six weeks received recognition as first-class performers. Trained by Murray. Class lessons for beginners in stage dancing, waltz and wing, soft shoe, eccentric, acrobatic and tap dancing in class, 50 cents the lesson hour and adult classes are conducted in toe, character, acrobatic, Spanish and classic dancing; latest ballroom as taught by Grace Caldwell; expression and talkie department by Miss Parmenter. Our instructors are professional dancers. Studio 3, Odeon Bldg. JEfferson 0700.

C. D. ROGERS, Salesmanager.

SALES MANAGER.
Several men over 30 and under 50 who have made MONEY and find it necessary to get into some other line of business. Qualifications necessary to get into our marketing organization, you must be a salesman, not an order taker; you must own a fair looking car and have unquestionable references. That is your side. Our side: We sell a product that fully half of your prospects will tell you is the best they ever saw, and we pay your commission in full a few days after you secure the order, no commission on order about $30. Good men average more than an order per day and we do not allow you time to collect any front money. We will consider only men who have BUSINESS WRITTEN ALL OVER THEM. Our compensation plan is liberal and we have the second largest of its kind in the country, and we will be the leader as soon as we can develop the additional men necessary to operate the offices now contemplated. We promote our men as soon as they show us that they have executive ability. Our business is easy to learn; a little common sense is all that is necessary. We have just installed branches in Memphis and Little Rock. The manager of our Memphis office started to sell our system on Oct. 7, 1928, with no previous experience in our line and we wish we had 20 more like him. The district manager of our company will interview applicants on May 23, 24, 27, in our St. Louis office. If you have the qualifications necessary to step into this fast company, write us all about yourself. Box D-15, Post-Dispatch.

Three Men Only

We will consider the applications of 3 men of ability who are sincere in their desire to achieve immediate and permanent success; the field is non-competitive and very profitable. If you are a hard worker and between the ages of 30 and 50, write us fully about yourself, in strict confidence, giving telephone number for appointment if selected. Box O-227, P.-D.

A MENTALLY BIG MAN

A manufacturer of highest credit rating and operating nationally, has an opening for a man of successful selling experience. Prefer one who has met and sold chief executives, although in the final analysis personality will be the determining factor.

We are opening a new line in which experience in selling executives would be of great value. This is not stocks, bonds, real estate, check writers, club memberships, insurance or bookkeeping machines.

We are not so much interested in a salesman as we are in a man of potential executive ability—one who can learn our business and then qualify to direct others. For a real salesman there is an opportunity for quick promotion and a brilliant future.

Do not investigate unless you feel confident that your services are worth $7500 per year or more.

An executive of our Company will grant you a personal interview in St. Louis if you are able to interest us with a resume of your qualifications. Give age, education and complete selling experience for the past three years.

WHY the HEIRS of JEROME WILLS MUST "EARN" their INHERITANCE

Being elected Judge did not change his habits . . . He could still be seen on the streets of Vandalia wearing his dilapidated clothes and trundling his cart.

The Strange Testament of a Small Town Eccentric Which Carries on the Spectacular Philosophy of Frugality He Practiced All His Life.

By JULIUS KLYMAN
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

VANDALIA, Illinois.

JEROME WILLS' first memorable exhibition of frugality came after his graduation from a law school at Chicago. He returned to Vandalia by foot. The distance is 200 miles when one travels in a bee-line, as Jerome Wills did. And this journey—undertaken for the purpose of saving railroad fare, of course—was of a piece with his whole journey through life. A citizen whose habits were almost spectacular in their "tightness," he charged every stamp he bought, on his ledger. He marked down in a minute handwriting the purchase of every 5-cent drink. At the age of 65, when his fortune reached close to $100,000, he would trundle his two-wheeled cart through Vandalia's streets and gather refuse for his hogs.

Jerome Wills died in August, 1926, a few months after his wife. A year before his death he spent long evenings over his law books. At the end of three months' intensive labor he had fashioned a will that suited him.

When paralysis laid him low and took away his life, they filed his will in the County Court. They found the testament a faithful reflection of its author; an essay in frugality; a hard and parsimonious document.

Jerome Wills' four children—the oldest was 27, the youngest 17—discovered their father had written in his testament:

"Believing it will be to the welfare and happiness of those nearest and dearest to me, and that everyone owes it as a duty to society not only to earn a livelihood while he is in his prime, but to accumulate something for old age and emergencies, I, J. G. Wills, of Vandalia, Fayette County, Illinois, make and publish, subject to all superior statutory provisions, this, my last will and testament."

THIS suggested that he had unusual directions to impart. He had. They came in clause 4, which read:

"4th. It is my will that all my estate shall eventually be divided equally among my four children, and hope it may be soon after the youngest reaches 21 years of age. But it is desirable that there should first be some assurance that they will be competent to take care of it. Accordingly, each of my children may receive his or her portion on arriving at 40 years of age, or any time thereafter, only provided it shall first be clearly proved to the court, that he or she is entirely out of debt, including anything owing to my estate, and is well worth $1000 from earnings (and not from gift or inheritance), above household goods and tools and instruments of trade; and, in such an accounting, the possession or ownership in the family of an automobile vehicle shall be considered, not an asset, but a liability of $1000, and continuing for one year after disposing of it."

There it was. Not a dime of the estate for one of his children until he or she was 40. Not a cent of interest from their quarter-shares. Only the far-off promise of reward, provided that each had been successful or fortunate enough to save $1000 from his own earnings by the time the 40-year mark was reached.

What if they wished to embark in some lucrative enterprise? Well, they'd have to find the money some place else. And they'd better be cautious, they'd better live carefully and save well, take no risks, or they'd never get the principal of their inheritance.

Only the youngest child, Sarah Elizabeth, would benefit. She might have money for her education. The others, too, might have funds for study until they reached the age of 30 years. Jerome Wills believed mightily in education and always had encouraged his children in it.

His oldest son, Charles, had studied dentistry at St. Louis University; his second son, Walter, could have gone to college had he wished to; Jerome Wills had made his eldest daughter return to high school after she was married and had become the mother of two babies.

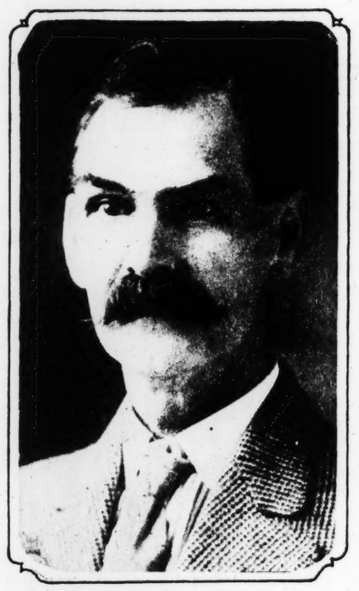
THIS business of waiting many years for what you considered your just inheritance was not pleasant. Dr. Charles J. Wills is 29, a young man practicing his profession in Vandalia. Walter Wills is 25. He manages the grocery store his parents left behind—works in it on a salary, just as any outsider would. The oldest daughter is Mrs. Ruby Southwell. She is 27 and has three children. Her husband is not well and at the present is in a hospital. Sarah Elizabeth is the youngest of the children. She is 19 and attends Illinois College at Jacksonville, Illinois.

Well, the Wills children did not propose to sit idly by and wait for the calendar to turn over until each had come to the prescribed age. They set out and engaged attorneys, and these attorneys got ready for the battle. The legal gentlemen examined the testament, they probed into its clauses, looked into it for reversible errors.

Then they filed their brief in Circuit Court and asked that the will be "construed" by the bench. Just what did it mean? How far was it good, would it bear up under judicial examination?

So the Circuit Court considered the document. And the Circuit Court upheld it.

The heirs and their attorneys were disappointed, but they kept at it. They filed an appeal from the lower court's ruling and carried their plaint to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois. And so it was that the high court of the State recently came to consider one of the strangest documents that has ever appeared before that tribunal. The result of this consideration was a decision handed down a few days ago in which the will was upheld in the main, but which granted the heirs periodical sums of money in the form of interest on their inheritance.



Jerome Wills.

It is likely that only a man different from his fellow men in life would have left a testament so different from other men in death. What were Jerome Wills' practices on earth? What were his opinions, what was his manner of living, what, if any, were his enjoyments?

True, he did say in the last and fourteenth clause of his will: "I have enjoyed life. That happiness, together with my knowledge and experience, I wish I could transmit to my posterity as my most prized possessions."

Perhaps he did enjoy life. But hardly according to the standards of enjoyment set by most men.

Jerome Wills was born a short distance from the town of Vandalia. He got through the elementary and preparatory schools of the county, partly by his own efforts, partly through his father's aid. Then he studied law in Chicago and, as already noted, came home on foot.

Once in Vandalia, he set himself up as an attorney, and, in the opinion of his fellow members at the bar, was an able barrister. Always the student, he excelled in the technicalities. He was a successful lawyer, and he made a profit of the law, as he was destined to make of everything in life. But his profession did not bring in the dollars as quickly as he thought it should.

He deserted the law and bought a farm a short distance from Vandalia. There he and the young woman he had married set about accumulating a fortune. As those who knew him expected, his farm became profitable. But the returns were still not large enough to satisfy Jerome Wills.

He sold his farm, and about 25 years ago he and his family returned to Vandalia. He bought property. Business property, residential property. He opened a grocery store. And just as he had in the years before, he buckled down to the job so assiduously that life became for him a great accounting book.

"We started to work when we were children," Walter Wills told me. "As soon as we were able to work my father gave us jobs. He paid us what he thought we were worth. Some of that money was to go in the bank, some of it we could spend as we cared to. We were allowed a small amount each year for wearing apparel, and we could not exceed that amount.

"My father was a very positive man. When you worked for him, you worked the way he wanted you to. I remember that my brother found it easier to shovel from the left side. He was not allowed to work that way. It was easier for father to shovel from the right side, so he thought that was the only way to do it.

"My father never smoked, he never drank. He wouldn't let my brother and me smoke. We both do now. And my sisters were not allowed to bob their hair. They've bobbed it now, too. You saw what he thought of automobiles in his will. Well, none of us owns a car. My father believed that machines were liabilities, that they were bad things to have. He felt that way about most modern things. He thought the world was going to rack and ruin. He wouldn't have electric lights in his house. I had to have this place wired after his death. He thought oil lamps were good enough."

Jerome Wills' children were not the only ones who did not always satisfy his standards of labor. He made all other workers proceed in the manner he wanted, his son told me.

But he did most of the repairs on the various houses he owned himself. He owned more than 35 properties in Vandalia, more than any one other man in town.

Dressed in shabby overalls, bits of rope substituting for missing suspender straps, a frayed shirt upon his back, a shapeless felt hat upon his head, he would load his two-wheeled cart with bricks and shingles, with nails and with his tools, and, pushing it before him, trudge through the streets to some house of his needing repair. Once a woman, not knowing this tatterdemalion for one of the town's wealthiest citizens, and believing him to be some itinerant carpenter, hailed him and asked that he do some small repair for her. He paused momentarily, told her that he had too much work of his own to do, and went upon his way.

FOR every house he owned he kept complete statistics. If he used so many nails in replacing a shingle, he charged those nails and his time to that house. At the year's end he could examine his books and know what every house had cost him, what profit it had brought.

If his grocery store had sent its bill to some customer, and upon his examination of the account he discovered this customer had been charged 3 cents too little, he set out and collected that small due. But if the bill were 3 cents too much he was quite as meticulous. The customer got back the pennies coming to him.

In 1916 he was elected County Judge of Fayette County.

His promotion to the dignity of judgeship changed him not a whit. Judge Wills graced the bench when duty called, but at such times as the court did not require his attention he wheeled his pushcart as of old. Nor did his judicial post in any way lead to sartorial progress. When called to one of his houses to mend a porch, the overalls, the cord suspenders, the frayed shirt and the battered hat were still his attire.

He ran his court in the same meticulous manner he ran his business. It is told how an attorney came before him and asked him to approve the recording of a deed. There was no receipt for the recording fee of 50 cents, the attorney explained, because after the fee had been paid the recording clerk had died, and no receipt had ever been issued.

Judge Wills refused to approve the record without the receipt. And the attorney did not get it approved until another Judge took office in 1919.

JEROME WILLS carried his frugality to his dinner table. The family's fruits and vegetables, the story goes, were not the choice bits from the Wills grocery store. They were such edibles as had been bruised to an extent that they were no longer saleable. And there is the tale of the potato that had been peeled with several of its brothers, and how Jerome Wills had considered it one more than was necessary for the evening meal. So this vegetable was put in water and, being forgotten for the space of perhaps a week by the preparer of the Wills meals, "had grown a beard"—mildew had covered it. But Jerome Wills refused to have it thrown out. He ordered it wiped clean with a cloth and cut up and fried, explaining that, in his opinion, the heat would destroy any germs that might exist upon the vegetable.

Jerome Wills had a hobby. It was his study of meteorology, and his local reputation as a weather forecaster was so potent that picknickers sought his advice before venturing on their way. He had a good-sized library, each book carefully dressed in the paper cover its owner had wrapped about it. The books, still standing on their shelves in his former home, bear the names of Vergil, Plutarch, Sophocles and Aeschylus, Schiller, Goethe, Wordsworth and Balzac. They still stand there, and in a storeroom nearby you will find an old metal mail box, the kind ruralists place upon a post, and an ancient tray for carrying milk bottles. Their possessor was not one to throw things away, even if he might never need them again.

YES, Jerome Wills was a student—and very much a student of the law. Messrs. Matheny and Walker and Brown and Burnside, all of Vandalia, all of them battling for the Wills children, are quite willing to admit it. It was no easy task for these barristers to get around Mr. Wills' will. They studied it and studied it. And when these lawyers got the testament before the Supreme Court of Illinois, the high judges found the attorneys had made, among others, these points:

That the will violated the rule against perpetuities; that the accumulation of income is in violation of a statute to that effect.

Germany's Queen of Spies Goes Mad

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS.

THE almost incredible life of an incredible woman closes in madness. "Mademoiselle Doktor" has been confined in an insane asylum in Germany for some years, it was learned recently. Her mind is entirely unbalanced, due to the use of cocaine in prodigious quantities. Many persons had long believed her dead.

In a word, "Mademoiselle Doktor" was the foremost woman in the German espionage system. She was in charge of Germany's largest spy bureau, the one at Antwerp. Those at Geneva and Barcelona were generally regarded as being of less importance.

Legends grew up about her. It was said that she exerted hypnotic power, that her eyes held an extraordinary psychic fascination. It was known that she had magnificently installed herself in the Chateau de Merxens, on the outskirts of Antwerp, directing the operations of spies over all of Northern France.

She herself played perfectly safe, unlike so many of her agents, among them Mata Hari, the Dutch-Colonial danseuse. It was whispered that she showed no mercy to agents who were treacherous or who failed on mission. If they came back to Antwerp she herself shot them down.

Finally she became almost a myth. Even her name was not known—never has been known. She was called the "Blonde Lady of Antwerp," "Mademoiselle Doktor," "Frau Captain Heinrichson," "Princess Jeanne," "Madame Muller" and "Miss Lirrie."

ORIGINALLY she was a queen of the Berlin underworld, not unusually beautiful, but possessing a decided power over men. Having gotten into the good graces of a number of very high German officials, she was appointed a secret police agent and helped to clear up many big crimes. The woman had a flair for spying and intrigue, as well as a capacity to finish every job given her. Another of her assets was a remarkable power of reading men's thoughts. It was difficult—impossible—to gaze into those searching eyes and successfully prevaricate. When the war came along the police recommended her to the military authorities as an exceptionally capable person in her special line of work, and so when Belgium was occupied she was given charge of a small spying bureau that she built up to be the biggest thing of its kind.

The "Blonde Lady" quickly became notorious for her savagery, for ruthlessly crushing the spies who betrayed her. Ninety-nine of every hundred spies used by the Germans during the war were poor jobless neutrals—Dutch, Swiss, Spaniards and South Americans mostly—who were picked up by the German police for vagabondage in German and Belgian cities.

IF they seemed to possess a certain intelligence and cunning they were given a good meal, as a sort of taste of the gilded life offered them, and then shipped to the Antwerp espionage bureau. The former underworld queen quickly picked out the ones she wanted, and from that moment they were doomed, for few survived.

Once past her "tests," the poor devils were given an intensive course of training in the special knowledge that a spy requires, furnished with a fake passport and several hundred dollars and given a mission in France. The "Blonde Lady" personally gave each one a word of advice before he started.

"You are a toiler capable of any toil," she told Constantin Coudoyannis, a Greek, who was arrested in France and shot on May 26, 1916. "You are educated and speak several languages. This is all excellent but not sufficient. You must be supple, clever, skillful, obedient, courageous and audacious. Do you have all these qualities? I am a physiognomist and I believe that you have. In the end you will love your new profession passionately. In fact, if you like adventure and are not too scrupulous, you will have an interesting life. Speaking for myself, I would not give my situation for any throne in Europe. I have every satisfaction that I can desire, and I treat with very high personages as an equal. Still another recommendation: Be sober, chaste and rise early. Frequent pleasure resorts if you wish, but do not become involved in any intrigue. Every country has male and female counter-espionage agents."

"Mademoiselle Doktor" or the "Blonde Lady of Antwerp."

The case of Coudoyannis, who gave the French police a complete description of the "Blonde Lady" and her methods, revealed her thoroughness.

INSTEAD of taking her advice, he had become involved in an intrigue with a French actress in Paris—it was the actress who eventually tipped off the police about his suspicious actions—and the female spy chief immediately heard of it. It developed that the lowest rank of German spies were watched by a higher rank, who were in turn watched by others. Antwerp immediately sent him orders to break off this flirtation. He delayed, and that was the end of him.

Many of these hastily-made spies tried to get on the allied payroll, too, but they didn't live long to enjoy their two salaries.

The "Blonde Lady" invariably discovered their treachery through her spy inspection service, and from that day they were done for. If they had the courage to return to Antwerp she personally shot them down in her own offices or turned them over to the German authorities for execution. In other cases she merely tipped off the French or English counter-espionage that such and such an agent was really a German spy, and sent them the necessary proof. On other occasions, she had the traitors assassinated wherever they happened to be.

The "Blonde Lady" was just as severe in her treatment of Germans who displeased her, and Charles Lucieto, one of the most successful French spies, tells this story about her.

"One day Mademoiselle Doktor called in Lieutenant-Colonel Count von T., an artillery expert, who was attached to her service for reading reports," M. Lucieto declares. "She laid before him the plans for the new French and British tanks that one of her agents had sent in. At that time the tanks were a closely-guarded secret.

"'Is it worth passing on to the Great General Staff?' she demanded.

"The Count read the report carefully and then shrugged his shoulders.

"'All bosh,' he grunted. 'If the allies have built such a machine it is only a laboratory experiment. How could such a heavily-armored car move and maneuver itself over ground filled with barbed wire and deeply cut up by bombardments?'

"'It does sound incredible,' Mademoiselle Doktor replied, 'but this information comes from a source that is particularly reliable.'

"'I am afraid your agent has been tricked,' the Count kept on insisting.

"On his advice, therefore, she did not forward this report to the General Staff, but a few weeks later the tanks actually appeared in action and the astonished German troops fled in terror.

"The General Staff sarcastically asked Mademoiselle Doktor if she had never heard of the tanks from her spies.

"Furious over his stupidity, she sent the Count a copy of this letter. On the margin of the note she wrote: 'There is only one thing for you to do.' The Count shot himself that night."

ONE of the strangest angles of this story is that many spies, particularly sentimental Latins, became so enamored of this fatal woman, who was far from beautiful, that they died happily at the hands of a French firing squad with her name on their lips.

There was a handsome Argentine of Italian origin named Del Past. Asked if he had anything to say on the morning he was to be shot, he simply smiled and replied: "The judgment was just, but I would do it all over again for her." He seemed to think the lady cared, but he was one of hundreds—not of names and personalities, but of numbers. The truth was that she actually detested all men.

After the war the monotony of peace wore on "Mademoiselle Doktor," and she began to take cocaine. In fact, she was suspected of being a habitue of the drug when she was at Antwerp.

KANSAS CITY Lawyer Divorced Because He Wouldn't Go Out at Nights — But Many Other Women Have Made Him Offers Since Then.

KANSAS CITY, Missouri.

THERE'S at least one man in Kansas City who is enjoying large quantities of solid comfort these days. This man, Jackson C. Stanton, a lawyer, comes home at night, takes off his shoes and his coat, puts on his house slippers, picks up the newspaper or a book, lights his pipe and there is nothing but a long, peaceful evening ahead of him.

It was for just this that Stanton was divorced a short time ago. For these same peaceful evenings, for that pipe, for that habit of sitting with a newspaper or listening to the radio after dinner was over. His wife couldn't endure it. She told the Judge so and was given a divorce on the ground of incompatibility.

In part Mrs. Stanton's divorce petition cites that her husband "failed, neglected and refused to take her to places of amusement, but instead sat at home, smoked his pipe and listened to the radio; that the difference in the ages of plaintiff and defendant is such that they do not and cannot see things from a common point of view."

No alimony was asked, and Stanton admitted all the charges his wife brought. He did not contest the suit and prior to the court action gave his wife a considerable sum of money in settlement of all claims.

Mrs. Stanton, who is 23 years old and attractive in appearance, frankly told Judge Willard Hall that she likes to go places and see people and do things. Further, she feels that no woman does justice to herself who sits at home after the manner of the popular songs of 20 years ago, darning her husband's socks and sewing buttons on his shirts. It was maddening, she said, to have a husband like that. Jazz orchestras and theaters meant nothing in his life. Judge Hall was sympathetic. He not only gave her the divorce but obligingly restored her maiden name of Esther B. Forrester. And, said Miss Forrester when the decree was granted, she'd put up with it a lot longer than most women would.

But that was only her opinion. It soon developed that there were large numbers of women right here in Kansas City who disagreed with her.

Mrs. Esther Forrester, formerly Mrs. J. C. Stanton.

THE night that the newspapers announced the divorce Stanton came home looking forward to the peace and quiet he had held out for. The telephone rang. An eager feminine voice was on the wire. There followed a conversation Stanton reports as going something like this:

Eager Feminine Voice: Is this Mr. Stanton?

Stanton: Yes.

Eager Feminine Voice: Didn't I see in the paper where you were divorced today because your wife wanted you to run around with her at night?

Stanton: Perhaps you did. But who is this?

E. F. V.: Oh, my name doesn't matter—you don't know me. But was the story in the newspaper correct?

Stanton: Yes, I'm afraid it was. But what is it you want?

E. F. V.: Let me ask you something, Mr. Stanton. Would you consider marrying again?

Stanton: I don't understand you.

E. F. V.: Well, I'm a widow, 35 years old, not bad looking, my friends say, and my late husband left me a little property. Now, would you consider——

A great light dawned on Stanton and he hung up the receiver as the eager feminine voice trailed off in the intimation of a proposal. That evening Stanton had to listen, more or less, to seven other feminine voices, all with a somewhat similar message. And the next morning, before he could leave the house, three other women called. Stanton was amazed at this expression of what was apparently a tender regard for such a home-loving person as himself.

But surprise soon gave way to embarrassment and annoyance as the calls persisted throughout the day. There were at least a half-dozen, and letters, too.

"Tobacco," said one, ecstatically. "I just love tobacco, the smell of it. I don't care how old or smelly your pipe may be—but to see you sitting there beside me with your radio going"——

Stanton began to be disturbed by it all. "Honestly," he explained, "some of them seemed so sincere, quite above-board, you know—name and address where I could call at my own convenience. And you'd be surprised at some of the addresses. Right out in the most fashionable parts of Kansas City. But I wouldn't violate any confidences, of course. And I don't want this matter to become ridiculous. I quite believe in a home, the pipe and the radio, with a wife for company. I hope to find such a wife again. I really am sincere and had no idea what an obstreperous proposition it is to find such a wife these days. There was the disparity of our ages to consider, of course. My wife was 23 and I am 44."

When Stanton laughingly disclosed to reporters that he had received his thirty-third proposal the former Mrs. Stanton had something to say. For one thing, she explained that she is going to enter a convent in Minnesota. She is through with men.

J. C. Stanton.

"Give me a place where I won't have to see his picture in the newspapers over a statement of the number of women who have telephoned him," she said to an interviewer, at the home of her sister here. "So women like that kind of husband, do they! Well, they can have him.

"HE COMPLAINED because I liked to go places and see things, did he?" Miss Forrester continued. "Well, I'll say I did. I never went out of the house after sunset without him. Was I the home-loving wife? I had to be!

"Did he tell about those good steaks and wonderful pies I cooked for him? Maybe he wasn't hungry when he began rushing into print. And what did he tell you about his pipe? That he was a second Charley Hell'n-Maria Dawes and never posed without one? Ugh! I can see that pipe now—crusted, short-stemmed, smelly. If it had only been a nice one it wouldn't have been quite so bad. And that little red box of tobacco—he carried it in his vest pocket and never would let me touch it. Never again!"

In the security of his office in the Lee Building, with telephone communication cut off, Stanton smoked the irritating pipe and philosophized.

"Youth and middle age simply will not mate. That little girl and I tried honestly, faithfully, to get along. The world will never know the whole story of how we tried to keep from pulling apart.

"My first wife died two and a half years ago and I had a good home for her there on Hyde Park avenue, with $4000 or $5000 worth of furnishings in it. Then I married my wife's best friend's baby sister. I offered to go out nights, although her divorce petition sounded otherwise. I like to dance. And I'd take my wife hunting and fishing with me.

"But if there's anything my law and work need it's a home-loving woman. I could go home with troubles and business worries on my mind that I had wrestled with all day, and with one word from a real wife—as my first wife was—or even just a look and a smile—troubles disappeared."

Stanton denied emphatically that financial differences entered into the crash of the marriage. He owns considerable property.

"You know," he said, "when a fellow will stay at home and feed the pets two or three weeks at a time and not because his wife is sick or anything like that, he isn't so bad."

At which the former Mrs. Stanton's comment was:

"Poor fellow, poor fellow—but think of the pets."

Boston Social Leaders Duped Again

by a BOGUS ARISTOCRAT

This Time It Was the King of Spain's "Brother" Who Had Already Been Denounced by the Spanish Embassy.

Robert Newbegin, "Don Luis de Bourbon" and Joseph Carleton Beals.

"Don Luis de Bourbon."

BOSTON.

HERE in Boston, the home of the bean and the cod, where true descendants of the Pilgrims hold sway and the social lights know their lineage without having it looked up for them, bogus noblemen and pretenders, strange to say, have found a happy hunting ground. For Beantown's society has one of the most beautiful records existing for being well spoofed. Boston's sucker list is long and lugubrious—when the counterfeiters flim-flam Boston they do it thoroughly.

The latest "royal personage" to put one over on Boston was "the brother of the King of Spain." When "Don Luis de Bourbon," some-time Constantine Glicky of Galatza, Rumania, let it be known, last month, that he was about to favor Beacon Hill and Louisburg Square with his "royal presence" there is no denying that the news created considerable excitement.

Royalty was coming and royalty must be properly received. He must be properly entertained, properly dined, he must be treated by Boston in a manner that would signify the Hub knew an old Spanish custom or two.

So a dinner immediately was arranged for the anticipated Luis de Bourbon by three of Boston's highest social lights—Joseph Carleton Beals, Edward K. Newbegin and Robert Newbegin. A theater party was scheduled—a theater party in America in which there was to be a royal box, draped with the colors of Spain. And the orchestra was instructed to include in its program the tunes of Aragon and Castile.

Everything was set to go when something slipped. It was the "brother" of Alfonso XIII that slipped. When the 6:15 from New York tooted into the Back Bay station, no Don Luis de Bourbon descended.

THE affair began to assume international proportions. Had Don Luis been mislaid somewhere between Boston and New York? What would Primo de Rivera think of the New Haven Railroad?

No one knew. They could only guess. And the multitude of reporters and camera men, waiting for His Highness, turned on their heels in disappointment. But if they were disappointed, what about Boston's social lights, who had awaited the train and its passenger? For them the blow was indeed severe.

But social Boston was not to be so easily put down. It got into its motors and journeyed to the home of the Misses Caroline and Anne King at 11 Chestnut street, where Don Luis was scheduled to dine. But he was not there; no, the Prince of the blood royal had not arrived via airplane.

And the dinner hour passed and soon it was time for the performance at the Tremont Theater, where the box, brave in the colors of Spain, awaited its noble guest.

Filled were the orchestra seats with lovely ladies, charmingly gowned, all of whom seemed entranced by the royal box. They looked at it with expectant eyes. And men in evening dress stole glances at it, while, once the curtain was up, the young women of the ensemble looked at it continuously. In the pit the musicians labored over the scores of fandangoes, seguidillas and habanderas.

But no Prince Royal responded to their music.

When the Prince and his entourage did not arrive at 8:15—when the curtain went up and the bannered box was still empty—a feeling of disappointment hovered over the audience. But, after all, a Prince is a Prince; what more usual than that he should be late if he cared to linger over his coffee?

Eight-thirty came. And still the box was empty. And now it began to be obvious that the audience was impatient. Still the brave actors carried on.

BUT at 8:40 a flutter ran through the house. A distinguished party entered the box. Men in evening clothes, women in shimmering gowns, held the attention of the house. Lorgnettes and opera glasses were trained upon the late arrivals. All heads turned toward the "royal box."

For three acts and three hours the audience studied this box closely. They were trying to determine which one of the correct-looking men was His Royal Highness. So just about everybody made his own choice, and at the end of the performance the audience filed out feeling it had got more than its money's worth.

But it hadn't, really, for Luis himself had not arrived, though the socially elect who had come to give the royal brother the support of their presence included such notables as Misses Zedee de Jonge of Fitchburg, Elso Olson of Denmark, Charlotte Kennedy of Cambridge, Ann Scriber of Pittsburg, Miss Rosamond Pierce of Boston, and Edward R. Goodnow and Jack Leland.

The next day, on a combination Greek freighter and cabin boat catering to tourists of hardly royal blood, came the "brother of King Alfonso" into Boston harbor.

His welcome was warm, it was cordial, it was even noisy—for Boston. The reporters and camera men were on hand, too.

And one reporter, winning his way to the side of Luis, asked:

"Prince, when did you leave off calling yourself Glicky, Constantine Glicky?"

The residents of Beacon Hill and Louisburg Square were shocked at the rudeness of the reporter.

And Luis of Spain turned to the reporter, and said with certainty: "I am Don Luis de Bourbon of Spain."

"Then," asked the reporter, "how's Mabelle, the girl you're going to marry?"

The Prince seemed baffled. "Who? What Mabelle? I don't know any Mabelles. Please keep off the subject of women. Please, no women!"

Otto Hartman, who successfully posed as Morris Duane, the tennis star.

"Count Paulois de Monte."

Whereupon the reporter gasped. "What Mabelle?" repeated the Prince's interviewer. "Mabelle Gilman Corey, the American heiress you're supposed to marry, if you're the cousin of the King of Spain?"

"Don't know the lady at all," replied the royal fellow. "And, anyhow, I'm not the cousin of His Majesty. I'm his brother. It's his cousin who's going to be married. Not I. Never."

Oh, so that was it. There were a couple of Don Luis de Bourbons.

"How long has Your Royal Highness been in the United States?"

"Oh, about two months," snapped Don Luis de Bourbon, and then he suggested it was time for tea.

So there was tea. And after it again came the volley and thunder of questions from the newspaper men. The cross-examination was not to the liking of the Prince's hosts. They were annoyed, and no doubt about it. But Don Luis told the press he would explain everything for them, and he said:

"After the murder of the first wife of King Alfonso XII he married the Austrian Archduchess Maria Christina, who bore him two daughters. According to an old Spanish law, the birth of two daughters, when not followed by the birth of a son, gives a Spanish King the right to contract a second legal marriage during the life of the Queen.

"So, in 1883, my father, Alfonso XII, married a member of the old French aristocracy. The wedding was at the Church of St. Jerome, in Madrid. On April 4, 1884, I was born in Galatza, Rumania, in the house of my mother's great-aunt. Thus, you see, I am the legal son of King Alfonso XII, and, of course, a brother of Alfonso XIII. Why, in the political circles of Europe I am known as 'The Lost King of Spain.'"

"Was the first wife of Alfonso XII murdered?"

"Did Alfonso XII marry a third time?"

Luis de Bourbon gazed upon the reporters with pity. What did they know about Kings and Queens?

But the reporters wouldn't stop. Didn't he recall being hit by a fire engine in New York about eight years ago, so what about this recent arrival talk? Why hadn't he married Mrs. Bertha K. Archibald, the New York heiress, to whom he was reported engaged as far back at 1921? Hadn't he tried to crash the official gates of Washington as the confidential man of Mussolini and the late Hugo Stinnes, with the result that he just about was told to go take a jump in the Potomac?

His Royal Highness ignored his interrogators, he paid them no heed. Instead, he began to talk about his experiences while the house guest of Gutzom Borglum, the sculptor.

But those extremely personal questions must have had their sinister effect upon Alfonso's brother. For he soon dismissed the press, and very soon afterward deserted Boston and headed for Greece. So far as is known, he is still going in that direction. And he had barely left New England when the Spanish embassy and the State Department at Washington, hearing that Don Luis had visited Boston, expressed great surprise that he was still playing his old game.

The Spanish embassy again declared he was an impostor. And the State Department pointed out that in November, 1927, it had issued a fraud warning against Don Luis de Bourbon which still stands. The warning reads:

"The Spanish Ambassador has called the attention of the Department of State to the case of an individual who is now traveling in Europe under the name of 'Luis de Bourbon,' and who holds himself out as a half-brother of the present King of Spain.

"The records show that this man was born in Rumania, entered this country in 1914 under the name of Constantine Glicky, was naturalized as a citizen of the United States under the name of Maurice Marcelle, and later, by a decree of the New York court, had his name changed to 'Don Luis de Bourbon.'"

And when the Spanish Ambassador heard about Don Luis' visit to Boston he protested vigorously, saying: "This pretender has deceived many unwary persons, with unpleasant and injurious effects."

Well, it would seem as though after all the previous publicity given the bogus Prince Luis that Boston society would have been on to him. You would think Boston society would have looked up this not-known Spanish Don in the Almanach de Gotha and found, by his absence from it, just the fake he was.

But social Boston didn't, and perhaps it isn't so surprising, for Beantown's society, as already noted, has been fooled before.

DID not "Count Paulois de Monte," with a jail record as long as a Washington bootlegger's list, just a short time ago put it over on Boston? Count Monte certainly did. But Hub society received him with open arms.

Dear Count Monte. Like Don Luis, he, too, hailed from Rumania, his old home town one Braila, on the Black Sea.

Count Monte began his New England performance in great style. He wooed the stepdaughter of a millionaire shoe manufacturer of Lynn, in Massachusetts, and wound up by stealing the girl's mother. A divorce action followed, in which the Count starred as a home wrecker and love pirate. The pseudo nobleman's name was wafted far and wide.

That was very unfortunate for Count Monte. It brought all of his wives to Boston, several of whom he had forgotten to divorce. But he wormed out of his difficulties. He patched up his troubles with his various spouses, and then had the audacity to start all over as Count Monte, the divine lover. Now he went to work as a shoe clerk in a Boston department store. But despite the disclosures concerning the past of the Count, he still managed to hold the affections of several socially distinguished Bostonians.

Jail awaited him, though, when he impersonated a Federal officer. Yet, when he got out of the hoosegow, he still had entree to certain—supposedly—exclusive Boston homes. He had sold himself that well as a member of the French nobility.

Ah, and then there was "Lord Beaverbrook." Ah, "Lord Beaverbrook," now residing in Sing Sing for defrauding wealthy women. Lord Beaverbrook was another peer who cut a wide swath in New England society. He also got away with a lot of cash.

BUT it was Otto Hartman, a dishwasher out of a one-arm Chicago restaurant, who bamboozled social lights of Boston and Newport with a thoroughness and finish that, probably, will ever remain a tradition. In some mysterious manner he was picked up for Morris Duane, the tennis star and social lion of Harvard, by certain fashionable persons of Bailey's Beach at Newport.

So impressed were these social ones with the grace, the charm, the urbanity of Mr. Duane that he was given entree to the homes of some of America's best-known millionaires. Receptions, dinners, dances were given in his honor.

The crowning event in his social career, which began meteorically and was to end in the same fashion, was his reception aboard the Aloha, the yacht of Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James. There was aboard the yacht a debutante who attracted Otto's fancy, and he paid her ardent court. It was a sad mistake.

For the young lady was engaged to a wealthy young blood who was a member of the same party. The young fiance got very angry, and determined to have it out with his rival as soon as the cruise was over.

Once on dry land, Otto tried to elude the infuriated swain. But he couldn't. Instead of Otto heading for the hotel, a swagger place, at which he said he was registered, he dodged up a side alley and into a room over an old stable.

Otto realized that the jig was up, at least for the time being. He did not return to Bailey's Beach. Instead he headed for the office of a Boston tabloid newspaper, where he sold his experiences for a considerable sum.

Otto next branched out as a Duke. He was a great success in this role, too. He even went so far as to become engaged to a wealthy young lady of—yes, Boston. But a suspicious father and an alert police captain intervened, and Otto lit out for Chicago.

It was Otto who described Newport as "The Suckerville of the World." "All," said Otto, "that's needed to get by in Boston and Newport is a pair of white flannel pants, a tuxedo and a title—the women do the rest."

MOVING PICTURES that make TROUBLE for UNCLE SAM

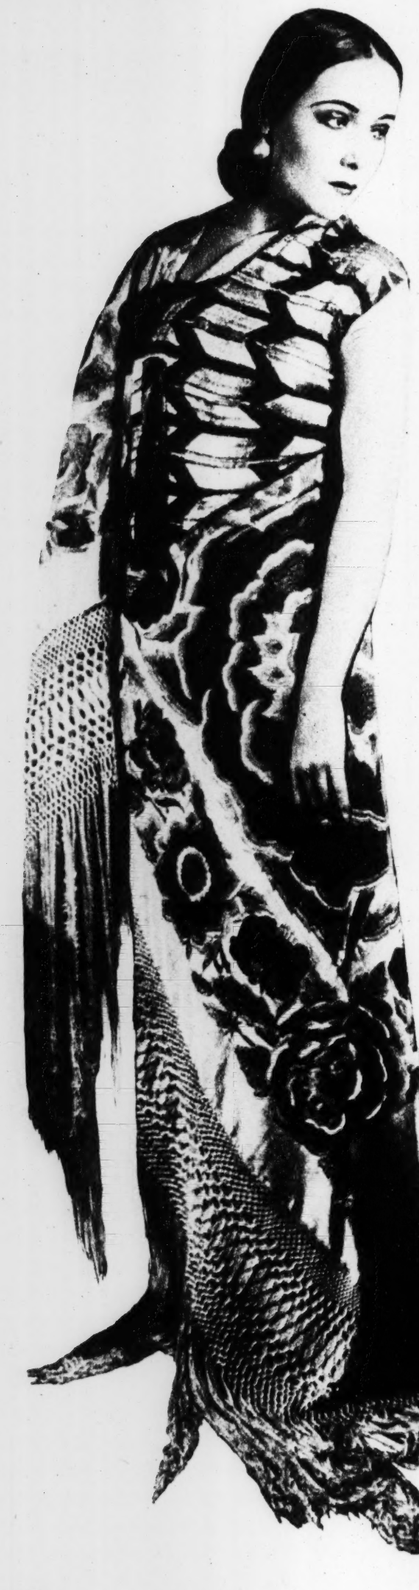
Foreign Diplomats and Censors Resent What They Consider Unfavorable and Ignorant Treatment of Their Countries in Hollywood Films.



Janet Gaynor in "Street Angel," a film that was hissed in Italy because it depicts "squalor and thuggery that does not exist."

Noah Beery offended with a "brutal" interpretation of a foreign legionnaire.

WHEN Benito Mussolini, with characteristic vigor, recently dismissed his entire board of censorship for returning a favorable verdict on "Street Angel," he swung Italy into line with other countries which have protested against the liberties American producers take in depicting their national life in the movies.

The Premier's action was interpreted by some as a typical Mussolinian gesture, but some half-dozen nations whose toes have been stepped on in a similar fashion are still chuckling with approval at the spectacle of Italy thumbing her nose at the Hollywood magnates.

To the Italian board, "Street Angel," starring the winsome Janet Gaynor, apparently was just another of those American "foreign" films, no better and certainly no worse than a score of its predecessors. It was exhibited in Rome to an audience comprising hundreds of prominent Italians and, according to Latin critics, it distorted Italian life, cities, customs and passions to such an extent that these eminent people hissed and whistled!

"Perhaps," Mario Carli, a well-known Italian critic, is reported to have written, "in the remote past conditions approached those shown in the picture, but in Mussolini's Italy certainly nothing of the sort exists. Gypsies, underworld characters, prostitution, cheating, misery, vice, overdressed peasants, gamin life, people in rags, filthiness, thuggery, landscapes immersed in endless fog—even the classic sun of Italy was obliterated by the directors! Can you imagine an Italian seascape perpetually steeped in fog?"

Of course, in this matter of keeping the world supplied with films, the United States is up against problems other countries have not had to face. German, Russian and British films, enjoying a more or less limited market, have stayed pretty much inside their own borders as far as story material is concerned—circulation, too, for that matter. So perhaps there is a little jealousy mixed in with their criticisms.

Certainly the wildest conceptions exist in Europe regarding life in America, some of which, no doubt, arise from imaginative movies concocted in our own country. It might be enlightening if some foreign producer undertook to show Americans on the screen. Many a Continental has the impression that he would meet wild Indians on Broadway and gang leaders on almost any corner.

Nevertheless, boycotts that have been levied against American film companies by some countries and limits that have been set by others on Hollywood importations may trace back, in part, to ill feeling generated by films that are out of focus.

AND, in addition, audiences here, who get their impressions of foreign manners and etiquette in the picture palaces, would benefit if more pains were taken to make the movies a little more accurate in this respect, difficult as it may be.

The Department of State, too, would be grateful, for time and again it has found itself obliged to apologize to countries that feel they have been misrepresented or deliberately maligned. More than once some movie man's faux pas has led to a solemn exchange of diplomatic communiques, while informal protests are registered frequently by official and unofficial representatives of various countries.

The Spanish embassy formally protested against "The Dove," starring Norma Talmadge, and the British embassy recently filed objections to a film supposed to portray scenes in India. About a year ago Ambassadors from two great countries, in public utterances, almost simultaneously denounced the tendency of American producers to misrepresent other nations.

At the inauguration luncheon of the American-Brazilian Association, November 15, 1927, Dr. S. Gurgel do Amaral, Brazilian Ambassador, made reference to a protest filed by a well-known citizen of his country against a film supposed to depict life in Rio de Janeiro.

This picture, it was charged, showed Rio as "a dismal and squalid village, with the inhabitants apparently having no other occupation than playing and dancing the tango at all hours, while the Portuguese language seemed to be entirely unknown in Brazil."

Dr. Amaral's comments were couched in the polite phrases of diplomacy, but he was obviously sincere when he said: "The American motion picture is a mighty contribution to education and enlightenment and a forceful factor for the enjoyment of life, but, unfortunately, as always happens when the field of human expansion grows and spreads, some exceptions present themselves. . . .

"The sense of fairness of Americans, their inborn feeling for accuracy and fair play, as well as their kindness toward their friends abroad, will contribute, I am sure, to put these exceptional features into better working order as time goes on."

Benito Mussolini.

Ambassador Paul Claudel of France, speaking at a dinner tendered him by the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents, deplored the fashion in which officers and soldiers of the French army are "represented as brutes" in motion pictures featuring the French Foreign Legion.

"Pictures featuring the colonial wars of France are quite the fashion," he said, "and generally French officers and French soldiers are represented in a way that is not at all flattering. I know that it takes time to change a type which has once caught the eye of the public.

"I know also that the movie drama cannot do without villains and, as it is difficult to find villains among one's own countrymen, it seems better to choose them among people of other nations. But I have a right to say, and I have here as witnesses people who have seen French officers and soldiers under every latitude, that they are not what the film producers judge proper to show to the American public and to the public of other nations of the world, since there is no nation where American films are not seen. The French soldiers and officers are exactly the same in Indo-China and Africa as they were at the Marne and at Verdun, born to be true comrades of American legionnaires."

The Spanish embassy, in its note of protest to the State Department about "The Dove," a film story in a Mexican setting, cited a grievance of long standing; that is, linking up scenes along the border with Spanish life and customs. It was politely pointed out that Mexican customs are not Spanish customs and, through the State Department, alterations were made in the captions, deleting all references to Spain. The Spanish diplomats were grateful for this courtesy to their country.

The film to which the British embassy took exception showed, among other things, a Hindu man mistreating his wife in a fashion which, it held, gave the impression that this sort of thing is normal in India. The producer deleted references to India, substituting phrases which located the setting vaguely in "the East."

PRODUCERS usually make such corrections with alacrity and grace, when faults are called to their attention, but at the various embassies it is stated that disapproval is voiced only in serious instances of fault.

Hundreds of mistakes get by because they are not the sort that strain diplomatic relations. Often they contribute to the gayety of nations, but, at the same time, they give American audiences erroneous impressions of other countries.

Movie-bred ideas of foreign manners and etiquette show up when summer comes and large numbers of Americans embark to "do" Europe. Perhaps if the motion pictures presented a true picture of life abroad Uncle Sam would not be compelled to blush so often over the conduct of his gallivanting nephews and nieces.

On the Continent, in England and in the Spanish countries, customs and conventions are followed more precisely than in the United States, so that a breach of conduct which would appear trivial in the Land of the Free is regarded often as a serious affront. The folkways have been built upon centuries of human experience and may not be broken lightly or a relapse be forgiven as easily as in America.

The hero of a "British" or "French" movie, behaving a la Americain, is apt to make many a faux pas that seems as glaring to a Continental as eating with a knife.

For instance, methods of greeting often are bungled in movies that have a foreign setting. The gallant hero is shown bending over the heroine's hand and planting thereon a firm and fervent kiss. Frequently the kiss lands upon the back of her glove, but the American audience does not mind.

That's an old one. The mistake has been made so often that all of this hand-kissing is expected and might even be missed if it were omitted. Yet the European does not kiss the hand of an unmarried woman, even if she is his fiancee, and a gloved hand is never kissed.

If the scene is a court reception, men and women are often represented as kissing the hand of the Queen. Married or single, the hand of a Queen is kissed in no such promiscuous fashion. The women curtsy, while the men bow and shake hands. The Queen's hand is kissed only when she offers it, which is not often, says the Department of State.

Foreign audiences are shocked to death at the behavior of their "countrywomen" in films of foreign flavor. Of a truth she forgets her place and behaves, in their eyes, in a bold and blatant fashion.

In countries other than America, women are considered the inferiors of men. The movie man, if he wishes his film to be entirely pleasing abroad, should not permit the heroine of such pictures to grin broadly when she chances to meet a "boy friend" on the street, for it is the man's place and not the woman's to acknowledge an acquaintance.

NOR should the "foreign heroine," if she is supposed to be a lady, offer to shake hands when she is introduced to a man; it's rotten form, don't you know. The man, if he chooses, offers his hand, the woman never. Similarly the seat of precedence in a motor car, in European countries the rear seat on the right is occupied by the man of the house. A woman is never given this outside seat.

American producers have been known to put a King, or a King's emissary, on the left. In theaters, restaurants and similar places, the Continental always goes first, the woman tagging respectfully at his heels, the reverse of the usual procedure in this country.

Table manners and customs attached to the serving of food constitute another stumbling block in the way of the American movie producer who, if he wants his foreign pictures to be correct, would take note of these differences.

In Europe it is very bad form to receive or entertain guests, however briefly, without at least offering them food and drink. At the table the Continental does not eat American style, continually shifting his fork from the left hand to the right hand; this looks gauche to European audiences.

The correct procedure is to keep

A PAIR of sho manufactured by St. Louis concer the alert intel gence of a Pinke ton detective a one tiny blund on the part of criminal all co bined to solve Ne Jersey's notorious torch murde which at first gave every sign of b coming an unsolved crime.

At 5:30 on Saturday morning, Fe ruary 23, John Boyle was driving h bread delivery truck from Newark Cranford, New Jersey. A mile fro Cranford, on a lonely stretch of roa he noticed a fire burning by the hig way. A Pair of Shoes that Solved a TORCH MURDER MYSTERY

A Trail That Led From the St. Louis Manufacturer to the Feet of the Victim Resulted in Her Identification and the Arrest of the Guilty Man.

H. Colin Campbell.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

A PAIR of shoes manufactured by a St. Louis concern, the alert intelligence of a Pinkerton detective and one tiny blunder on the part of a criminal all combined to solve New Jersey's notorious torch murder, which at first gave every sign of becoming an unsolved crime.

At 5:30 on Saturday morning, February 23, John Boyle was driving his bread delivery truck from Newark to Cranford, New Jersey. A mile from Cranford, on a lonely stretch of road, he noticed a fire burning by the highway. As he drew alongside the fire his eyes widened in horror, and he stepped on his accelerator and drove with all possible speed to the police station in Cranford. A few minutes later he returned with two officers. There, lying in the snow, was the still warm body of a middle-aged, inexpensively-clad woman. She had been fatally shot through the head, and her body, splashed with gasoline, had been tossed on the side of the road and left to burn.

The criminal, who had obviously set fire to the body to prevent identification of the victim, had apparently achieved his purpose. The features had been charred beyond recognition and there was no pocketbook or anything else nearby to indicate the woman's identity. The police were baffled, and the crime might have been relegated to the files of unsolved mysteries but for one fact. The spot where the woman was found is less than fifteen miles from the place where, in the early dawn of February 29, 1928, almost exactly a year previously, Miss Margaret Brown, a New York governess, was found dying, with her gasoline-soaked clothing aflame. That murder was never solved, and Prosecutor A. J. David of Union County, in which Cranford is situated, immediately determined that this second crime must be solved, no matter how much trouble and expense might be involved. Prosecutor David communicated with the Pinkerton detectives, and William Wagner, assistant superintendent of the New York office, was given the task of discovering the murderer.

Wagner is a stocky little man of 40, who wears shell-rim glasses and looks like a school teacher. He is typical of the modern type of detective, however, in that he uses his head to think with rather than as a convenient place to attach disguises.

Wagner took charge of the case, but no one held out much hope for a solution. Before finding the murderer, it was necessary to find out who the victim was, and with nothing by which to identify her this was admittedly no easy task. A careful examination of the victim revealed that she was a woman of from 40 to 45 years of age, had blue eyes and light chestnut hair, was five feet, five inches in height and medium stout in build. Her clothes were of no particular distinction, and no garment bore either initials or a laundry mark.

When the crime was made public and a description of the victim was published in the newspapers, the office of the Union County investigators was immediately deluged with telephone calls and anonymous letters. In each case the informant declared that the description fitted a person who had disappeared. Detective Wagner and his associates carefully investigated each of these calls and letters, but in each case the person who was supposed to have disappeared was located.

THE body was "positively identified" by various people eight different times, and each time the investigators found that person alive, although in one instance they had to go as far west as Denver to do so. This sort of thing might have lasted indefinitely without achieving a solution, had not Detective Wagner decided on a course of action.

"These tips are misleading and wasteful," he said. "We'd better forget them and get to work on the material we have."

And with that he turned again to another examination of the murdered woman's apparel. Piece by piece he examined the woman's clothing, and each time he was disappointed, until he came to the shoes. To the eyes of an ordinary investigator there was nothing about those shoes unusual enough to justify Detective Wagner's grunt of satisfaction. They were in fact a very ordinary pair of black lace oxfords with French heels and the size was 6C. They showed signs of considerable wear, had been repaired, and their patent leather was badly cracked. On the inside of the shoes was the name of the manufacturer: Friedman-Shelby, St. Louis, Mo., and nearby were the numbers, 360-85985H.

Wagner's elation at discovering the name of the manufacturer was due to hopefulness, rather than to a feeling of triumph. The mere name of the maker was far from assuring a solution, especially in the case of a company like Friedman-Shelby which manufactured thousands of pairs of shoes daily. And it required more than a little optimism to plan to trace a pair of shoes made in St. Louis to the unidentified body of a woman in New Jersey, and to hope in the course of that procedure to learn who the woman was. But Detective Wagner determined to make the effort.

He immediately sent a message to the Pinkerton office in St. Louis explaining the situation, and a detective called at the Friedman-Shelby Company. The officers of the company were entirely willing to be of help, but the information they had to offer was not encouraging. They explained that the first number, 360, merely indicated the size. The other number, 85985H, also meant nothing, they said, as far as an investigation was concerned. This number merely identified the shoes as having been manufactured in a certain one of the company's numerous plants. Thirty-five other pairs of shoes had the same number. But once these shoes reached the St. Louis warehouse they were packed up with thousands of others of the same style made in other branches, and no further record was kept of these inside numbers, which were merely local branch markings. From then on the shoes of this style were sorted according to size and so distributed to the retail dealers. The general style number of this type of shoe was 2412. It had been manufactured some time between September 1, 1927, and March 8, 1928, and in that period had been sold to hundreds of dealers.

When this information was sent to Detective Wagner he immediately resolved on a course of action and sat down to write another letter to his St. Louis office.

"Go through the Friedman-Shelby accounts," he wrote, "and send me a list of the names and addresses of all dealers who purchased shoes of that size and style."

The Pinkertons in St. Louis then methodically went through the Friedman-Shelby records and in a few days Wagner received his list. It showed that almost 200 retailers in as many different towns had handled shoes No. 2412, size 6C, and on top of that Wagner discovered that many of the dealers had purchased many pairs of that size. Wagner then got busy and composed a form letter describing the crime, the victim and the shoes. Each copy of this letter was addressed to the Chief of Police in whose district one of the above dealers conducted business. The Chief was given the name of his particular dealer, whom he was to visit and from whom he was to try to learn the identity, if possible, of all customers who had bought shoes of that kind. The Chief was also asked to see if any person reported missing in his vicinity answered the description of the woman found by the roadside near Cranford. These letters were sent to 190 different officers. The search was somewhat simplified by the fact that the Friedman-Shelby records showed no sales of this type of shoe in New York or Connecticut, and only a few in Southern New Jersey.

THE New Jersey towns were personally visited by investigators, as were the larger cities in Pennsylvania, but without results. The rest was up to the police officers to whom the circular letters had been addressed. Days passed and no reply came. The days stretched into two weeks, and Detective Wagner began to feel that his search, for all its thoroughness, was a failure.

Then on the morning of April 6 he received a long-distance telephone call from Chief of Police Henry Barber of Greenville, Pennsylvania. The Chief told Wagner that he had visited the Sliffkin Shoe Store in his town and learned that several pairs of the specified shoe had been sold, exactly to whom the dealer could not recall. Since no one in his district had been reported missing, the Chief then dismissed the matter. Then a few days later he learned that a Mrs. Mildred Mowrey, a widow who had lived in Greenville for many years, had left town early in February to meet a recently-acquired husband. Some of Mrs. Mowrey's friends told the Chief that she had married the man last August in Elkton, Maryland, and that she had returned to Greenville to wait for him to prepare a home for her, and that early in February she had again left Greenville, saying she was going to meet him. The friends had never seen her husband, since he had never visited Greenville, and they had no idea who he was. What had surprised them and set them to talking was the fact that the former Mrs. Mowrey had failed to send as much as one tiny post-card to her former intimates and associates. When Chief Barber heard this he asked for a description of Mrs. Mowrey and found that it closely tallied with the description sent by Detective Wagner. Then he went again to the shoe store and the dealer recalled selling a pair of shoes to the widow. Such was the information conveyed over the telephone wire. Next day friends and relatives of Mrs. Mowrey came to Elizabeth, in Union County, New Jersey, and definitely identified the body of the murdered woman as that of the former Mrs. Mildred Mowrey.

SO FAR, very good, and Detective Wagner had good reason to congratulate himself. But he still didn't know who the man in the case was, nor did anyone else. All that he could learn from Mrs. Mowrey's friends was that she had told them she had been married in Elkton, Maryland, while she was absent from Greenville in August. With this information Wagner went to Elkton and inspected the marriage records of the town. Under date of August 28, 1928, he found the record of a marriage between Mrs. Mildred Mowrey and a Dr. Richard M. Campbell. The record further showed that Dr. Campbell had given his address as 3707 Yosemite street, Baltimore. In view of what had occurred later, Wagner suspected that the name and address were probably both fictitious, and sure enough, when he got to Baltimore, he discovered there was no Yosemite street, al-

SKIPPY, LIMITED

By EDGAR L. HAMPTON

ONCE, for about five minutes, I was nearly a millionaire. But, like the Ghost of Hamlet and many people's dreams, when I came to put my hand on it, it was gone. I did have a reasonable working chance, however; at least I'll say that much for Skippy, now that he stands once more in need of commiseration.

I had been down in the Walla Walla country, holding prolonged conferences with the farmers over their apple crop, and I crossed the Palouse and the Big Bend and ran into Spokane late in the afternoon.

He was standing on the bridge where Monroe street crosses the Spokane River. His feet were braced well apart, his chin was on his chest, his hat on the back of his head, his hands thrust deep into trousers pockets, and he was looking fixedly down into the rapids, as if in contemplation of rash acts.

His feet were braced well apart, his chin was on his chest, his hat on the back of his head. . . .

I knew him by his back and by the way he disposed his hands. He usually kept them thrust deep in his pockets, as if he were putting forth a strenuous effort to hold down that inordinate zeal of his. He had once worked as stenographer for Smithers & Co., grain merchants, over in Seattle a couple of years back; that's how I came to know him. I hadn't seen him since. I was waiting for a train to take me out of town and I came upon him here on the Spokane bridge unexpectedly and unobserved.

"Hello, Skippy!" I said.

He gave a quick twist, saw me, and actually jumped at my outstretched hand.

"Say! You're just the fellow I want to see. Loan me fifty dollars!"

This he shot at me in a single breath and without preliminaries.

Now, I wasn't the fellow he wanted to see at all, and I told him so. I knew Skippy only as a young Lochinvar who, reversing the legend, had come from the office and employment of a Wall Street broker into the West to conquer it, three years before. He was still a drifter, not anchored anywhere. I had never known him to have more than fifty cents ahead at one time, and he usually looked the part. He was frayed at the wrist-bands, even now, decidedly so.

THERE were other facts to counterbalance these, of course. Skippy was likeable; his method was mightily, almost tragically, ingratiating, always a pleasant word, a glad hand, and a good-natured, unsophisticated grin that reminded you of getting home for Christmas. But then, I had come to know—no matter how—that a glad hand and a good-natured, unsophisticated grin sometimes cover a multitude of sins in the West. They have been known to leave the East in haste and by devious routes, bringing, among other things, these accomplishments with them.

But all this aside, I liked Skippy and I didn't care to make an enemy of him by loaning him money and then having him owe it to me for two or three years afterward.

So I temporized.

"Better slow down a little and get your breath," I suggested.

"No, honest," he begged. "I'm not joking. I've got to get up to Calgary quick!"

"What have you been doing down on this side of the line that you've got to get up to Calgary so quick?" I inquired.

"Oh, it isn't that," he laughed. "There's a boom on up in the Calgary country. That new town of Kersplurge you've heard so much about. Railroad just about to get in there straight from Winnipeg. And on top of all that they're about to strike oil. Say! Things are on the jump at Kersplurge. Greatest chance in the world to make a quick clean-up!"

"I never heard of the town," I said skeptically.

"A-w!" It was a sound halfway between pity and disgust. "You don't tell me! Why, it's the coming metropolis of Western Canada. Finest wheat country on earth. More coal to the square foot than Pennsylvania." He had begun to boom it in anticipation. "And they're coming in on flat cars; can't hardly get a place to sleep at night. Fellow up there I used to know wrote me to come if I had to sell my clothes, and bring as many people as I could along with me to help fill up the country; says I ought to make a fortune in a couple of weeks. Loan me the fifty, won't you?"

His zeal was a little contagious, I'll have to admit. But then, I've had most of those contagious diseases at least once, including the one to which I was now being exposed.

So I continued to evade him.

"Not till I've at least seen Kersplurge on the map," I said.

"You don't have to see it on the map!" he chortled, all but bursting with his seriousness. "Anybody that knows'll tell you it's there. Why, it's a half-grown metropolis right now, doubling on itself every three weeks. New additions going on overnight. There's more money in Kersplurge, right now, than you can shake a stick at, and everybody's buying town lots. Say! I want to get up there in the real estate business, and I want to do it quick."

His tremendous, hand-wringing attitude toward the subject seemed to suggest that five minutes' delay, under the present state of affairs, would see the chances for a fortune sadly reduced; and that half an hour of fruitless hesitation would usher the golden opportunity out forever.

Still I hedged. I couldn't quite take him as seriously as he took himself.

"What are you doing here in Spokane?" I inquired.

"Oh, I've been running a little advertising joint, putting out copy for half a dozen real estate firms. But this town's a little bit quiet just now. Say—!"

"Why don't you get it at your bank?" I suggested.

The good-natured grin broke into a high-keyed cackle.

"DID you mistake me for a John D. Rockefeller?" he laughed. "Better look again. All I've got in the world is the clothes I've got on, a lead pencil and a stack of copy paper—and about three hundred and fifty dollars in unpaid bills. I can pay the bills, though, in a week," he hastened to assure me. "Just let me get up to Calgary once. I've tried to raise that fifty in a dozen different places, but I don't seem quite able to connect.

"Say! You loan me the price of a ticket and berth to Calgary —stake me to get up there, like they do prospectors, you know— and I'll agree to give you half I make the next two years. Honest! It's a business proposition. I'll sign a contract. There's a million dollars ahead of us up there."

"How far ahead of us?" I inquired. But he didn't seem to fall in with my well-meaning humor.

"Oh, you're a cynic," he said, full of disgust, "a rank pessimist! I see you're not going to let me have the money. All right." He made the Jew sign of resignation with his two hands.

"But you're making a big mistake," he added. "I'll get up there somehow if I have to ride a brake beam. And then—look out for little Willie!"

I waved him good-by and saw him start on across the Spokane bridge, his hat still on the back of his head, his hands thrust deep into his pockets. And the last fact to fade out of my mind in the whole transaction, not to return again for many months to come, was that good-natured, unsophisticated grin which reminded you of going home for Christmas.

I traveled over a good many states in the interest of the Western apple crop. It was this contingency that took me into Western Montana the following summer.

AND at Billings I received a night letter from the House ordering me to Kersplurge. Of all places on earth, Kersplurge, Canada! So the place really did exist, after all. Moreover, the House evidently knew about it. My instructions, the wire read, would meet me at my destination.

And now, for the first time in more than eight months, Skippy came again into my mind—Skippy, with his hat on the back of his head, his good-natured grin, his terrific nerve and his appalling persistence. And had he got his fifty? I hoped so. He was a pretty good youngster, as the world goes; he deserved something for his zeal.

I arrived at Kersplurge on an afternoon train, the stub that runs up from Calgary. That is, I felt sure then, and do now, that it was Kersplurge, though at the time it consisted for the most part of skeleton buildings, swiftly galloping people, the clang and clatter of saws and hammers, the whoop of passing engines, and endless piles of brick, mortar and lumber which were destined, if the fates held, to rise overnight into office buildings and manufacturing plants. All these, besides an unlimited expanse of beautiful, rarefied atmosphere which reached across vast, unpeopled spaces to distant horizons.

I alighted at the station with several dozen Swedes, a hay tedder, two threshing machines, a printing press, ten flat cars of lumber, and the president of the Kersplurge Board of Trade, who had been on a hurry-up trip to Seattle to study publicity methods.

Yes, the president of the Board of Trade could tell me where to find Perkins & Co. Highly respected firm. Dealt in wheat and apples. Go right down the avenue there, three blocks, and two doors to the left. . . . How did I like the town? Was I going to tarry with them, become a full-fledged Kersplurgeite? He hoped so. Great city, Kersplurge. Wonderful future. . . .

I left him enumerating the country's assets. The last thing I heard him mention as I passed out of earshot was the coal deposits. He must have been fifty years old; but he could have passed anywhere for twenty. Such is the alchemy of boom towns.

Kersplurge, on the day of my arrival, was a town of four or five thousand inhabitants. It sat in the middle of a perfectly level universe whose horizons were flat and very far away, and whose intervals were wheat fields.

Across these wheat fields paraded the square white stakes of the different new additions, like an endless army in loose formation marching upon the horizon.

Those distant sun-kissed spaces seemed quiet, restful, brooding—an opium dream of contentment. But not so Kersplurge. There, the ghost of a great city-to-be ran rampant; men in shirt sleeves with rapt looks on their faces hurried frantically hither and yon; great cranes swung out across thoroughfares, picked up wagon loads of lumber, and returned.

Above the medley the voices of saws and hammers predominated, for the town was being built of wood. It was not unlike the noise of a thousand woodpeckers hammering on hollow cottonwoods, except that these noises jarred your ear drums.

I picked my way down the main thoroughfare, an eye continually open for falling planks and rushing lumber trucks.

Every second building that I passed bore the legend: "Real Estate for Sale." Round the fronts of these were crowds of men jostling each other. Sometimes they stood more decorously in line awaiting their turn.

BITS of their conversation, many-keyed and of diverse accents, filtered into my consciousness as I passed:

"Lot 46, Block 7 . . . This one next to you just sold to the Duke of Buckingham. . . . No! Can't hold it past two o'clock. All right, two o'clock sharp! . . . Fairview Addition. Sure! Plating Works. A thousand dollars a lot? Not on your life! That was last week; two thousand now, prices have gone up! . . . . Yes, a few left . . . All right. Come on inside, I'll get you a blank check!"

They were selling town lots there in the middle of the street.

Presently I returned to consciousness and found myself standing in front of a very busy-looking, one-story structure which no one had as yet found opportunity to adorn with paint, a princely palace of business in this leviathan young city, across the square face of which was written in letters that all might read:

SKIPPY, LIMITED.
OWN YOUR OWN HOME.
Town lots a specialty. A little down and a little a month makes you rich.
BUY YOUR LOTS TODAY.

There was more to the same effect. I did not stop to read it all. I must have stood looking at this conspicuous emporium of real estate for some time before I actually realized to whom it belonged.

Skippy, Limited! So Skippy had got his fifty. I found myself feeling glad over it. He was a pretty nice boy, Skippy.

Clearly the thing for me to do, under the circumstances, was to seek him out and wish him joy over his new acquisition. So I quickened my steps and pushed through the jostling crowd of men into his office.

He sat in his shirt sleeves at a flat wooden table littered with scraps of paper and legal-looking documents, and he was talking with both hands and both feet to an anxious customer as I entered.

"That lot in Skyline Addition will cost you——"

The telephone rang and he made a dive for it. I heard his end of the conversation:

"Loyal Heights? Yes, I've heard of it . . . . Seven hundred lots? . . . Yes . . . No . . . Yes . . . . Sixty thousand dollars? . . . . No, I haven't seen it yet but I'll take it. How much down? . . . . All right, come up and get your check."

THE receiver went back into place with a bang. "Five thousand dollars, spot cash!" he said emphatically, turning again to the anxious customer and finishing the interrupted sentence. "Five thousand dollars, no more, no less! It's a bargain! Take it or leave it!"

And then he happened to look across the table in my direction, and his face broke into that good-natured, unsophisticated grin I knew so well.

"Hello, Seattle!" he said. "You here? Did you rain down or come in an airship?"

By asserting all my rights as an American citizen I finally managed to push through the press and shake his hand.

"Just stick around until I finish closing a deal or two here and we'll go down to the club and eat," he said. "No chance to talk here, you know. Bothered too much. Besides, I want to introduce you to the leading citizens."

"What made them call it Kersplurge?" I inquired a half-hour later across the luncheon table.

We had traversed the United States, verbally, from Tucson to Trinidad, discussed freight rates and politics, bought wheat in Ritzville and watched it take sail in Tacoma, packed down the Methow, shot the Shoshone Rapids in a rowboat, and turned up at Los Angeles, three states away, all in the space of half an hour. And now we were continuing to accept the undisguised hospitality of the Eureka Club while we finished our coffee and marmalade.

"Well, you see, they really didn't have time to name this town," he admitted, with a twinkle in his eyes, answering my question. "It came on so sudden. So they just called it Kersplurge. That's as good a name as any, for the purpose."

"What is the purpose?" I asked.

"To make money," he snapped, with another twinkle.

"To make it, do you mean, or just to get it?" I inquired.

He gave me a good-natured grin.

"You always were a cynic," he said. "We're making it honestly. Nobody's losing the money we get; they're receiving full value. You see, it's the increase. Unearned increment's what does it. Unearned increment, my friend, is the greatest institution in the world for a poor man with ambition. We're trading on the future of Kersplurge."

"But what have you here?" I inquired. "What reason is there for all this Kersplurge? I can't see any."

"Why, oil is the great thing here, paraffin base oil!" he said, and there came a rapt look into his eyes, as if the very words were hypnotic.

And then I remembered he had told me in Spokane that they were about to strike oil at Kersplurge.

"So you did strike it, after all," I murmured. "Well, that's good. I hadn't heard about it."

"We haven't struck it yet, but we're going to," he said, with the emphasis in the proper place.

"Going to? Then you have not——?"

"Sure, we're going to," he broke in. "Absolutely certain. No question in the world about it. Why, listen to me!"

I WOULDN'T care to bore a friend of mine with the carefully rehearsed geological, biological, psychological reasons he gave me in the next few minutes, why the thing was inevitable; so I omit them here. I will only add that, had there been upon my person a portentry few thousand dollars, but there solely for investment purposes, it would have been greatly endangered at this moment. Even the thought of a certain night letter home occurred to me. But I didn't stop to see it.

"You don't know this section of country at all," he was saying. "We've got plenty here to build a city with, clear outside of coal and railroads, if it comes to the pinch. You never saw so rich a country as this. Agriculture! No end to it. You've heard of Alberta wheat. Why, it takes the world's prize every year at Chicago! And cattle! You ought to see the beef we ship every fall. And we've got the world's record milch cow; and the biggest cattle ranch anywhere in Canada right up here by Edmonton!"

"You don't know this section of country at all," he was saying. "We've got plenty here to build a city with, clear outside of oil and railroads, if it comes to a pinch. You never saw so rich a country as this. Agriculture? No end to it. You've heard of Alberta wheat. Why, it takes the world's prize every year at Chicago! And cattle! You ought to see the beef we ship every fall! And we've got the world's record milch cow; and the biggest chicken ranch anywhere in Canada—right up here by Edmonton!"

"But you can't sell town lots on those things," I said. "You're a wheat country, and you're just a suburb of Calgary."

"A-w! Calgary's forty miles away from here!" he exploded. "You've got to have more than one city in a great country like this. Why, there's 253,540 square miles just to Alberta alone! You didn't know that, did you?"

"I thought it was even larger," I said modestly. "But, such as it is, it's tributary to towns already built. I can't see any reason for Kersplurge."

"Oh!" he shrieked, hammering the table.

"When?" I inquired.

He contained himself as best he could, but I could see he was considerably provoked.

"SAY," he said—and his air had become one of patronizing tolerance; it was as if he knew a number of things, knew, also, that they were far beyond my mental reach, but even so he didn't mind trying to help me understand them for the sake of old-time friendship—"say, you don't understand the spirit of Kersplurge at all. This is an inspired town. Its business men have big, broad visions. They're the most energetic, optimistic hustlers on the North American continent. That's what it takes to make cities. Put this bunch of men together in a desert and they'd make it into a city in a year." (I could see he believed every word he was saying.)

"They could build a metropolis here out of wheat; or they could build it around our one prize cow and the chicken ranch; or they could leave the cow out and build it around the chicken ranch alone! But they don't have to!" (He was hammering the table again.) "We've got the assets! Everything we need's right here before us—under our feet. Why, say, we've got sixty thousand million tons of high-grade coal right under this town! We know it's here, but we haven't got time to dig it. We're after oil; and when we strike oil Kersplurge'll be another Bakersfield, another Pittsburgh! You can't keep it back!"

"So you're getting along all right?" I said.

"Y-e-s," he drawled carelessly, flicking the ash from his cigar. "I've cleaned up a couple of hundred thousand or so, to date, don't know exactly how much. Put it all back into town lots, though," he added. "Land's the safest thing on earth, can't get away from you. One good investment's worth a lifetime of labor. Own your own home."

He was quoting me his boom town literature verbatim. I don't think he noticed it.

"Of course I don't put quite all of it back," he corrected, running on in a ruminative voice. "I keep a couple of autombiles and a small stable, a few hunting dogs and a pretty good suite at the hotel; costs me a couple of thousand a month to live. But most of it goes right back into real estate. Great country this," he added dreamily through the smoke of his cigar. "Great country!"

And so he rambled on, reminiscently, like a human automaton, singing the praises of Kersplurge, of Alberta, of the western half of the North American continent in general, after the prodigal manner of so many of his kind.

It must have been about three months later, along early in December of the same year, that Skippy blew unceremoniously into my Seattle office. He came in a great beaver top coat, an oddity in our climate; but it was the warmth of a tropical June that he brought with him.

"Well, how's the Breeze from Calgary?" I inquired.

"Kersplurge!" he corrected in mock severity.

"Well, Kersplurge, then. And did you rain down, or come in an airship?"

He laughed. "I came in a compartment observation. Through the thoughtfulness of Mr. Jim Hill. We're on our way to spend a few months in Southern California."

"We?" I inquired, picking from his statement the one word that puzzled me.

Once more he gave me that typical grin. It appeared there was excuse for it this time.

"Yes, 'we,'" he said. "I'm married." I offered him a cigar and my congratulations.

"I got to thinking about it one day, and decided it was the best thing to do. So I looked around a little," he said complacently.

"That's fine," I agreed. "Who is she?"

"Oh, a little English girl. Only been over a year. Rode into Kersplurge on the tidal wave. Met her one week, married her the next . . . But, say, she's a pippin!" he enthused. "Sweetest little thing you ever saw. Took her for a wedding trip across to England to see her folks. She wanted to go. Just got back. We're on our way down to Los Angeles now for a few months' rest, and to see the scenery."

"Strike oil yet?" I inquired, changing the subject.

There came for an instant, as I thought, just the slightest possible shadow across his face.

"No, not yet, but we will," he said positively.

"Still at it?"

"Yes, still at it. The first half-dozen wells fizzled out, but we've started twenty or thirty more. Oh, we'll strike it all right. You can't hold back a town like Kersplurge."

He sat, thoughtful, for a moment.

"OH, IT'S got to come," he said finally, almost fiercely, as if that were sufficient to bring the result about. "It's just got to come! Every dollar I've got in the world's invested up there. And I've a little wife on my hands to look after, too, you see; so I can't afford to make mistakes now . . . But then, it'll be all right," he added a moment later, as if to reassure himself rather than me. . . . "It's sure to be; no doubt about that . . ."

And then that smile again, full of courage and hope and sunshine, which reminded you of going home for Christmas.

But there were too many lines in his face for a boy of twenty-two.

There is only a little more to this story of Skippy, Limited. It was a year and a half later, and I was again in Spokane. He was standing on the sidewalk in front of Davenport's, looking up at the new Fidelity Trust Company skyscraper. But he saw me on the opposite side of the street and held out his hand before I got half-way across.

"They tell me there's more pleasure in pursuit than in possession, anyhow," were the words with which he greeted me.

But somehow I forgot the words as soon as they were spoken. It was his voice that I noticed instead, it hadn't quite its usual resonance. His personality, too, seemed to lack its customary punch.

"What's the matter?" I inquired. "Anything wrong with Kersplurge?"

"We didn't strike oil," he said.

"You mean Kersplurge has gone broke?"

"Kersplurge?" he said dreamily. "Kersplurge? There ain't no such animal."

He laughed his old-time good-natured laugh, and then became suddenly serious.

"No, we didn't put it over," he said. "We couldn't make it stick. Not enough juice. Everything's closed up now." There came a far-away look into his eyes.

"Everybody's gone—back to Calgary, back to Kamloops, back to Jericho, maybe. The moths have turned to cocoons on the town lot stakes, and the boys have thrown rocks through the Eureka Club windows . . . But we've still got the world's prize cow." He brightened. "And the biggest chicken ranch. And we still raise wheat! . . . Say, slip me a five-spot, won't you? The little wife's got to eat, you know."

And, as I accommodated him, I was rewarded by the choicest one of those good-natured, unsophisticated grins, a grin which, I am convinced, come sunshine, come storms and foul weather, will never rub off.

"WON'T you come and eat with us?" he begged, pocketing the five. "She's waiting for me—in there." He pointed over my shoulder toward the restaurant. "And I guess she's—hungry. You won't come? I'm sorry. Well, so long, then." He gripped my hand and walked past me toward the eating house. "And good luck to you!" He turned to look for a second at me over his shoulder.

"We'll strike it next time," he added cheerfully, "we'll sure strike it next time!"

And so he vanished into Davenport's.

Movies That Make Trouble

Spaniards and Spanish-Americans have heaped criticism upon motion pictures supposed to depict life in their countries. The way a Hollywood "senorita" drapes her shawl throws audiences into hysterics in Madrid and Valparaiso. There is one correct way to wear a shawl and one actress, at least, who knows how to wear it. "Senoritas" who wish to appear bona fide might study Cinecastress Dolores Del Rio.

Not only does the "senorita" wear her shawl badly; she behaves badly. She is frequently shown going about alone, sometimes even to keep a tryst with her lover, enjoying a degree of freedom unheard of in Spanish countries.

Of course, the State Department would not wish to insinuate that American producers should hie themselves to Europe every time a "foreign movie" is to be filmed. Reconstructing London, Cairo and Bagdad in Hollywood is less expensive and does well enough.

However, it is the unofficial opinion of some diplomatic savants, who have watched the foreigner's reaction to some of these films, that the pictures would go over a deal better if they were more genuine.

though there was a Yosemite avenue. And then he found that No. 3707 was a vacant lot. But this discovery, contrary to what one might think at first, was actually encouraging, for it showed that Dr. Campbell was probably familiar with that neighborhood, or else he would hardly have been able to pick so neatly a vacant lot for his address. As a matter of fact, this was Dr. Campbell's one little blunder in what otherwise might have been a perfect crime, for Wagner made inquiries in the neighborhood and discovered that a man named H. C. Campbell had formerly lived at No. 3705 Yosemite—next door to the vacant lot! Wagner traced H. C. Campbell to Westfield, New Jersey, and from there to an apartment house in Elizabeth, where Wagner learned that the man was still living with a wife and three daughters.

On the night of April 11, when returning from New York City, H. Colin Campbell walked into the arms of detectives waiting for him at his front door. He immediately confessed the crime, and in his pocket was found a .32-caliber pistol, the one, he said, with which he had committed the murder, and which he would have used to kill himself had he known of his imminent arrest.

Campbell admitted marrying the woman bigamously in order to get her savings, after having got into communication with her through a Detroit matrimonial agency. After the marriage she returned to Greenville while he was supposed to be preparing a home for her. She met him again and was ostensibly on her way to their new home when he killed her.

Real cleanliness is the greatest beauty secret!

What is it that puts high-lights in your hair . . . glints of gold or copper? What is it that gives your skin the vivid pinkness that even great painters find difficult to get on canvas? What is it that transforms the simplest summer frock . . . makes it charming?

The answer, of course, is real cleanliness.

It isn't that we do not know these things. The question is, do we make use of this great aid to beauty as much as we might and should?

What doctors say about shampooing

The dryest hair is oily enough to catch the dirt that flies everywhere. As this grime kills hair lustre, why let it accumulate?

Authorities advise a thorough shampoo every two weeks . . . and oftener when a hair dressing is used, when you perspire freely, when your hair is, naturally oily, when in work or play your head is exposed to more dust and dirt than is usual. And remember, any good toilet soap is a good shampoo soap.

Don't fail, either, to wash your comb and brush thoroughly every few days.

Wash your face the only "best" way

The skin, also, is invisibly oily and dirt-catching . . . and water alone will not remove this film. Soap, the real cleanser, is needed.

Skin specialists say that creams and powders, when used as a substitute for soap and water, increase rather than lessen the possibility of blackheads and "shiny nose". They call soap and water "the most valuable agent we have for keeping the skin of the face normal and healthy".

Elbows, underwear and finger nails

Are your elbows dark and roughened? Then brush them every night with warm soapy water and see this unloveliness gradually disappear.

If you aren't able to manage as many professional manicures as you would like, soap-scrub your nails once a day with a stiff brush, and push the cuticle back with the towel while drying. You'll find that except for occasional shaping and polishing, little else is needed.

From stockings and underwear to dresses, scarfs, gloves, etc., there's only one safe rule about your clothing: anything that is doubtful is definitely too soiled to wear.

The kind of beauty called "elusive"

Other people know when we do and do not take baths. Other people know when the attention we give to cleanliness is the 100% and constant kind.

Isn't "daintiness" just another name for being clean? . . . and "elusive" beauty, probably mostly extra cleanliness? . . . of body, face, hands, hair, clothing, and all the many little details?

ON BEING PHOTOGRAPHED

Ode Written in Dejection.

P. G. Wodehouse.

IT IS not women on whom the hardships of photography fall most heavily. Women as a sex enjoy being photographed. It is second nature for them, on catching sight of a long-haired man in spectacles diving underneath a velvet nosebag, to assume an expression in which sweetness, dignity and spontaneity are so nicely blended that broken sentences of admiration and esteem filter through the velvet in an excited torrent.

Debutantes who have not undergone the ordeal since they were taken sitting on a cushion in the nude at the age of two need as little coaching as actresses who have played in every failure in the last sixteen seasons.

How different with Man! For some reason, never properly explained, the average man is overcome in the presence of a camera with an embarrassment that would be excessive if he were being arrested for forgery while eloping with another man's wife. He tries to cover it with a brooding gloom, which the photographer, who, being a man who makes a lot of money without doing any work for it, is an optimist, will not endure for a moment. The photographer advocates more sweetness and light, and suggests as a means toward achieving these things the moistening of the lips with the tip of the tongue.

To a thoughtful man like myself, it is one of the most moving phenomena in our daily life, this pathetic faith of the photographer in the moistening of the lips with the tip of the tongue as a panacea for all human ills. He seems to think that no mundane sorrow can stand up against it.

I often wonder if he carries the hallucination into his private life. I seem to see him trying to cheer up some friend whom Fate has smitten with a half-brick in a tender spot. "Your wife, Cuthbert, has run away, you say, and, what is worse, in the automobile on which you are still paying instalments? What of it? Moisten the lips with the tip of the tongue and be your old merry self once more." He cannot admit that Hamlet and King Lear are to be pitied for their misfortunes. They wilfully omitted to moisten the lips with the tip of the tongue.

THE introduction of high art into the photographic studio has done much to reduce the lasting unpleasantness of the operation. In the old days of crude and direct posing there was no escape for the sitter. He had to stand up, backed by a rustic stile and a flabby canvas sheet covered with exotic trees, glaring straight into the camera, full face. To prevent any eleventh-hour retreat, a sort of spiky thing was shoved firmly into the back of his head—leaving him with the choice of being taken as he stood or having three inches of steel jabbed into his cerebellum.

What with the natural discomfort of being photographed and the acute apprehension caused by the presence of this piece of metal, the patient, despite the hoarse cries of encouragement that proceeded from the nosebag, almost invariably came out looking like a sheep which has just caught sight of the stockyards. But now High Art has come along and changed all that.

There are no photographs nowadays. Only "camera portraits" and "lens impressions." The full face has been abolished. The ideal of the modern photographer is to eliminate the sitter as much as possible and concentrate his energies on an artistic background. I have in my possession two studies of my Uncle Theodore, the well-known importer of Swiss Cheese holes—one taken in 1890, the other in the present year.

The first shows my uncle, evidently in pain, staring before him with the fixed expression of one about to burst. In his right hand he grasps a scroll; his left rests heavily on a moss-covered wall. Behind him is the ocean. Two sea-gulls are flying against a stormy sky. As a likeness, it is almost brutally exact. My uncle stands condemned forever on its evidence as the wearer of a made-up tie.

The second is different in every respect. Not only has the sitter been taken in the popular modern "one-twentieth face," showing only the back of his head, the left ear, and what is either the tip of his nose or a flaw in the print, but the whole thing is plunged in the deepest shadow. It is as if my uncle had been surprised by the camera while chasing a black cat in his coal cellar on a moonless night. There is no question as to which of the two makes the more attractive picture.

Indeed, I have reason to believe that it was my somewhat injudiciously expressed enthusiasm for the superiority in beauty of the more recent production that led to my exclusion from my uncle's will in favor of certain charities. In spite of this, however, I have always remained a warm advocate of the deep shadows of the present type of camera portrait, in which so much that is unsightly is enabled to lie hid.

Imagine his delight on realizing that he was being shot, not photographed.

What might be described as the frontal attack in photography—outside of the machine-gun fire of the family movie camera—is that merciless onslaught which gives the victim no chance of escape, and which is confined today principally to the amateur bulb-squeezer. I have only come across one instance of an amateur photographer who gave any evidence of having bowels of compassion, and that was in a work of fiction. I allude to the principal character in a sensational novel entitled "The Camera Fiend," whose habit it was to point what appeared to be a camera at his acquaintances, and who then, instead of taking their photographs, shot them—his weapon being in reality a disguised pistol.

One can readily imagine the delight of the party of the second part on receiving a bullet between the eyes and realizing that he was not having an amateur photograph of himself taken after all.

It has always seemed to me a pity that, in the matter of the discovery of photography and its infliction on a world that had already troubles enough of its own, it is almost impossible to fix the responsibility. That is the worst of the encyclopedia. You go to it to be informed on some such important point, and it comes back at you with this: "K. W. Scheele was the first to investigate the darkening action of sunlight on silver chloride. He found that when silver chloride was exposed to the action of light beneath water there was dissolved in the fluid a substance that, on the addition of lunar caustic, caused the precipitation of new silver chloride; and that on applying a solution of ammonia to the blackened chloride an insoluble residue of metallic silver was left behind."

YOU cannot possibly condemn a man for a serious offense like the invention of photography on rambling evidence like that. There is nothing to show whether Mr. Scheele was or was not the man who started the train of events that ended last week in our facing a forty-two centimeter camera with a frozen smile on our lips and having to pay sixty dollars to Jesse James' younger brother for mailing us some perfectly repulsive things that he tried to persuade us were faithful representations of ourself, though they had every indication of having been borrowed or stolen from the police headquarters rogues' gallery.

For all we know, the late Scheele, when fooling about with the blackened chloride and the residue of metallic silver, had not a notion of what was going to come of it. He may not have had even a suspicion that many years later his investigations were to be responsible for causing a musical comedy star to rise at four-thirty in the morning and reduce her mid-day meal to a mere five-minute snack in order to crowd her daily dealings with the camera into the space of twenty-four hours. It is, I believe, the case that on one occasion such a woman, on learning that there was some danger of a shortage of her photographs owing to the growing demand, sat before the lens without a pause for a period of two days and a night, sustained only by her indomitable spirit and hourly injections of clear soup from a hypodermic syringe.

It is the custom with many unthinking persons to extol the blessings of what are erroneously called the good old days. One has only to reflect that in those old days it was the almost universal practice of hosts to deposit their guests in a chair after dinner, and, having done so, to produce two or three bulky albums filled with photographs of the family and its connections, to experience a live sense of gratitude to Providence for having sent one into the world in a more civilized epoch.

Little more remains to be said on this absorbing subject. If I have seemed to write in a jaundiced and condemnatory spirit of photographs, let me end on a note of kindliness and praise.

Say what we may against photographs, they remain—I speak now of the cabinet size—the best paper-cutters in existence. And let us never forget that, if there were no photographs, there would be no photographic frames, and where would we turn then for an adequate yet inexpensive birthday, wedding, or Christmas present for our wide circle of friends?

Tender Hair requires gentler waving

HAIR made sensitive by sun, by frequent shampoos and beautifying rinses, requires gentler waving. Its tender texture would break and burn under the rigor of hot irons, harsh chemicals, and baking processes.

The Eugène Method of Permanent Waving—the most considerate of them all—persuades tender hair into lovely undulations without jeopardizing its soft, luminous texture, or its natural color.

Needless to say, strong hair welcomes this kindly method of waving, too. And you, yourself, are grateful for the gentle method which has changed permanent waving from a strenuous ordeal to a pleasant luxury—a blessing on your head and you!

The Eugène Sachet is the Secret

These patented Sachets, used by genuine Eugène Wavers, are gentle because they contain gentle waving materials. Their potent effect comes from confining, conserving and concentrating tiny jets of controlled steam directly on the hair.

Take a look at the picture. Note the little perforations in the steam tab of the Eugène Sachet.

From these perforations come tiny jets of steam, where, when and as the operator desires—always under control.

Be sure your waver uses Genuine Eugène Sachets—26 to 40 of them for each wave or rewave. You will recognize the genuine by the Eugène trade-mark stamped boldly on each sachet. Eugène, Ltd., 565 Fifth Ave., New York City. England, France, Germany, Australia.

Unlike other polishes, Johnson's Wax is non-oily and does not soil fine linens or collect dust. It is as dry as a plate in all weather. People of taste prefer its soft, mellow lustre to shiny, greasy polishes. Forming a hard, armour-like film, it guards against scratches, scuffs, water spots, and heat marks.

Take-a-Picture Week BEGINS TODAY

—a week set aside by the Photo Finishers of the country to call your attention to the finest picture opportunities of the year.

IF anyone should ask you, "Have you enough snapshots of your children and family and friends?", you'd probably say, "No, not nearly enough. Why don't I take more? Well, I probably would if I only had someone to remind me."

Take-a-Picture Week is a coast-to-coast reminder. It comes at just the right time, too, for at this season of the year picture opportunities beckon to us on every hand. All Nature smiles . . . bright skies, long days, and balmy air . . . no wonder faces glow with a new cheerfulness.

But besides reminding you of the pictures you mean to take, but so far haven't, besides calling attention to the most appealing time of the entire year for snapshots, Take-a-Picture Week of 1929 spotlights an additional opportunity.

An Extra Golden Opportunity

While there are only twelve days more in which to take pictures for the Eastman $30,000 prize contest, these twelve days are obviously the best of the entire three months during which the competition is being conducted. Whether you have already sent in some entries, or have as yet failed to take advantage of this chance to win one of the 1,223 cash awards, get your camera out at once and enter the resulting snapshots. You are entitled to submit as many as you like, and the more you submit, the better your chances of winning. You can obtain information about the contest, as well as entry blanks, by asking the dealer from whom you buy your Kodak Film, or by writing to us. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, New York.

THE ARISTOCRATS OF TOILETRIES

The alluring toiletries which I now introduce to you were originally for my especial use. Regardless of the price you are willing to pay, nothing finer can be produced.

There is a smart, intimate little Lipstick that you will love the moment you catch sight of it. There is Face Powder, the product of a formula evolved seventy-five years ago for French and British royalty—with a downy-soft velour puff. There are Compacts—Double and Triple—which, when opened, expose their entire contents to view—a very practical feature. My Double Compact contains Powder, a rouge of utmost smoothness and a non-tarnishable mirror of shining metal. The Triple Compact includes a petite Lipstick.

And there is a Perfume gaily oriental, luxurious, witchingly seductive, irresistibly fragrant, in a rich blue-and-silver crystal flask, encased in a gorgeous silken receptacle. All of my toiletries are scented with this same arresting fragrance; and all of my containers are in the same original blue-and-silver motif that distinguishes my Perfume.

You must try Lucretia Vanderbilt Toiletries! Just present the coupon, with 25 cents, at the toilet goods counter displaying my announcement, and you will be given a miniature presentation in which you will find Perfume and Powder Compact (in your favorite shade).

If perchance you do not obtain one, mail your coupon and 25¢ to Lucretia Vanderbilt, Fairfield, Conn., giving your dealer's name.
